79 KINGS OF MACEDON. Alexander III 'the Great' (336-323 BC). GOLD Stater. Kalchedon. Obv: Head of Athena right, wearing crested Corinthian helmet decorated with serpent. Rev: ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ. Nike standing left, holding wreath and stylis. Controls: Monogram in left field and below right wing. Price 910 (Kallatis). Already with Philip II the occupation of the Mount Pangaion region with its rich gold mines had made possible the abundant emission of gold coins, something that until then had been throughout Greece rather rare and linked to extraordinary circumstances or moments of crisis. Alexander, who imposed a single coinage throughout his vast empire, was able to issue States and their fractions in gold, using the Attic weight as the unit of measure. On the Staters the head of the goddess Athena with Corinthian helmet was depicted on the obverse, while a winged Nike was reproduced on the reverse. On silver tetradrachms, on the other hand, the head of Herakles with lion skin was depicted on the obverse and Zeus seated on a throne on the reverse (Phidian model). Toward the end of his reign there is an assimilation of the ruler with Herakles. The practice, derived from the Eastern world of reproducing the portrait of the ruler on the coin, represents a change with Alexander's coinage. But as if the human figure did not dare to suddenly replace that of the gods, the image is clothed with religious content, through its deification or identification with the deity. Even after his death for a long time Tetradrachms with the effigy of Alexander continued to be issued by his successors. The Macedonian king had the possibility to exploit for his coinage a large amount of precious metal from the vast empire he had conquered. The extremely rich mines scattered throughout this territory also made his successors self-sufficient.. The coin from that time became a symbol of the ruler's power and absolute authority; no longer protected by the image of deities, it became an instrument of propaganda and power. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 8.45 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

Among the Greek poleis, Athens is undoubtedly the city that denotes the greatest monetary development. The earliest coinage followed the reforms attributed to Solon on the introduction of Attic weights to replace the Eginetic ones. These early coins, called "Wappenmünzen," were replaced by the "owls" at the end of the 6th century: tetradrachms marked with the head of Athena and the owl, next to which is now the ethnic of the Athenians. These types will last, with variations in style, until the end of silver production (c. mid-1st century). The most noticeable change occurs with the so-called "new style," established from the beginning of the 2nd century BC. In these issues the owl is surrounded by an olive wreath, which is why the tetradrachms are referred to in the inscriptions as "stephanephoroi" (= wreath bearers). Coins of new style also bear inscriptions with the names of magistrates. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 16.81 g. Diameter: 27 mm.

298 KINGS OF ARMENIA MINOR. Aristobulus, with Salome (54-92). Silvered Ae or Billon. Dated RY 13 (AD 66/7). Obv: ΒΑCΙΛΕΩC ΑΡΙCΤΟΒΟΥΛΟΥ ΕΤ ΙΓ. Diademed and draped bust of Aristobulus left. Rev: ΒΑCΙΛΙCCΗC CΑΛΟΜΗC. Diademed and draped bust of Salome left. RPC I 3840; Kovacs 300; Hendin 1257a. Rare Salome, daughter of Herod II and Herodias, is famous for the dance she performed during Herod Antipas' banquet. The incestuous and adulterous love between Herod and Herodias was denounced as shameful by the preacher and moralist John the Baptist. Herod had him imprisoned to silence these insinuations, but he kept postponing the death sentence that Herodias demanded. The woman then decided to use her daughter and the interest that Herod Antipas showed in her. During the king's birthday feast, Salome performed a sensual dance that so pleased the birthday celebrant that he promised the girl he would grant her any wish. Salome then, on her mother's advice, asked for John the Baptist's head on a platter. The sentence was executed and the prophet's head was delivered to Herodias. She later became queen of Lesser Armenia by marrying Aristobulus of Chalcis, her cousin, with whom she had three children. According to Christian legend, Salome died while crossing a frozen river: the ice broke, the woman fell in, and the ice closed back together, decapitating her. The story of Salome has inspired numerous literary, musical, and film productions. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 4.21 g. Diameter: 29 mm.

371 AUGUSTUS (27 BC-14 AD). GOLD Aureus. Uncertain mint in Spain, possibly Colonia Patricia. Obv: Bare head right. Rev: AVGVSTVS. Capricorn right, with globus attached to rudder between hooves; cornucopia above. RIC² 125; Calicó 164. Certified by NGC 8538541-001. Described as "Repaired" which we don´t accept as a correct assessment. Part of the dies have been recut / repaired. For a coin with a smilar coin modification see Gorny & Mosch 289/728. This coin is part of a series celebrating the return of the standards lost by Crassus' legions in the terrible defeat at Carrhae in 53 BC. For the Romans, the legionary standards were not simply banners, but very important symbols. For this reason, Augustus sought to recover them, to erase the shame of defeat and deliver revenge to the people. In 23 BC, he met the embassy of Phraates IV in Rome for the first time. The Parthian ruler demanded the return of his son, who was being held hostage by Augustus, and of Tiridates II, his predecessor who had been dethroned and had taken refuge with the Romans. No agreement was reached, so Augustus planned a military campaign in the East to recover the standards and place a pro-Roman king on the throne of Armenia, another bone of contention between the two enemies. When the Roman army landed in the Balkans in 20 BC under the command of Tiberius, Phraates IV decided not to enter into conflict and agreed to return the insignia. These were sent back to Rome and the emperor celebrated the event by striking a series of coins usually bearing the inscription ‘SIGNIS RECEPTIS’ (=the insignia recovered) or an abbreviation on the reverse. In the case of this aureus, only the name of the emperor appears, who, with the same issue, also celebrates Capricorn. According to Suetonius, Augustus made it his personal emblem, using it as a symbol of his imperial destiny, even though he was born on September 23 and his zodiac sign was actually another. Capricorn can be considered the emblematic representation of the terrestrial sphere, as it embodies the nature of earth and water and can therefore be seen as a positive omen of power over the lands of the Empire, both those already acquired and those yet to be conquered. In fact, the globe (earth) and the rudder (water) appear between its legs in the iconography. The symbol appears in numerous works and is universally remembered as the unmistakable symbol of Augustus; it appears on the famous Gemma Augustea and was also linked to legions he re-founded or created, like the Legio Secunda Augusta. Livia (as Pax) seated right on throne, holding sceptre and olive branch. RIC² 26. Double strike is a rather common minting error in Roman coinage. Before being minted, the flan was heated to make it more workable. One of the two dies was secured to the anvil with a fixed support. The ‘suppostor’ used tongs to place the marked flan on top of it, then placed the other die on top, which was finally struck by a large hammer wielded by the ‘malleator’. Often, more than one hammer blow was needed to imprint the images on the coin, which explains some minting errors such as double striking, which occurred when the hammer blow was not precise and the flan slipped sideways. This resulted in a coin with one side duplicated. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 3.43 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

Garlanded Temple of Janus with closed doors to left and latticed windows to right. RIC² 268 (bust with aegis). The building depicted on the reverse is the oldest sanctuary of Janus, located in the Roman Forum; it consisted of an arch with two entrances and housed a statue of the god at the centre of the doorway. To date, no remains of the temple have been found and its exact location is unknown; its appearance is known mainly from coins. The temple was closed during periods of peace, as was the case during the reigns of Augustus and Nero. According to Suetonius, it was closed three times in quick succession under Nero, because peace had been established on land and at sea (as the legend on the reverse of this sestertius indicates). The emperor celebrated the occasion by bringing a laurel wreath to the Capitoline Hill and closed the Temple of Janus as if there were no more wars to be fought. The temple was opened for the last time during the reign of Gordian III, before his departure for a military campaign against the Sasanians in 242. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 26.97 g. 461 JULIA TITI (Augusta, 79-90/1). Dupondius. Rome. Obv: IVLIA IMP T AVG F AVGVSTA. Draped bust right. Rev: S - C / VESTA. Vesta seated left, holding palladium and sceptre. RIC² 398 (Titus). Flavia Julia Augusta, known as Iulia Titi, was the only daughter of Emperor Titus and his second wife Marcia Furnilla. Very little is known about her, except that when she was still a child she was presented as the future successor of the Flavian dynasty, since her father, after his second divorce, had not taken another wife and the other women of the family (Domitilla Major and Domitilla Minor) had already died. When Titus came to power, Julia was given the title of Augusta, which was usually attributed to the emperor's wife. Titus proposed to his brother Domitian to marry Julia, but Domitian refused because he was in love with Domitia Longina. Julia therefore married her cousin, Titus Flavius Sabinus. Upon the death of his father (AD 81), Domitian became emperor and, after repudiating Domitia on suspicion of adultery, it seems that he began a relationship with Julia and had Sabinus killed. Julia died in abortion in 90, precluding her from providing an heir to the emperor. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 14.4 g. Diameter: 28 mm.

577 HADRIAN (117-138). GOLD Aureus. Rome. Obv: HADRIANVS AVGVSTVS. Laureate bust right, with slight drapery. Rev: COS III. Hadrian riding horse right, raising right hand. RIC² 781; Calicó 1215a. Hadrian was born in Italica or Rome in 76 AD to an influential family; his grandfather had been a member of the senate. Having soon been orphaned, Hadrian was entrusted to his cousin Trajan, who acted as his tutor and granted him in marriage one of his great-granddaughters, Sabina, in 100 AD. It was therefore quite natural that on Trajan's death Hadrian should succeed him, although he had never adopted him. In fact at the prince's death the senate received letters from Trajan mentioning Hadrian's adoption, but according to Cassius Dio they were signed by his widow Plotina. Probably Lucius Licinius Sura, his future and greatest general, also made great efforts for Trajan to consider Hadrian's candidacy. Hadrian is remembered as a literate monarch, a lover of Greek letters and neosophistic philosophy. The new emperor had a very different political conception from that of his predecessor, beginning with the renouncing of the expansionism so much desired by Trajan in order to focus more on the defense of imperial borders, as evidenced by the construction of Hadrian's Wall. His reign was also marked by the travels he embarked on between 121 and 132, a way of learning about and expressing respect for every corner of the empire. Indeed, he visited numerous regions and garrisons, reserving special interest for the armies and the discipline of the soldiers. Despite his efforts to avoid any armed conflict, Hadrian had to deal with a Jewish revolt that erupted because he had renamed Jerusalem as the Colonia Aelia Capitolina, after his family name, for having a temple dedicated to Jupiter Capitolinus erected there and for forbidding circumcision, a custom he perceived as barbaric, despite not being hostile to Judaism. The revolt was very bloody and led by Simon bar Kochba, who lost his life in the last battle. In internal politics Hadrian gave his best, eliminating unnecessary expenses and undertaking magnificent public works, not only in Rome. He also asked his jurists to collect all edicts that would ensure greater justice for the weaker, but went to the disadvantage of the Senate, which responded with conspiracies. Hadrian managed to escape these attempts and sent all the conspirators to death, earning himself a very bad reputation. For this he publicly apologized and engaged in a series of food concessions to the people, forgave a huge amount of debt, and promised not to use any more violence against the senators. Promise that he did not

Saeculum Frugiferum is linked to the concept of eternity and the idea of 'renovatio'. A bearer of peace and justice, symbolizing the idea of a better order of the universe and the return of the Golden Age, it played a strong role in political propaganda. The Saeculum Frugiferum o 'Saeculum Aureum' is the figurative representation of the idea of time renewing itself eternally, presiding over the regular succession of Seasons, bearer of annual fruits and harvests, making itself the guarantor of an era of universal prosperity. On the coins of Clodius Albinus and Septimius Severus, he is depicted as a naked youth, equipped with the symbols of cosmic power and fertility, according to an iconography that recalls the Ba'al-Saturn of the Punic pantheon worshipped in Africa. Jupiter standing left, holding thunderbolt and long sceptre; to left, small figure of emperor standing left, holding globe. RIC 8; Calicó 3199. Born to a daughter of Gordian I, sister of Gordian II, because of the young age at which he came to occupy the throne (13), Gordian did not rule directly, but the Senate did so for him. Gordian had become prince because the Senate needed to placate an uprising of the traditionalist urban plebs, bound to the dynastic ideal, and in order to take advantage of his family's wealth. Moreover, the praetorians had acclaimed him emperor just to show the Senate that they were the ones who decided who to put on the throne. Among the first moves was the dismissal of the legion in Africa because it had supported Capellianus and led to the deaths of Gordian I and II, who were deified. During his relatively long tenure there were several problems to deal with. In 240 Sabinianus, elected caesar in Carthage, prepared to make war on him, but was stopped by the governor of Mauretania. In the north the barbarians were making constant raids and sacking villages and towns. Gordian was too young to face these problems, but fortunately for him he could count on the diplomatic and military skill of Timesitheus, who had become prefect of the praetorium and granted him his daughter, Tranquillina, in marriage in 241. Rome succeeded in repelling the Persians of Shapur I in 243 thanks to Timesitheus, but on his death he was replaced as prefect of the praetorium by Marcus Julius Philip known as 'the Arab'. The latter, however, was not satisfied with this title but aimed at the throne, and he convinced the army that they needed an adult prince and not a boy. Gordian showed maturity and offered to cede the throne to Philip and become his caesar, but he was killed in 244. The Senate was informed that he had died of wounds sustained in a battle against the Persians. His body was sent to Rome where he was deified. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.80 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

Valentinian standing facing, head right, holding labarum with cross on banner and Victory on globe. RIC 3d.2; Depeyrot 20/2. Flavius Julius Valens was the younger brother of Valentinian I. After serving as protector domesticus (personal guard) of Julian II and Jovian, he immediately became emperor of the East in 364 thanks to his brother who was already Augustus of the West, although the two differed in faith. Valens in fact was an Arian, while Valentinian was a Nicene Christian. The first problem was presented by the usurper Procopius, comes of Antioch, who proclaimed himself Augustus of the East in 365. Valens defeated him, sentenced him to death and struck with damnatio memoriae. He later faced the Visigoths and a second conspiracy, hatched by Theodore of Antioch. In 374 Valens celebrated the decennalia and became Maximus Augustus in 375 on the death of his brother, after which he organized an expedition against the Persians that proved unsuccessful, forcing him to sign an unfavorable peace. Another problem was the confluence of Ostrogoths and Visigoths into Roman territory across the Danube because of the advance of the Huns. The Romans were forced to accept them, but this integration was not easy; the Visigoths felt oppressed and exploited as a labor-power, resulting in an insurrection. Valens, considered a general of little ability by his contemporaries, was thus induced to recruit Goth mercenaries, with the risk that they would end up allied with his enemies. In fact, a large contingent of Visigoths, Ostrogoths, Huns, and Alamanni joined forces to fight the Romans and achieved a decisive victory at Hadrianopolis (Thrace) in 378. The tremendous defeat was caused by Gratian, who was meanwhile on the Western throne and did not arrive in time with his troops. Valens died in the battle but the Goths failed to conquer Constantinople. According to Ambrose, bishop of Mediolanum, the defeat at Hadrianopolis heralded the fall of the empire and the end of the world. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.46 g. Diameter: 22 mm.

Concordia, with foot set upon eagle-headed prow, seated facing on leonine throne, head right, holding sceptre and globus. RIC 45d.9; Depeyrot 33/3. Theodosius I, called "the Great" by Christian writers, was of Spanish origin. His father was a magister equitum who fell into disgrace under Valentinian I and was later executed by Gratian. However, Theodosius' military exploits in Britain against the Alamanni and Sarmati, and in Africa against the usurper Firmus, induced Gratian to elevate him to the rank of Augustus of the East in 379, to give him control of Thrace, Dacia and Macedonia. Theodosius managed to prevent another war against the Huns and Visigoths by signing an agreement in 382, allowing them to settle in Thrace on condition that they fight for him. The need to pay these mercenaries caused a considerable tax increase for the Romans, but it proved to be a successful move. Upon Gratian's death, the usurper of Britain, Magnus Maximus, marched into Italy and threatened the throne of Valentinian II. Theodosius married Valentinian II's sister, Galla, and succeeded in defeating Magnus Maximus in 388 with troops from the Visigoths and Huns. Another threat, however, was posed by Arbogaste, a Frankish general, who was able to put Eugenius on the Western throne instead of Valentinian II. Theodosius refused to recognize his position and appointed his son, Honorius, as Augustus of the West, inducing Eugenius to invade Italy and start a war. Eugenius and Arbogaste were defeated at the Frigidus River in 394, and Theodosius became sole Augustus of the entire empire, but he died shortly thereafter in Mediolanum. His funeral was celebrated by Bishop Ambrose, and the body was transported to Constantinople, where the consecratio took place. Theodosius is remembered as a fervent believer in the Nicene faith and for issuing the Edict of Thessalonica, by which he attempted to end theological disputes. He also made Christianity the sole state religion in 380, declaring Arians and devotees of other movements heretics. In 392 he banned the pagan religion. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.48 g. Anastasius was nicknamed ‘dikoros’ (=two pupils) because of the different color of his eyes. When Zeno died, since he had no living heirs, his widow Ariadne had the difficult choice of appointing a successor to the people, who demanded an orthodox emperor. Ariadne eventually chose Anastasius, about whom we only know that he was a palace official, responsible for maintaining silence during important sacred ceremonies. After Zeno's funeral, Anastasius received the crown from the patriarch, was acclaimed augustus by the crowd in 491, and married Ariadne to legitimize the succession. His main task was to restore Constantinople's finances, which had been severely affected during his predecessor's reign. He managed to balance the budget despite a policy of tax relief, making the people pay less tax, but in cash rather than in kind. This favored the cities but was to the detriment of the people living in the countryside, and in fact many revolts broke out in rural areas. He also revolutionized the tax collection system by introducing the ‘vindices’ and encouraged the return of copper folles, which began to circulate again with a precise value ratio to the gold solidus. Anastasius demonstrated wisdom and competence, and the Byzantine Empire flourished once again. A great amount of money flowed into the state treasury, which favored the work of his successors, particularly Justinian I. With regard to foreign policy, Anastasius reached an agreement with Theodoric, king of the Roman-Barbarian kingdom in Italy, promoting trade that benefited both kingdoms. Despite his undeniable qualities as an administrator, Anastasius was constantly threatened by intrigues and uprisings. He was also engaged in a long war against the Persians (502-506), which ended with a peace treaty and the construction of the Anastasian Wall to defend Constantinople along the Propontis and the Black Sea. However, the internal situation was more delicate. The emperor was not orthodox, as the people had asked Ariadne, but a convinced Monophysite, and he attracted much dissent, partly because he contributed to distancing the Eastern Church from that of Rome by interfering in the nomination of the new pope. The discontent led to a civil war (513-515) with the insurrection of Vitalian at the head of the Isaurians, who was eventually defeated by the general Marinus of
