CYPRUS. Salamis. Evagoras I, circa 411-374 BC. Stater. [ E u fa go ro ], (in Cypriot syllabic script) Head of bearded Herakles to right, wearing lion's skin headdress. Rev. Ba - si le fo se eu (in combined Cypriot and Greek letters) He-goat with long horns and beard seated right on dotted ground line. Cf. BMC 55 and BMFA 2144 (without the kerykeion on the reverse). Masson & Amandry Be. 4 = Kunstfreund 226 . A very rare variety. excellent centered style and very sharply struck. Note: Evagoras I, the greatest king of Salamis, claimed descent from Teukros son of Telamon and half-brother of Ajax. Having failed to avenge his brother's death, Teukros was thus prevented from returning home from the Trojan war and supposedly settled in Salamis, becoming the mythical founder of the city. But Evagoras was born under the rule of the Phoenician usurpers, and according to Isokrates, was so possessed of "beauty... strength... manly courage, wisdom and justice" that "one of the princes, starting a conspiracy, slew the tyrant and attempted to arrest Evagoras, believing that he would not be able to retain the rule himself unless he should get him out of the way." First escaping to Soloi in Cilicia, then returning with a picked band of fifty men, Evagoras attacked the palace by night and established himself as ruler of the city. The king produced a substantial issue of coinage in support of Athens and to further his ambitions for the domination of Cyprus. Indeed, with Athenian aid Evagoras succeeded in extending his rule over the greater part of the island, and even conquered several cities in Phoenicia, including Tyre. Yet when Athenian support was withdrawn under the terms of the Peace of Antalkidas, Evagoras continued to fight alone against the Persian Empire, which resulted in an invasion of the island that effectively reduced him to the status of a vassal king. In 374 he was assassinated by a eunuch for motives of private revenge, and was succeeded by his son, Nikokles. The inscription on the reverse of this coin is written in a combination of Cypriot syllabic and Greek characters. Although Cypriots were Greeks and their language a dialect of Greek, their written language was recorded in an older and more difficult system, the Cypriot syllabary, which was ultimately derived from the Linear A script of the Minoans. Evagoras has been called a pioneer of the adoption of the Greek alphabet in Cyprus in place of the older Cypriot syllabary. Condition:Extremely Fine Weight: 10.75gr Diameter: 20mm

CILICIA. Issos. Tiribazos, satrap of Lydia, 388-380 BC. Stater (Silver, 20 mm, 10.65 g, 5 h). [ΙΣΣΙΚ-ΟΝ / ('tribzw' in Aramaic) Ba'al standing front, head to left, holding eagle in his right hand and scepter in his left. Rev. [AMI] Facing half-length figure of Ahura-Mazda, head to right, his body terminated by a solar disk, holding wreath in his right hand and lotus blossom in his left. Casabonne series 1. SNG Levante 176. SNG Paris 416. Tiribazos, Tiribazos or Teribazus (c.440 BC-370 BC) was an Achaemenid satrap of Western Armenia and later satrap of Lydia in western Anatolia. Satrap of Western Armenia He was highly regarded by the Persian King Artaxerxes II, and when he was present, so Xenophon tells us, no one else had the honour of helping the sovereign to mount his horse. At the time of the retreat of the 10,000 in 401 BC, Tiribazos was satrap of Western Armenia. Satrap of Lydia He succeeded Tithraustes as satrap of Western Asia (Sardis). He was holding this office when, in 393 BC, Antalcidas was sent to negotiate, through him, a peace for Sparta with the Persian king. In 392 BC, while the Corinthian War was being contested amongst the Greek states, Tiribazos received envoys from the major belligerents of that war, and held a conference in which a proposal for ending the war was discussed. That discussion failed, but Tiribazos, convinced that Athens was becoming a threat to Persia in the Aegean, secretly provided funds to rebuild the Spartan fleet. When the Persian king Artaxerxes II learned of this, Tiribazos was removed from power and replaced by Struthas, who pursued an anti-Spartan policy. However, five years later, in 387 BC, Tiribazos was again in power, and worked together with the Spartan general Antalcidas to rebuild the Spartan fleet as a threat to Athenian interests in the region. This action brought the Athenians and their allies to the negotiating table. Tiribazos represented Artaxerxes at the ensuing negotiations, which led to the Peace of Antalcidas. In 386 BC, he was appointed to command the Persian fleet against Evagoras, the king of Salamis in Cyprus, with the land forces being entrusted to the Persian satrap of Armenia, Orontes. They defeated Evagoras and lay siege to Salamis. However, in 385 BC Tiribazos was impeached by Orontes, and was recalled to court to answer for his conduct. Tiribazos was detained in prison until the return of Artaxerxes from his expedition against the Cadusii. Before three judges, Tiribazos was able to have the charges against him dismissed, and he was honourably acquitted with the full support of King Artaxerxes, in consideration not only of his innocence in regard to the special charges, but also of the great services he had rendered to his master. Tiribazos now stood higher than ever in the royal favour, and received a promise of the hand of Amestris, the king's daughter. Artaxerxes, however, reneged on this arrangement, and married Amestris himself. When King Artaxerxes reneged on a pledge to Tiribazos once more, this time with respect to Atossa, the youngest of the king's princesses, Tiribazos could no longer remain loyal to the king and incited Darius, the son of Artaxerxes, to join him in a plot against the king's life. Tiribazos' plans were betrayed to Artaxerxes by a eunuch, and the conspirators were found out. Tiribazos offered a desperate resistance to the guards who endeavored to arrest him, and was slain with a javelin.[2] Condition: Very Fine Weight: 10.48gr Diameter: 21mm

- 47  CILICIA, Tarsos. Synnesis III. Circa 425-400 BC. AR Stater (10.29 gm). Satrap on horse galloping right / Hoplite kneeling left, wearing crested Corinthian helmet, holding spear and large round shield. SNG Levante 61; SNG France 226.; SNG von Aulock 5913, Rare. The hereditary kings of Cilicia were invested with the name Syennesis, a royal title more than an actual name. Syennesis III was probably the grandson of Syennesis II, one of the commanders in the fleet of Xerxes. In 401 BC, he sent a body of troops commanded by his son to support the revolt of Cyrus II against his brother Artaxerxes II. Syennesis was richly rewarded with gifts and honors in return for his support. At the same time, though, he had sent his other son to Artaxerxes, so that he might be with the winning side regardless of the outcome. Condition: Very Fine Weight: 10.40gr Diameter: 21mm
