Eros enables mating and procreation and always appears as a power figure associated with love, sexuality and desire. In many legends, especially when it comes to forbidden love, Eros leads people to love as a bewildering and sensual figure. There are many legends surrounding the birth of Eros. According to one of them, Eros is the son of Penia, the goddess of poverty, and Poros, the god of wealth. Eros carries the traits of both, he is mother and his father in his own character. Poor in love, he is hiking barefoot in the mountains, on the slopes, in front of the doors. He's rich too. Always chasing after the good, he is brave, daring, always sets traps, and is unsurpassed in witchcraft. It is neither mortal nor immortal. While living in abundance in one day, he suddenly dies, then finds a way and is reborn. So love is neither in abundance nor in riches. This whole complex character of Eros also makes up the nature of love. Depictions of Eros riding a bull are known from terracotta examples. It is extremely rare to see Eros directly on a bull on coins. Sometimes Eros is included in the scene where Zeus, in the form of a bull, is abducting Europa. For example, on a Panathenaic amphora c. 400–390 BC Chr. Eros flies behind Europa with a ribbon. In an Apulian amphora c. 330 BC an Eros hovers over the bull and the girl, while another Eros rides the bull. This image of Eros on the bull, which has sensual, erotic connotations, is often found in vase paintings and terracotta figures of the 4th century BC. See Naples 81952, LIMC Europe 1.7. VF/EF The city of Lesbos takes its name from Lesbos, the son of Lapithes. Lesbos leaves Greece at the command of a god and goes to Lesbos. There he marries Methymna, a king's daughter. In this way he becomes owner of the island and giving his name to the island. He gave his wife's name to one of the largest cities on the island. Lesbos has developed throughout history and has become a wealthy city, largely thanks to maritime trade. In addition, the city is the birthplace of poets such as Arion, Alkaios, Terpanthos and important philosophers such as Hellanikos. A Sappho girls' school was established on Lesbos, which offered a rich and cultural life. The island had its heyday in the Archaic period. During this period, many cities in the Troas region were ruled by Lesbos. The reverse of this coin features a stylized griffin head depicting the head of Apollo wearing a laurel wreath. The main iconographic features of the figure, the open mouth and the tongue stuck out, are reflected on the coin. The pointed ears of the griffin reflect, among other things, the traces of oriental influences that were transferred to Hellenic art during the period of orientalising. The depiction of the griffin with Apollo is linked to the cult of Apollo on the island in terms of the character's religious relationship. According to tradition, griffins are Apollo's guard dogs. Strabo relates that the cult of Apollo Hekatos (archer hitting the target with his arrow) was widespread in the region (Strabo, XIII 2,5). The Griffin, which is a symbol of the city and accepted as Apollo's guardian dog, and Apollo, which is worshiped as a cult in the region, were brought together on the island's coins. The main gods of the city are Apollo and Artemis. Therefore, it is common to find Apollo and Artemis on city coins. Another figure that has become a symbol of the city is the figure of Hermias swimming on the back of a dolphin. According to a mythological legend: Hermias, who was friends with a dolphin went swimming, one day he fell off the dolphin's back and drowned. The dolphin, after carrying the lifeless body of Hermias to land, lay down next to Hermias and died there (Hicks 1887, 93-95; Stark 1958, 31). This tragic story gained such a reputation that Hermias became a symbol of the city, taking its place with the dolphin on the coins of Iasos. Described by the Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

Tyche seated right, holding rudder and cornucopiae. Ref: Moushmov 3477. Very Fine. Elagabalus Damnatio Memoriae? Elagabalus, whose real name was Varius Avitus Bassianus, owed his name to the priesthood of the sun god El-Gabal in Emesa. During his reign he focused on bringing sun worship to the Roman Empire. He made al-Gabal the supreme god of the Roman pantheon. By marrying the Vestal virgin Aquilia Severa, he disregarded the most sacred laws of Rome. Because of all these religious reforms, he attracted the reactions of the Roman people. Here, too, the behavior of the emperor, which was recognized as feminine for Roman society, began to receive reactions from the public. As a result of the backlash, Elagabalus was killed by the Praetorian Guard in 222 and his successor, Severus Alexander, became emperor. After his death, damnatio memoriae was published for Severus Alexander Elagabalus, capitalizing on his notoriety. The fact that the damage on the face of this coin focuses only on the emperor's facial features suggests that it was a damnatio memoriae to obscure his identity. 10

In the Epic of Aeneas, written by Virgilius, Aeneas' flight from the city with his father and son is told. In some variations it is told Aeneas' flight with Palladion, the symbol and protector of the city of Troy. His role in this war is to flee the city and found a new kingdom and to continuing the Trojan lineage. The mother of Aeneas, who came from the Trojan royal family, was the goddess Aphrodite. Hence, Aeneas is a very noble figure with kinships based on both kings and gods. The descendants of Aeneas who settled in Italy established a new kingdom and thus formed the foundations of Rome. 10

Rev: Asclepius seated right, raising right arm towards bull standing left. Ref: SNG France 1429-30. Very Fine. Stephanos Byzantios reports that the name of the city of Parium comes from the son of Jason, Parios (Stephanos Byzantios, ΠΑΡΙΟΝ). Jason is the brother of Dardanos, the founder of the city of Dardanos. Thus, the city of Parium and Parios were connected with the city of Dardanos by kinship relations. Another name descended from the city is Paris, the son of Priam, due to the similarity with the origin of the city's name. Thus, the name of the city is thought to be Parium, the city of Paris. 10

Ref: RPC 369. Very Fine. On the reverse of the coin the personification of the city hands over a small temple to the emperor. With this symbolic step, the emperor actually acquires a religious symbolic meaning for the city. On the reverse of the coin, the importance of the emperor to the city is reflected once again, along with their religious power. The Okeanos lying on the ground is intended to emphasize the sea power of the city. 10

Extremely Rare. Unpublished and the second known specimen. This coin image, as Louis Robert suggested (1969, 359), alludes to a local tradition according to which Zeus was born not in Crete, but in Laodicea's territory. On the obverse of another local coin, there is the bust of Zeus Aseis (BMC 137), a local Phrygian god identified with the Greek Zeus, and, on its reverse, a representation of the goat Amaltheia together with a child (i.e. Zeus). Dionysus' birth is also said to have taken place in the polis' territory. Our coin represents Zeus as kourotrophos holding a child, Dionysus (a very interesting and unique image of Zeus) as well as the goat Amaltheia (Robert 1969, 359). Good Very Fine. The worship of the ancient demon Abrasax (or Abraxas) rose to great prominence in Roman times through the teachings of the Christian Gnostic Basilides of Alexandria (circa 85–145 AD), who called Abrasax the 'great archon' and the first of the 365 Gnostic Aeons. During the Roman Imperial Period, the production and use of Abraxas amulets became widespread in the west of Asia Minor through the commercial relations of Alexandria and Ephesus. Weight: 2.49 g. 686 PB Roman provincial lead amulet (AD 1st – 3rd centuries) Obv: Statue of Mother Goddess (as in the guise of Ephesian Artemis) standing facing, wearing veiled kalathos, with hands extended, having supports. Rev: Blank. The Ephesian Artemis, the 'great mother goddess' was extremely popular in the ancient world, as we might deduce from the fact that copies of her cult statue have been excavated in many parts of the Roman Empire. It is accepted that the cult of Ephesian Artemis has a close connection with the magic practices in the city and the region. In Ephesus it was primarily Artemis who was believed to give protection and blessing, with parents even dedicating their children to her. Artemis also heard prayers for safety and salvation and was able to heal. The main role of Artemis was therefore protectress and saviour. With these features, the Goddess was depicted on talismanic objects during the Roman imperial period, as seen in this example on the lead (for the amulets with Ephesian Artemis, see Bonner 1950, SMA, p. 40). Weight: 2.73 g. Diameter: 23.60 mm. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

687 AE Byzantine tessera of charity (AD 10th–11th centuries) Obv: Half-length representation of Christ lightly bearded, wearing a tunic and himation and holding the right hand in blessing and in the left hand a book with a cover ornamented three pellets. He has a nimbus cruciger. Sigla at left and right: Ι(ησοῦ)ς Χ(ριστός). Rev: Inscription of four lines: Ο ελεών πτωχόν δανείζει Θεόν. Decorations above and below. Translation: One who is gracious to a poor man lends to the LORD. In the Byzantine world, the exercise of philanthropy was institutionalized very early. The Byzantine charity tesserae provide material evidence of the organization of charitable food sharing on an ad hoc basis. Round, two-sided, struck on brass or bronze, these small monuments are often engraved with the name of the benefactor. The needy who received such a tesserae, no doubt those who were registered in the registers of the donor, had the possibility of exchanging it, on the scheduled day, for a food ration, an entrance to the baths or even for a coin. Philothea's List of Precedences, published in 899, tells us that, during certain religious festivals, the emperor invited the poor or monks to the palace to share the imperial meal or to give them a gold coin. To be able to benefit from this imperial largesse, they had to hand over the tesserae (sphragidhion) that they had previously received for this purpose. The use of tesserae for charitable distributions spread more systematically in the 10th century and gained momentum especially among the Byzantine aristocracy of the 11th century. This very rare tesserae bears a well known biblical proverb (19:17) that very well emphasizes Byzantine philanthropy. For only known similar, see A. D. Mordtmann, Sur les sceaux et plombs byzantins, Constantinople 1873, p. 15, no. 11 (but obv. bust of St John Theologos). Weight: 0.95 g. Diameter: 14.74 mm. Harrison, Excavations at Sarayane in Istanbul (Washington, D.C., 1986), 276, no. 738. Both of these similar specimens can be dated after our seal, as they also bear the title of anagrapheus of Paphlagonia. Philanthropic work was institutionalized very early in the Byzantine Empire. The Church, the State, and private benefactors established numerous charitable institutions. The Church was commissioned by her founder not only to preach a new gospel of salvation but also to feed the hungry; to clothe the needy and look after the sick; to care for the orphans and elders. It is to the credit of the Byzantine Church that she realized her social mission and sought to lighten the burden of the unfortunate by founding orphanages, homes for the aged, and other welfare institutions. Parallel, Laurent, Corpus V.1 no. 445 (it was stated that the saint on the obverse was uncertain due to the low condition of the seal). Our seal is better preserved than its sole parallel. It is listed as a suffragan of Gangra in all notitiae episcopatum, starting with pseudo-Epiphanius (Darrouzès, Notitiae, no. 1, l. 230) up to the thirteenth century. It has been suggested that the episcopal church may have been dedicated to St Stephen (J.-Cl. Cheynet–C. Morrisson, in SBS 4 (1995), 24). List of bishops in Fedalto, HEO I, 87–88. Weight: 6.00 g. 700 PB Byzantine lead seal of Theodikos hypatos (c. AD 7th–8th centuries) Obv: An eagle with its wings outspread. Between the wings, a cruciform invocative monogram (type I): Θεοτόκε βοήθει. Wreath border. Rev: Inscription of three lines: + Θεοδίκῳ ὑπάτῳ +. Wreath border. Translation: Theotokos, help Theodikios hypatos. Unpublished. This very rare name, Theodikios, itself comes from the Greek term theodikia, which can be broken down into theos + dike, which is quite literally “God + justice,” meaning, “justifying God,” especially in light of the problem of evil. Weight: 20.77 g. Diameter: 26.29 mm. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA).

701 PB Byzantine monogrammatic seal of Alexander orphanotrophos (c. AD 6th century) Obv: Cruciform invocative monogram: α, δ, ε, ν, ξ, ο, ρ, υ. Reading: Ἀλεξάνδρου. Wreath border. Rev: Cruciform monogram: α, [ν], ο, ρ, τ, υ, φ. Reading: ὀρφανοτρόφου. Wreath border. For the obv. monogram, see Zacos–Veglery, nos. 1108, 2775. For the rev. monogram, see Feind, Monogramme, p. 218. Philanthropic work was institutionalized very early in the Byzantine Empire. The Church, the State, and private benefactors established numerous charitable institutions. The Church was commissioned by her founder not only to preach a new gospel of salvation but also to feed the hungry; to clothe the needy and look after the sick; to care for the orphans and elders. It is to the credit of the Byzantine Church that she realized her social mission and sought to lighten the burden of the unfortunate by founding orphanages, homes for the aged, and other welfare institutions. Orphanotrophos was a Byzantine title for the curator of an orphanage. Orphanages were the oldest Byzantine philanthropic institutions. The Orphanotropheion of Constantinople always held the first rank among the capital's charitable foundations because it had been established first. A priest of Constantinople named Zotikos opened this institution probably in the reign of Constantius II (337–61). However, orphanotropheia appear rarely in Byzantine sources of any period. See T. Miller 2008, 'Charitable Institutions', Oxford Handbook of Byzantine, pp. 621–29. The name of Orphanotropos Alexander is known for the first time with this seal. For the list of known orphanotrophoi, see Nesbitt, "The Orphanotrophos" in SBS 8, pp. 61–62. Weight: 10.44 g. Diameter: 23.84 mm. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA).

This person may well be the Constantine Promoundenos who is attested on two seals in the Hermitage (see Šandrovskaja, Sfragistika, nos. 712, 713) as: a) magistros, vestes, judge of the Velum and of the Thrakesioi; and b) vestarches, judge of the Velum and of the Armeniakoi. A Constantine Promoundenos was hypatos and imperial notarios of the sakelle in 1088 (Patmos I, no. 49B, line 291). See also PBW Konstantinos 20304. Weight: 9.33 g. Diameter: 22.41 mm. 704 PB Byzantine seal of Symeon, primikerios, hebdomarios, and gerokomos (AD 10th–11th centuries) Obv: Inscription of five lines: Κ(ύρι)ε βοήθει τῷ σῷ δοῦλ(ω) Συμεών. Border of dots. Rev: Inscription of five lines: πριμικηρί(ω), ἑβδομαρί(ω) καὶ γηρ[ο]κόμ(ω). Border of dots. Translation: Lord, help your servant Symeon, primikerios, hebdomarios, and gerokomos. Parallel, Doaks, BZS.1958.106.1586. This is the second known and better preserved specimen. Very Rare. Philanthropic work was institutionalized very early in the Byzantine Empire. The Church, the State, and private benefactors established numerous charitable institutions. The Church was commissioned by her founder not only to preach a new gospel of salvation but also to feed the hungry; to clothe the needy and look after the sick; to care for the orphans and elders. It is to the credit of the Byzantine Church that she realized her social mission and sought to lighten the burden of the unfortunate by founding homes for the aged, orphanages, and other welfare institutions. Gerokomos (γηροκόμος) was the director of a gerokomeion, or old-age home. Justinian's novel 7.12 names the gerontokomos as an ecclesiastical official along with oikonomos, xenodochos, orphanotrophos, and others. As part of the tradition of philanthropy in the Byzantine Empire, houses for the elderly and needy under the rule of a director called gerokomos. See, Talbot, A. M., "Gerokomeion", ODB, Vol. 2, 848. Weight: 12.05 g. Diameter: 25.62 mm. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

705 PB Byzantine seal of Basil Pediadites, vestes and katepano of Antioch? Rev: Inscription of five lines beginning with a cross: +Βασίλειον βέστι(η) [...] τῷ Π [...] [...]. Decoration below. Border of dots. Since the fourth line and the last three letters of the last line of reverse inscription are unreadable, we can dubiously attribute this seal to Basil Pediadites. Cf. Wassiliou-Seibt BBÖ II p. 262, n. 159; Cheynet, Les ducs d'Antioche p. 54; PBW Basileios 106. Weight: 3.85 g. Diameter: 16.70 mm. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

Translation: Mother of God, help your servant Theodotos, hypatos and domestikos of the imperial table. Parallel, Doaks, BZS.1951.31.5.1757. The epi tes trapezes was responsible for introducing guests to the imperial banquets, waiting to the Byzantine emperor along with the pinkernes, and carrying dishes from the imperial table to the guests. Historical sources, however, show that some holders of the post were entrusted with leading troops or various other special assignments. Like many palace posts involving close access to the Byzantine emperor, it was restricted to eunuchs (ODB, 'Epi tes trapezes' (A. Kazhdan), pp. 722–723). Weight: 19.53 g. Diameter: 32.32 mm. The torch below the dog, the traces of inscription above it. Rev: Lizard within a border composed of two concentric circles decorated with diagonal lines. Dogs, and puppies in particular, were thought to have some magical properties in Roman World. Pliny praised the canine blood for its ability to ward off dangerous ghosts, and gave numerous medicinal recipes with lizard to cure everything (Pliny, N.H. 29 and 30). Dog images were among the required items for performing some spells (Ankarloo, B., and Clark, S. (eds) 1999: Witchcraft and Magic in Europe: Ancient Greece and Rome, p. 75–76). Representation of a fierce dog was intended to protect the home from the evil eye (Parker, A., and McKie, S. (eds) 2018: Material Approaches to Roman Magic: Occult Objects and Supernatural Substances, p. 343). The prevalence of dogs and lizards on magical gems and tesserae for protection is an indication of the exceptional value the animals were thought to have, an indication that they were somehow special, and therefore might be worthy of the gods. For the talismans with dogs and lizards, see The Campbell Bonner Magical Gems Database. Weight: 2.90 g. Diameter: 19.22 mm. # Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

726 PB Mysia, Cyzicus. One drachm weight (1st century BC–2nd century AD) Square in form, rounded corners. On the face, ornamented trident to r.; above, KYZ; below, denominational letters? One of the types on the Kyzikene weights include Kerykeion, an attribute of Hermes (Agoraios), the patron deity of trade and merchants. But, on this rare specimen, the trident, the symbol of the sea god Poseidon, is depicted. Thanks to its strategic location between the Black Sea and the Aegean Sea, Cyzicus is the most important ancient city of Mysia that holds the maritime trade. This piece also represents the smallest denomination of the Kyzikene weights. Its mass may correspond to a drachm. Unpublished. Cf. Concordia 2, 1096 (but stater). For Kyzikene weights, see O. Tekin, Balance Weights in the Aegean World, Istanbul 2016, pp. 69–84. Weight: 4.11 g. Diameter: 17.46 mm. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

739 Golden square pendant amulet (AD 1st–3rd centuries) A square gold pendant with an attachment loop, in set yellow glass panel within a golden frame. Evil eye (nazar) on the panel. The Greeks and Romans firmly believed that some people had the power to harm or even kill their fellow humans and destroy cattle by tending to them. βασκαίνειν in Greek means 'to kill with a glance'. The amulet used against the evil eye ὀφθαλμός βάσκανος was called baskanion. Attempts to ward off the curse of the evil eye have resulted in a number of talismans in many cultures. Belonging to this class, this 'apotropaic' talisman turns away or turns back harm. Weight: 3.68 g. Diameter: 25.60 mm. 10

Priestess of Artemis Brauronia (c. 4th–1st centuries BC) Bronze statuette of a young girl wearing pointed shoes and as an outer garment, a himation pulled up over the head. Bearskin on the back of her head and a row of braids. Piercing above the head indicates that this bronze statuette is part of a jewelry or some sort of an implement (incense burner, mirror, distaff etc). Many sources refer to young Athenian girls called ἄρκτοι (bears), who served Artemis by "acting the she-bear" at Brauron, and indeed at other sanctuaries of Artemis. 'I bore the holy vessels At seven, then I pounded barley At the age of ten, And clad in yellow robes, Soon after this, I was Little Bear to Brauronian Artemis' (Aristophanes, Lysistrata, Lines 641–647) This ritual was known as the bear festival or the arkteia.
