Rev.: + / TOVP / MAP / XOY; Cypress trees to left and right, all within wreath border. Konstantopoulos, Athens, 231; cf. Zacos/Veglery 899, Seibt, BBÖ 1, 135, Berlin I 169 and No. 819 of present auction, for a seal type of the same individual bearing the higher rank of patrikios, also with cypress trees. It is very probable that both seal types of "Konon" belong to the future emperor Leo III. Leo, who had the birth name of Konon, made himself a good military career, and according to the sources he was strategos of Anatolikon before he ascended to the purple. The military office just before strategos (general of a 'thema') was tourmarches (a 'thema' consisted of four 'tourmai'). Byzantine lead seal of Niketas imperial spatharios and strategos of Kibyrraioton (9th cent.) Obv.: Invocative cruciform monogram inscribed in the corners, ΘΕΟΤΟΚΕ ΒΟΗΘΕΙ ΤΩ ΚΩ ΔΟΥΛΩ (Mother of God help your servant), wreath border. Rev.: Inscription in 5 lines, =ΝΙΚΗ/ΤΑΒ(ΑCΙ)Λ(ΙΚΩ)C/Π(ΑΘΑΡΙΩ)Κ(ΑΙ)CΤΡΑΤ/ΙΓ(Ω)ΤΩΝΚΙ/ΒΥΡΡΕΩ(ΤΩΝ) (Niketas imperial spatharios and strategos of Kibyrraioton). Comments: The Cibyrhaeot Theme, more properly the Theme of the Cibyrhaeots (Greek: θέμα Κιβυρραιωτῶν, romanized: thema Kibyrhaiōtōn), was a Byzantine theme encompassing the southern coast of Asia Minor from the early 8th to the late 12th centuries. As the Byzantine Empire's first and most important naval theme (θέμα ναυτικόν, thema nautikon), it served chiefly to provide ships and troops for the Byzantine navy. The Cibyrhaeots (Greek: Κιβυρραιῶται, romanized: Kibyrhaiōtai, "men of Cibyrha") derive their name from the city of Cibyrha (it is unclear whether this is Cibyrha the Great in Caria or Cibyrha the Lesser in Pamphylia). The command first appears in the expedition against Carthage in 698, when a "droungarios of the Cibyrhaeots" is attested as commanding the men from Korykos: Apsimar, who at the head of a fleet revolt became emperor as Tiberios III (r. 698–705). At the time, the Cibyrhaeots were subordinate to the great naval corps of the Karabisianoi. After the Karabisianoi were disbanded (the exact date is disputed between c. 719/720 and c. 727), the Cibyrhaeots were constituted as a regular theme, with its governing strategos first attested in 731/732. Until the 9th century, when the themes of the Aegean Sea and Samos were elevated from droungarios-level commands, the Cibyrhaeot Theme was the only dedicated naval theme of the Empire. The theme encompassed the southern coast of Asia Minor (modern Turkey), from south of Miletus (which belonged to the Thracasian Theme) to the confines of the Arab borderlands in Cilicia, including the old Roman provinces of Caria, Lycia, Pamphylia and parts of Isauria, as well as the modern Dodecanese. Its geographical position made it the "front-line" theme facing the attacks of the Muslim fleets of the Levant and Egypt, and consequently the Cibyrhaeots played a major role in the naval aspect of the Byzantine–Arab Wars. The land, which was known for its fertility, suffered from the frequent and devastating Arab raids, which largely depopulated the countryside except for the fortified cities and naval bases. The seat of the strategos was most probably Attaleia. He drew an annual salary of 10 pounds of gold, and his overall rank in the imperial hierarchy was relatively low, but still senior to any other naval commander: twenty-fifth in the Taktikon Uspensky of 842/843, dropping to fifty-fifth in the Escorial Taktikon of 971–975. Like its other counterparts, the Cibyrhaeot Theme was divided into droungoi and tourmai, and possessed the full array of typical thematic administrative positions. Among the most important subordinates of the strategos were the imperial ek prosopou at Syllaion, the droungarioi of Attaleia and Kos and the katepano who commanded the theme's Mardaite. These were the descendants of several thousand people transplanted from the area of Lebanon and settled there by Emperor Justinian II (r. 685–695 and 705–711) in the 680s to provide crews and marines for the fleet. In the early 9th century, the thematic fleet of the Cibyrhaeots comprised 70 ships; and in the Cretan expedition of 911, the Cibyrhaeot theme sent 31 warships – 15 large dromons and 16 middle-sized pamphyloi – with 6,000 oarsmen and 760 marines. Around the mid-11th century, as the Muslim naval threat subsided, the Byzantine provincial fleets began a precipitate decline: the fleet of the Cibyrhaeots is last mentioned in the repulsion of a Rus' raid in 1043, and the theme became a purely civil province, headed by a krites and later by a doux. Most of its territory was lost to the Seljuk Turks after 1071, but partly recovered under Alexios I Komnenos (r. 1081–1118). The rump theme was finally abolished by Manuel I Komnenos (r. 1143–1180), and the remaining territory in Caria subordinated to the theme Mylasa and Melanoudion. Byzantine lead seal of Sergios patrikios and katepano of Mesopotamia (11th cent.). Obv.: Bust of saint martyr Theodore, facial, nimbate, holding spear and shield, sigla, [O]AΓIO(C)-ΘΕΟΔΩΡ(OC) (Saint Theodore), all within dotted border. Rev.: Inscription in 5 lines, +C[EP]/ΓΙΟΣΠΑΤ[ΡΙ]/Κ(ΙOC)SKATEΠΑ/Ν(Ω)ΜΕCΟΠΟ/ΤΑΜΙΑC = Σέργιος πατρίκιος καὶ κατεπάνω Μεσσοποταμίας (Sergios patrikios and katepano of Mesopotamia). Comments: Mesopotamia (Greek: Μεσσοποταμία) was the name of a Byzantine theme (a military-civilian province) located in what is today eastern Turkey. It should not be confused with the region of Mesopotamia or with the older Roman and early Byzantine province of Mesopotamia. The Byzantine theme was located between the rivers Arsianias (modern Murat) and Çimisgezek. The theme was formed probably between 899 and 911, when Emperor Leo VI the Wise (r. 886–912) appointed the former strategos of the Charsianon, named Orestes, as its governor. Most of the province was formed out the Armenian principality of Takis, ruled by the chieftain Manuel. Manuel and his four sons were persuaded to cede their territory to the Byzantine Empire in exchange for titles and estates in other themes. The Armenian-populated districts of Keltzene (detached from the theme of Chaldia) and Kamacha (part of the theme of Koloneia) were then joined to it to form the new theme. Although Emperor Constantine VII Porphyrogennetos (r. 913–959) mentions that before its elevation to a theme, the region was an "unnamed kleisoura", there is evidence of much earlier administrative structures than that. A seal of a "spatharios and strategos of Mesopotamia" has been dated to c. 810, perhaps indicating the existence of a first short-lived theme there, and a seal of a tourmarches with the Armenian name Mousilikis, is tentatively dated to c. 870. It is thus possible that Mesopotamia was constituted in the late 9th century out of an Armenian principality as a division (tourma) of some neighbouring theme, with its prince receiving a Byzantine title and continuing to govern it, before it was expanded into a full theme. This may also explain the peculiar custom of its strategos drawing, until 911, his salary not from the imperial treasury but from the customs proceeds of the kommerkion of his province. Commanders of the theme continued to be appointed throughout the 10th century, co-existing with the new post of "doux of Mesopotamia", established c. 975. Unlike the strategos, the doux was a regional commander, controlling the central sector of Byzantium's eastern frontier. In the 11th century, most of the attested doukes of Mesopotamia were Armenians, including Gregory Magistros and his son. In the aftermath of the Battle of Manzikert in 1071, Emperor Michael VII Doukas (r. 1071–1078) tried to re-establish Byzantine authority, but the province fell to the Seljuk Turks. 819		Byzantine seal of Konon patrikios (possibly future emperor Leo III AD 717-741) (early 8th century AD) Obv.: + KO / NW / NOC, Cypress trees to left and right, all within wreath border. Rev.: + ΠΑ/ΤΡΙ/ΚΙΟΝ, Cypress trees to left and right, all within wreath border. Cf. Zacos/Veglery 899, Seibt, BBÖ 1, 135 and Berlin I 169. See Konstantopoulos, Athens, 231 and No. 783 of present auction for a seal type of the same individual bearing the lower rank of tourmarches, also with cypress trees. It is very probable that both seal types of "Konon" belong to the future emperor Leo III. Leo, who had the birth name of Konon, made himself a good military career, and according to the sources he was strategos of Anatolikon before he ascended to the purple. The military office just before strategos (general of a 'thema') was tourmarches (a 'thema' consisted of four 'tourmai'). Condition: Very Fine Weight: 9.50 gr Diameter: 23 mm Starting price: 1 GBP

Lead Seal of Samouel Alousianos, Proedros and Dux (11th cent.) Obverse: The Virgin Mary seated on throne, facial, full-length, nimbate, wearing mandyas and maphorion, holding Jesus Christ as child in her arms, sigla MP-ΘΥ = Μητηρ Θεοῦ (Mother of God), all within dotted border. Reverse: Inscription in 7 lines: + Θ(ΕΟΤΟ)ΚΕ/ ΡΟΗΘΕΙ/ CAMOYHΛ/ ΠΡΟΕΔΡΩ/ Σ ΔΟΥΚΙ ΤΩ/ ΑΛΟΥCΙ/ΑΝΩ = Θεοτόκε βοήθει Σαμουήλ προέδρω καὶ δουκὶ τῷ Ἀλουσινῶ (+ Mother of God help Samouel Proedros and Dux the Alousianos), all within dotted border. Date: 11th century. The owner of the seal Samouel Alousianos came from Bulgaria, was son of Alousianos and Dalassene, brother of Basileios and Ann, grandson of Bulgar Tsar Ivan Vladislav. He was married to M... Dalassene, daughter of Constantinus Dalassenus and had a son, Constantine, who became vestarches. Samouel, who died after 1068, became a byzantine high rank officer, strategos, proedros, vestarches and dux (commander) of Edessa, under the byzantine emperor Romanos IV Diogenes. His sister was the first wife of Romanus IV Diogenes. In 1069 AD, as commander of the five western tagmata, wintering in the Armenian themes, he was ordered to attack the Frankish rebel mercenary, commander Robert Crispin. The Byzantine forces were ambushed and defeated, but Samuel survived and rose to the rank of proedros. Bibliography: Jordanov, Corpus II 24; Seibt-Zarnitz 3.1.9. Byzantine lead Seal of Andronikos Doukas, protoproedros, protovestiaros and domestikos of the Scholai of the East. A highly interesting rare seal of a high rank byzantine officer (11th/12th cent.) Obverse: Bust of the Virgin holding the medallion of Christ before her. Sigla: MP-ΘΥ (Mother of God), circular inscription in upper half, +Θ(EOTO)KE BOH[ΘE]I = Θεοτόκε βοήθει (Mother of God, help), all within dotted border. Reverse: Inscription of eight lines, ΑΝΔΡΟΝΙ/ΚΩΠΡΩΤ,ΠΡΟ/ΕΔΡΩΠΡΩΤΟ/ΒΕCΤΙΑΡΙΩC/ΔΟΜΕCΤΙΚΩ/ΤΩΝCΧΟΛΩΝ/ΤΗCΑΝΑΤΟΛ(ΗC)/ΤΩΔΟΥΚΑ = Ἀνδρονίκω πρωτοπροέδρω, πρωτοβεστιάριω, καὶ δομεστικῷ τῶν σχολῶν τῆς Ἀνατολῆς τῷ Δούκᾳ. Translation of the whole inscription: Mother of God, help Andronikos Doukas protoproedros, protovestiaros, and domestikos of the Schools of the East. Commentary: Same owner as BZS.1958.106.1355. Andronikos Doukas was son of the Caesar John Doukas and Eirene Pegonitissa. His father was a brother of Emperor Constantine X Doukas. His maternal grandfather was Niketas Pegonites. Andronikos himself was a first cousin of Michael VII Doukas. In 1071 Andronikos was the commander of a section of the Byzantine army in the campaign of Romanos IV Diogenes against the Seljuk Turks of Alp Arslan. Commanding the rearguard of the army during the Battle of Manzikert, Andronikos announced that the emperor had been cut down and deserted from the battlefield. He was widely blamed for causing the crushing defeat of the Byzantine forces and the subsequent capture of Romanos IV by the enemy. In 1072, after Romanos had been released by Alp Arslan, Andronikos and his brother Constantine were sent out by Michael VII and their father the Caesar John to intercept him. They defeated Romanos and hunted him down in Cilicia. It was Andronikos who finally obtained Romanos' surrender and conducted him towards Constantinople. In spite of his former hatred for the deposed emperor, Andronikos is said to have opposed his blinding on 29 June 1072. In an act of 1073, he is recorded with his titles as protoproedros, protovestiaros and megas domestikos, which Michael Attaleiates clarifies as being the post of domestikos ton scholon of the East, which he had been given when sent against Diogenes. In 1074, together with his father, Andronikos commanded the imperial army against the rebel mercenaries led by Roussel de Bailleul. Both were captured by the rebels, who released the badly wounded Andronikos to allow him to seek proper medical treatment in Constantinople. There he recovered for a few years, but died of an edema, as the monk Antonios on 14 October 1077. See Polemis, Doukai, 55-59; cf. Zacos-Veglery, 1473 and Patmos, II, no. 50. See also BZS 1958.106.2491. From an administrative point of view, the term Anatole was used until the 10th century to indicate (a) the territories that had previously belonged to the praefectura praetorio per Orientem that is, essentially, all the themes of Asia Minor together with those of Thrace and Macedonia; or, more realistically, (b) the territories situated to the east of Constantinople, that is, Asia Minor. In the 10th century the army command of the East was separated from that of the West (that is, Europe), Listes, 329, 341-42; cf. Oikonomides, Évolution, 141-42 and AP 35 [1978] 300, 328-29. The seals published here (and some others, such as the one of the stratopedarches of the East: Zacos-Veglery, no. 2780; Lihačev, Molivdovuly, 104, pl. LXIII,9; Seyrig, no. 159; or the hikanatoi of the East: Seyrig, no. 154) show that in the 10th and 11th centuries the entity called the East comprised only military commands. It should be noted, however, that in some cases the term Anatole seems to have been used to indicate a strategos of the Anatolikoi (cf. Winkelmann, Ämterstruktur, 78-79); and several civilian officials defined as ton Anatolikon could well have authority over territories covering the East, well beyond the boundaries of the theme (see DO Seals 3, § 86, nos. 86.9, 86.17, 86.34). | 1877 |  | Imperial lead seal of the byzantine emperor Michael Doukas (1071-1078) Obverse: Christ seated on a square-backed throne, wearing a tunic and himation, blessing with the right hand and holding the book of Gospels in the left. He has a nimbus cruciger. Sigla: IC-XC = Ἰ(ησοῦ)ς Χ(ριστός)ς (Jesus Christ), all within dotted border. Reverse: Michael VII standing facial and wearing a crown with a cross and a loros, an end of which is draped over the left wrist and ornamented with five dots. He holds a labarum in the right hand and a globus cruciger in the left. Circular inscription, +ΜΙΧΑΗ,ΑΥΤΟ-ΚΡΑΤ,ΡΩΜ,ΟΔΟΥΚ, = Μιχαή(λ) αὐτοκράτ(ωρ) Ῥωμ(αίων) ὁ Δούκ(ας), all within dotted border. Michael VII was born c. 1050 in Constantinople, the eldest son of Constantine X Doukas and Eudokia Makrembolitissa. He was associated with his father on the throne late in 1059, together with or shortly before his newly born brother Konstantios Doukas. When Constantine X died in 1067, Michael VII was 17 years old and should have been able to rule by himself. He exhibited little interest in politics, however, and his mother Eudokia and uncle John Doukas governed the empire as effective regents. On January 1, 1068, Eudokia married the general Romanos Diogenes, who now became senior co-emperor alongside Michael VII, Konstantios, and another brother, Andronikos. When Romanos IV was defeated and captured by Alp Arslan of the Seljuk Turks at the Battle of Manzikert in August 1071, Michael VII remained in the background, while the initiative was taken by his uncle John Doukas and his tutor Michael Psellos. They conspired to keep Romanos from regaining power after his release from captivity, while Michael felt no obligation to honor the agreement that Romanos struck with the Sultan. After the dispatch of Eudokia to a monastery, Michael VII was crowned again on October 24, 1071 as senior emperor. Although still advised by Michael Psellos and John Doukas, Michael VII became increasingly reliant on his finance minister Nikephoritzes. The emperor's chief interests, shaped by Psellos, were in academic pursuits, and he allowed Nikephoritzes to increase both taxation and luxury spending without properly financing the army. As an emperor he was incompetent, surrounded by sycophantic court officials, and blind to the empire collapsing around him. In dire straits, imperial officials resorted to property confiscations and even expropriated some of the wealth of the church. The underpaid army tended to |

mutiny, and the Byzantines lost Bari, their last possession in Italy, to the Normans of Robert Guiscard in 1071. Simultaneously, they faced a serious revolt in the Balkans, where they faced an attempt for the restoration of the Bulgarian state. Although this revolt was suppressed by the general Nikephoros Bryennios, the Byzantine Empire was unable to recover its losses in Asia Minor. After Manzikert, the Byzantine government sent a new army to contain the Seljuk Turks under Isaac Komnenos, a brother of the future emperor Alexios I Komnenos, but this army was defeated and its commander captured in 1073. The problem was made worse by the desertion of the Byzantines' western mercenaries, who became the object of the next military expedition in the area, led by the Caesar John Doukas. This campaign also ended in failure, and its commander was likewise captured by the enemy. The victorious mercenaries now forced John Doukas to stand as pretender to the throne. The government of Michael VII was forced to recognize the conquests of the Seljuks in Asia Minor in 1074, and to seek their support. A new army under Alexios Komnenos, reinforced by Seljuk troops sent by Malik Shah I, finally defeated the mercenaries and captured John Doukas in 1074. In 1078 two generals, Nikephoros Bryennios and Nikephoros Botaneiates, simultaneously revolted in the Balkans and Anatolia, respectively. Botaneiates gained the support of the Seljuk Turks, and he reached Constantinople first. Michael VII resigned the throne with hardly a struggle on March 31, 1078 and retired into the Monastery of Stoudios. He later became metropolitan of Ephesus and died in Constantinople in c. 1090. Byzantine lead seal of Theodoulos (?) imperial spatharios and strategos of the Boukellaron theme (8th cent.) Obv.: Invocative cruciform monogram inscribed in the corners, ΘΕΟΤΟΚΕ ΒΟΗΘΕΙ ΤΩ ΚΩ ΔΟΥΛΩ (Mother of God help your servant), wreath border. Rev.: Inscription in 4 lines (first missing due to blanket's small size), [+ΘΕΟΔΟΥΣ?]ΛΩΒ(Α)ΙΛΙΚΩ)CΠΑΘ/SCTPATHΓ(Ω)/Τ(ΩΝ)ΒΟΥΚ(ΕΛΛΑΡΩΝ) (Theodoulos imperial spatharios and strategos of Boukellaron), wreath border. Commentary: The Bucellarian Theme (Greek: Βουκελλάριον θέμα, Boukellarion thema), more properly known as the Theme of the Bucellarians (Greek: θέμα Βουκελλαρίων, thema Boukellariōn) was a Byzantine theme (a military-civilian province) in northern Asia Minor (modern Turkey). It was created around the middle of the 8th century, comprising most of the ancient region of Paphlagonia and parts of Galatia and Phrygia. The theme was established sometime after 743 and before 767 by the Emperor Constantine V (r. 741–775), following the suppression of the revolt of Artabasdōs, the Count of the Opsikion. The new theme, along with that of the Optimatoi was split off from the Opsikion as formed part of the Emperor's policy to reduce the latter's power. The name of the theme derives from the late Roman Bucellarii, elite cavalry troops of Gothic or Roman origin, often found as privately recruited bodyguard troops. By the early 7th century, they formed an elite division in the Opsikion field force, coming under a domestikos before their elevation to a full theme. The strategos of the Bucellarians is attested for the first time in 767, providing a terminus ante quem for its creation. His headquarters were at Ancyra, the former capital of Opsikion, and he belonged to the second tier of strategoi with an annual salary of 30 pounds of gold. According to Arab geographers, he commanded some 8,000 troops. The court ranks of the Bucellarian strategoi ranged from the mid-level spatharios to the higher protospatharios, with a single occurrence of the more exalted patrikios in the 10th century. Claudiopolis is the only attested base of one of the theme's tourmai. Despite it being originally a cavalry theme (thema kaballarikon), the Bucellarians, as well as the later Paphlagonian theme, also included a small fleet, active in the Black Sea. The "katepano of the Bucellarians and the Paphlagonians", whose seal is attested in the 10th century, was the commander of this naval contingent. However, evidence points to the fact that the 10th-century fleet was composed of merchantmen and transport ships, not warships. Initially, the theme stretched from the Black Sea coast to the central Anatolian plateau, bordering the Optimatoi and the rump of the Opsikion in the west, the Anatolic theme in the south, and the Armeniac theme in the east. In the 9th century, however, probably c. 820, the northeastern half of the theme was detached and formed, perhaps with some territory from the Armeniac theme, the new theme of Paphlagonia. Its extent was further reduced under Emperor Leo VI the Wise (r. 886–912), when eight southern and southeastern banda were removed to form part of the new themes of Cappadocia (around Lake Tuz) and Charsianon (east of the Halys River). In the 9th century, it comprised two towns and thirteen fortresses, while five towns are recorded in the 10th century. The theme survived until it was overrun by the Seljuk Turks following the Battle of Manzikert in 1071. The name Boukellariōn, however, survived as a geographical designation in Byzantine sources up until 1263. 1883		Byzantine lead seal of an imperial spatharios and strategos of the Anatolikon theme (8th cent.) Obv.: Invocate cruciform monogram inscribed in the corners, ΘΕΟΤΟΚΕ ΒΟΗΘΕΙ ΤΩ ΚΩ ΔΟΥΛΩ (Mother of God help your servant). Rev.: Inscription in 5 lines (first missing due to blanket small size), [+....].B(ACIΛIKΩ)CΠAΘ/[S]CTPATH[Γ(Ω)]/ΤΩΝΑΝΑ[Τ]/ΟΛΙΚ(ΩΝ) (N. imperial spatharios and strategos of Anatolikon). Commentary: Concerning the themes of Asia Minor, one of which was the Anatolikon, what is clear is that at some point in the mid-7th century, probably in the late 630s and 640s, the Empire's field armies were withdrawn to Anatolia, the last major contiguous territory remaining to the Empire, and assigned to the districts that became known as the themes. Territorially, each of the new themes encompassed several of the older provinces, and with a few exceptions, seems to have followed the old provincial boundaries. The first four themes were those of the Armeniacs, Anatolics and Thracesians, and the Opsician theme. The Armeniac Theme (Θέμα Ἀρμενιᾶκῶν, Thema Armeniakōn), first mentioned in 667, was the successor of the Army of Armenia. It occupied the old areas of the Pontus, Armenia Minor and northern Cappadocia, with its capital at Amasea. The Anatolic Theme (Θέμα Ἀνατολικῶν, Thema Anatolikōn), first mentioned in 669, was the successor of the Army of the East (Ἀνατολή, Anatolē). It covered southern central Asia Minor, and its capital was Amorium. Together, these two themes formed the first tier of defence of Byzantine Anatolia, bordering Muslim Armenia and Syria respectively. Bibliography: Haldon, John F.
