Condition : Very fine. Weight : 3.04 gr Diameter : 19 mm Fecunditas is a Roman Goddess of female fertility and childbearing Whose name means 'Fruitfulness'. She seems to be a late invention and was especially associated with the fertility of the Empress and the continuity of the Imperial line, and as such is called Fecunditas as Augusta. She is one of many Roman Goddesses Who represents personified qualities or virtues, such as Concordia or Disciplina.Fecunditas is depicted on the reverse of several coins honoring early Emperresses. Her iconography varies a bit but generally includes several children, who can be shown surrounding Her, standing before Her with arms raised, held in Her arms or seated on Her lap; She can also be shown nursing a baby. She can be standing, enthroned, seated on an elaborate stool, or reclining; often She is shown with the cornucopia, another symbol of abundance. Sometimes She holds the hasta pura, the spear without iron or blameless spear, generally envisioned as a spear either without a point or with a point made from something other than iron. The hasta pura was historically given as a military award for valour, it was also a symbol of power and majesty, and in that context was shown held by various Goddesses like a long sceptre.
