Extremely Rare. This coin is from the earliest issue of coinage at Tenedos. Although some place this issue in the late 6th century, there are no coins of this type in any hoard recorded before the mid-4th century. In fact, only two 4th century hoards record coins of Tenedos: Troas, 1969 (IGCH 1188), deposited c. 450 BC, and Massyaf, 1961 (IGCH 1483 = CH 8, 587 = CH 9, 362), deposited c. 425-420 BC. The former contained two coins of Tenedos, but further information was not recorded. The second hoard, however, contained a single didrachm, which was from the same issue as the present coin (cf. C.M. Kraay & P.R.S. Moorey, "Two fifth century hoards from the Near East," RN 1968, pl. XXVI, 57). That coin exhibits little wear, supporting a likely date of issue in the early to mid 5th century BC. Reference CNG Electronic Auction 455/131. Condition: Extremely Fine. Weight: 7.8 g. | 193 |  | IONIA . Magnesia Ad Meandrum. Themistocles. obol. Around 459 BC: Obv: Bearded head of Hephaestus with cap a. Rev: Laurel wreath to the right, behind Θ. Back: Name monogram Θ in pearl square. J. Nollé, SNR 75 (1996) Plate I 3; J. Nollé - A. Wenninger, JNG 48, 1998, p. 67 Th 5a. Slight tint, backs off-center, good ss Ex Gorny & Mosch 159, 2007, 192. The present collection of the magnesian coins of Themistocles throws an interesting spotlight on the life of the family of one of the most important historical figures in ancient history. The "victor of Salamis", who had defeated the fleet of the Persian great king with the well-known "double ruse" in the narrow bay of Salamis, fell at the end of the 1970s. v. BC probably also out of favor with the Athenians because of a certain self-importance. After an ostracism he had to leave the city. In a roundabout way, he and his family came to Asia Minor, where, probably still profiting from his dubious ruse, he was enfeoffed by the great Persian king with the town of Magnesia and other small possessions. However, the general could only enjoy the prosperity in old age for a short time. He died at the age of 65 around 459 BC. His son Archepolis probably continued to rule for a while before the family returned to Athens in the middle of the century. As minters of Magnesia, Themistocles and his son primarily used the iconography they found, adding their name monograms as a sign of their rule. Influences of the Attic homeland can partly be identified. When the family returned to Athens, Magnesia continued minting coins with the old images, but in their own name for a while. Summary: J. | 423 |  | GERMANY. Pfalz. Friedrich II (1505-1556). Silver Taler, 1548. Neumarkt mint. Facing half figure holding sword and orb. Rev. Helmet over three arms, date divided below (Dav 9627). In 1544, after serving as a commander under the Holy Roman Emperor Ferdinand I, Friedrich II succeeded his brother as Count Palatine and Elector of the Palatinate. His reign was deeply troubled by the religious upheavals of the Reformation. In 1546, after accepting the Protestant doctrines advanced by Martin Luther, Friedrich II attempted to reform the University of Heidelberg (an old Catholic institution) along Lutheran lines. He was strongly opposed by the university and found himself outlawed by Emperor Charles V. Friedrich II only managed to save his titles and possessions by renouncing his Lutheran convictions and offering full submission to the Emperor. The obverse of the present thaler, struck just after he was restored to the good graces of the Emperor, depicts Friedrich II in his wearing a bonnet and carrying a sword, representing his status as Count Palatine and Elector of the Palatinate. He also carries an orb, symbolizing his position as Arch-Seneschal of the Holy Roman Empire. Friedrich II possessed this high Imperial office by virtue of his reign as Elector of the Palatinate. In addition, he wears around his neck the insignia of the Order of the Golden Fleece, an Imperial chivalric honor awarded to him in 1516. The reverse features the triple-arms of Friederich II: on the left the arms of the Palatinate, on the right the arms of Bavaria, and below the arms of the Arch-Senechal of the Holy Roman Empire. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 28.63 g. Diameter: 41 mm Starting price: 160 EUR
