Laureate, draped, and cuirassed bust right, seen from behind / Herakles standing right, battling the Nemean lion. Herakles (Hercules), made temporarily insane by the goddess Hera, murdered his wife and children. Once recovered, and distressed by his actions, he consulted the Delphic Oracle to find a means of expiating his sin. As a punishment, Apollo replied that the hero would have to serve his cousin Eurystheus, the king of Tiryns and a man whom Herakles despised, for a period of twelve years. Because Eurystheus also hated Herakles, he devised a series of ten feats of such difficulty that they would be either insurmountable, or Herakles would die in the attempt. Because Herakles received assistance in completing two of the tasks, Eurystheus added two more. Each labor became more fantastic, and eventually Herakles was compelled to break the bonds of the supernatural in order to complete his task. Once he accomplished the Labors, he was absolved of his guilt, and proceeded to perform many other heroic feats. The First Labor was to slay the Nemean Lion and bring back its skin. The Nemean Lion, called thus as it had been terrorizing the area around Nemea, had a skin so thick that it was impenetrable to weapons. After making futile attempts to subdue it with his weapons, Hercules cast them aside and wrestled the lion to the ground, eventually killing it by thrusting his arm down its throat and choking it to death. Skinning the beast was no easy task, either. After Herakles spent hours trying unsuccessfully to skin the lion, Athena, in the guise of an old crone, appeared to him, and convinced him to use the creature's own claws to cut the hide. Thereafter, the hide became the hero's own impenetrable armor. When Eurystheus saw Herakles wearing his new fearsome outfit, he hid in a large bronze jar, and thenceforth commanded the hero through a herald. 1

Rev. +NI KHΦOP [AVT]KT-OP - PΩMΕΩΝ Ω ΜΕΛΙΧΝΩC Nicephorus standing on dais facing, wearing loros and crown with pendilia, holding labarum in his right hand and globus cruciger in his left. Zacos/Veglery 99. Cf. Cheynet, Istanbul 1.41 and DO Seals 86.1 for similar seals with minor legend variants. A rare imperial seal of an interesting Byzantine usurper. Some marks and traces of corrosion. Very fine. From a European collection, acquired before 2021. This fascinating seal belongs to Nicephorus Melissenus, a distinguished statesman and general, and brother-in-law to the later emperor, Alexius I Comnenus. After the disastrous Battle of Manzikert in 1071, Melissenus remained loyal to Michael VII Ducas, but once Nicephorus III Botaneiates usurped the throne in 1078, the general was exiled to Asia Minor. This proved to be a mistake on Botaneiates' part, as Melissenus quickly started gathering troops and proclaimed himself emperor in 1080. Botaneiates opted to send Alexius, who had some experience in dealing with usurpers, to quell the rebellion, but the latter refused to fight his own brother-in-law. The next year, the Comnenians themselves made a bid for the throne, and after they successfully captured Constantinople, Melissenus was made Caesar and given authority over the strategically important city of Thessalonica. He continued serving under the Comnenians in a military capacity, fighting against the Normans, the Pechenegs, and the Cumans, before passing away in 1104. 1
