AR 15 mm, 0,93 g ΘΥΡΡΗΙΟΝ behind head of Athena right, wearing crested helmet / ΞΕΝΟ-ΜΕΝΗΣ in two lines within laurel wreath. nearly very fine Cf. Numismatic Chronicle 1900, 14, pl. XIII, 13 (denomination); cf. Imhoof-Blumer, Numismatische Zeitschrift 10 (1878), 28 (same); cf. Mionnet, Suppl. III, 473, 139 (same). The magistrate ΞΕΝΟΜΕΝΗΣ, whose name appears on our coin, it has been suggested that he was the ancestor of the Xenomenes of Thyrrheium, who entertained Cicero, when he passed through the town in 51 and 50 BC as Proconsul of Cilicia during his travel back to Rome. Cicero wrote in His Letters To His Friends: Tullius and his son, Quintus and his son, send warm greetings to Tiro, gentlest and best of men. See what a fascination you possess! We have been two hours at Thyreum. My host Xenomenes is as fond of you as if he had been brought up with you. He has promised to supply you with everything you want: I think he will do so. I should like him, if you are better, to transport you to Leucas, that you might complete your cure there... [CCLXXXVIII (Fam. XVI, 5)]. Starting price: 50 EUR |

Afterward, the city became a point of contention between the Byzantines, Arabs and Turkic groups. Qurus Bone-1; Walker -, A-A185.; (RRR). Superior in condition to the example of Stephen Album Auction 34, lot 294. This splendid example is surely deserving of a place of prominence in any premier collection of Islamic coinage. A magnificent piece! Qurus is the Arab name for the city of Cyrrhus which was founded about 300 BC by the Seleucids. The city acquired some importance when it was captured by the roman general Gnaeus Pompeius Magnus (64 BC) and subsequently was developed into a military base during the wars between Romans and Parthians. After the Persians occupied the city, Cyrrhus came under Byzantine rule as Hagiopolis ('holy city'), capital of the province Kyrrestike. Cyrrhus was the centre of the veneration of the Christian martyrs Cosmas and Damian. During the years after the decisive battle of Yarmuk in AD 636 the Arabs conquered Syria. The Arab general Abū 'Ubayda b. al-Garrā accepted the capitulation of Cyrrhus and signed a peace treaty with its people. Umayyad Caliphate. Yubna (Palestine) AH 80-90. Fals Bronze 27 mm, 4,07 g In field: la ilaha | illa Allah | wahdahu, within double circle / In margin: bismillah duriba hadha al-fals bi Yubna, (Yavneh in southern Palestine). good very fine, Very well struck, complete and in exceptional condition for this usually crude issue. cf: A-191. SNAT-223. W-Th.17. all without the circle around Muhammad | rasul | Allah on the rev. (RRR). Much rarer than the Standing Caliph Arab-Byzantine fals of the same mint. An unrecorded type for this RRR Mint! Based on written sources and archaeology, the history of Yavneh/Jabneh/ Yibna/ yubna goes back to the Iron Age and possibly to the Bronze Age. It was an important Jewish cultural and administration center as the Hebrew Bible mentions Yavneh repeatedly, as does Josephus. It later became the seat of Christian bishops until one of the sahaba captured it during the caliphate of Abu Bakr. According to the Islamic historian al-Baladhuri (died 892 CE) mentioned Yubna as one of ten towns in Jund Filastin conquered by the Rashidun army led by 'Amr ibn al-'As in the early 7th century. Also in the 9th century, Ya'qubi (died 897/8 CE) wrote that Yubna was an ancient city built on a hill that was inhabited by Samaritans. Al-Muqaddasi, writing around 985, said that "Yubna has a beautiful mosque. From this place come the excellent figs known by the name of Damascene. Yaqut wrote that in Yubna there was a tomb said to be that of Abu Hurairah, the companion (sahaba) of the Prophet. The author of Marasid also adds that tomb seen here is also said to be that of 'Abd Allah ibn Abi Sarh, another companion (sahaba) of the Prophet. Derbent's location on a narrow, three-kilometer strip of land in the North Caucasus between the Caspian Sea and the Caucasus mountains is strategic in the entire Caucasus region. Historically, this position allowed the rulers of Derbent to control land traffic between the Eurasian Steppe and the Middle East. In 654, Derbent was captured by the Arabs, who called it the Gate of Gates (Bab al-Abwab),[27] following their invasion of Persia. They transformed it into an important administrative center and introduced Islam to the area. The impression of antiquity evoked by these fortifications led many Arab historians to connect them with Khosrow I and to include them among the seven wonders of the world. DARBAND (1)". A seal of the utmost importanc, excessively rare and highly interesting heavy weight seal. Balad District is a district of the Saladin Governorate, Iraq. The district capital is the city of Balad. Also, Balad, is a city in Saladin Governorate, Iraq, north of the national capital, Baghdad. Located between the towns of Al Dhuluiya, Yathrib and Ishaqi. Musa ibn Mus'ab al-Khath'ami (Musa b. Mus'ab) was a provincial governor for the Abbasid Caliphate, serving at various times over the Jazira, Mosul, and Egypt. Described as a mawla of the tribe of Khath'am, Musa was the son of Mus'ab ibn Rabi', a secretary to the last Umayyad caliph Marwan II, who later submitted to the Abbasids during the Abbasid Revolution. He himself appears to have enjoyed close relations with the Abbasid ruling family, having reportedly been a milk brother to the third caliph al-Mahdi at Humayma. During the reign of al-Mansur (r. 754–775), Musa was appointed on multiple occasions as governor of the Jazira and Mosul. While there he enacted severe taxation policies which led to widespread unrest and earned a lengthy condemnation of his activities in the Chronicle of Pseudo-Dionysius of Tell-Mahre. Al-Mahdi nevertheless returned him to the same post in 783–784, during which he carried out the caliph's plans to construct an enlargement of the Friday mosque in Mosul. In 784 Musa was appointed governor of Egypt with jurisdiction over both its military and taxation affairs, and with the task of quelling the ongoing rebellion of Dihyah ibn Mus'ab in Upper Egypt. In the spring of 785 Musa led his armies out against the Hawfis, but in the resulting encounter he was defeated, abandoned by his men and killed by the rebels. From the Tareq Hani collection.

According to Album, the fals, which dated 166, was likely produced for several years with frozen date, but not for long, given its scarcity and stylistic uniformity. It seems strange that the principal mint for gold and silver never resumed fals production for more than 450 years! Bronze fulus, al-Raqqa mint, occasional dated issues between 181 and 250 are all R. Harun al-Rashid (148–193 H) was the fifth Abbasid Caliph. His epithet "al-Rashid" translates to "the Orthodox", "the Just", "the Upright", or "the Rightly-Guided". Al-Rashid ruled from 786 to 809, during the peak of the Islamic Golden Age. He established the legendary library Bayt al-Hikma ("House of Wisdom") in Baghdad in present-day Iraq, and during his rule Baghdad began to flourish as a center of knowledge, culture and trade. During his rule, the family of Barmakids, which played a deciding role in establishing the Abbasid Caliphate, declined gradually. In 796, he moved his court and government to Raqqa in present-day Syria. Also, Abu Musa 'Īsā b. Abān was an early Sunni Islamic scholar who followed the Hanafi madhhab. Although none of his own works have survived to today, he was quoted extensively by early Hanafi scholars such as al-Jassas in regards to his views on Hanafi usul al-fiqh. Having studied under Abu Hanifa's student, Muhammad al-Shaybani, ibn Abān's views on the sources of law can be assumed to be representative of Abu Hanifa's. Ref: Assuyuti, Tarikh Al Khulafa. Abbasid Caliphate. Amid. Al-Mu'tamid AH 256-279. Seal PB 18 mm, 2,82 g 'al-Mu'tamid 'alā 'llāh Amir al-Mu'minin around, Hafs b. Issa in center / Sanat saba'in wa Mia'atyn (date) bi Amid in field. good very fine Ammianus Marcellinus, xix. 1, seq. A very important seal of great interest. Abu'l-'Abbās Aḥmad ibn Ja'far, better known by his regnal name al-Mu'tamid 'alā 'llāh (Dependent on God) was the Caliph of the Abbasid Caliphate from 870 to 892. His reign marks the end of the "Anarchy at Samarra" and the start of the Abbasid restoration, but he was a largely a ruler in name only. Power was held by his brother al-Muwaffaq, who held the loyalty of the military. Al-Mu'tamid's authority was circumscribed further after a failed attempt to flee to the domains controlled by Ahmad ibn Tulun in late 882, and he was placed under house arrest by his brother. In 891, when al-Muwaffaq died, loyalists attempted to restore power to the Caliph, but were quickly overcome by al-Muwaffaq's son al-Mu'tadid, who assumed his father's powers. When al-Mu'tamid died in 892, al-Mu'tadid succeeded him as caliph. Also, the mint and date are crystal clear on this wonderful seal which is Amid, AH270. 'Amid'(Diyarbakır) now, in turkey. also known by various names throughout its long history, was established as an Aramean settlement, circa the 3rd millennium BC, later as the capital of Bit-Zamani. The oldest artefact from Amida is the famous stele of king Naram-Sin also believed to be from third millennia BC. The name Amida first appears in the writings of Assyrian King Adad-nirari I (C. 1310 -1281 BC) who ruled the city as a part of the Assyrian homeland. Amida remained an important region of the Assyrian homeland throughout the reign of king Tiglath-Pileser I (1114–1076 BC) and the name Amida appeared in the annals of Assyrian rulers until 705 BC, and also appears in the archives of Armenian king Tiridates II in 305 AD, and the Roman historian Ammianus Marcellinus. Finally, in 639 the city was captured by the Arab armies of Islam and it remained in Arab hands until the Kurdish dynasty of the Marwanids ruled the area during the 10th and 11th centuries. In 1085, the Seljuq Turks captured the region from the Marwanids, and they settled many Turcomans in the region. However, the Ayyubids received the city from their vassal State the Artiquids in 1232, and the city ruled by them until the Mongolian Ilkhanate captured the city in 1259. Later the Ayyubids of hasankeyf Took back the city and ruled it until it was sacked by the Timurid Empire in 1394. Yavuz Sultan Selim, the Ottoman Emperor received the city from the Safavids in 1515.
