RIC 1148; Banti 96; BMCRE 1454. Good very fine condition. Dark patina. Tooled. Very Rare; a historically interesting architectural type. Built by Antoninus Pius after Faustina's death, the temple depicted on this coin was dedicated to her memory. The entablature was inscribed DIVAE FAVSTINAE EX S C, and when eventually Antoninus Pius himself died and was deified 20 years later, the temple was re-dedicated jointly to Antoninus and Faustina at the instigation of his successor, Marcus Aurelius. The additional line DIVO ANTONINVS ET was added above the original inscription that the emperor and empress might be jointly honoured by this edifice. The entablature, which survives to this day, thus reads: 'To the divine Antoninus and to the divine Faustina by decree of the Senate.' The survival of the temple is attributed to the fact that it was converted into a Roman Catholic church, the Chiesa di San Lorenzo in Miranda, perhaps as early as the seventh century. 70

457 Roman Empire - Divus Augustus. Died A.D. 14. Æ cast 'sestertius.' 21.37 g., 34 mm. Paduan type. Early cast. His laureate head left; DIVVS AVGVSTVS PATER / OB / CIVES / SER in three lines on shield, bordered by oak wreath, supported by two capricorns set on globe; S C flanking. Klawans 1. Near Extremely Fine; handsome dark brown patina. Particularly fine example. 'Paduan' medals are so named after Giovanni da Cavino of Padova (1500-1570), who during his lifetime produced high quality dies to strike imitations and fantasy versions of Roman coins. The dies were passed down through Cavino's family until being purchased by the antiquary to the king of France in the 17th century, 100 years after Cavino's death. It is quite likely that the dies were used in the years between Cavino's death and their sale, and many copies were also cast based on struck originals. Casts were also created using existing casts, these 'aftercasts' generally decrease in quality and fidelity the further removed they become from the original struck examples. Whether or not they were made as intentional counterfeits is not conclusive (many scholars argue no). Various examples found their way into serious collections over time, but Zander Klawans's 1977 reference (and the many preceding works by Lawrence and others) mean that they are now rarely mistaken for real examples. Unlike many non-contemporary counterfeits, Paduans are historic and collectible in their own right. 500
