Tylis (Greek: Τύλις) or Tyle was a capital of a short-lived Balkan state mentioned by Polybius that was founded by Celts led by Comontorius in the 3rd century BC. Following their invasion of Thrace and Greece in 279 BC, the Gauls were defeated by the Macedonian king Antigonos II Gonatas in the Battle of Lysimacheia in 277 BC, after which they turned inland to Thrace and founded their kingdom at Tylis. It was located near the eastern edge of the Haemus (Balkan) Mountains in what is now western Bulgaria. Some bands of Celts, namely the Tectosages, Tolistobogii and Trocmi, did not settle in Thrace, but crossed into Asia Minor to become known as the Galatians. The last king of Tylis was Kavaros who maintained good relations with the city of Byzantium. His capital was destroyed by the Thracians in 212 BC. and this was also the end of his kingdom. The modern Bulgarian village of Tulovo in Stara Zagora Province now occupies the site. 10

In Greek art, kneeling, bare-waisted figures represented the lower class, such as slaves and craftsmen, as well as the silenoi. A. Furtwangler published a gold ring from southern Russia in the Hermitage in 1900 with a similar representation of a youth over a tunny, which he described as a "squatting slave boy"; interestingly with a reference to Cyzicus. In 1966 Gerassimov published a Kyzikene stater, the only analogy of our coin type and described the figure as a slave boy. See, T. Gerassimov, A Cyzicus Stater with the Representation of a Statue, Mélanges offerts à Kazimierz Michalowski (Warschau 1966), p. 429. Physical features such as forehead, nose and lips of our unique figure, which is very similar to the posture of this figure, indicate that it may be a silenos. The posture of our figure is reminiscent of Silen on the silver coins of Sicilian Naxos. Mysia, Kyzikos hekte 10

Prow, right; beneath, club. Above, ΕΥΦΡΑΓΟΡΑΣ. Ref: BMC Caria 56 (ΑΡΙΣΤΑΓΟΡΑΣ in error); R. H. J. Ashton, 'The late classical/early hellenistic drachms of Knidos', RN 154 (1999), 90. The personification of Democracy is as rare in numismatics as in art, until now attested at only two mints: Knidos and Telos (LIMC, s.v. Demokratia 4, opt for Democracy). Two passages in Aristotle, Politics, 1305b 12ff. and 1306b 3ff., apparently describe two separate overthrows of oligarchies at Knidos. The latter 'is said to have resulted from the disgust felt by some of the ruling class at the excessive despotism of the oligarchs. This has the look of an archaic event. The [former] is a reference to an oligarchy overthrown by the people, the δῆμος. This looks much more like a fourth-century revolution' (S. Hornblower, Mausolus, Oxford, 1982, 117–8). The ΔΑΜΟΚΡΑΤΙΑΣ bronzes are usually associated with Alexander's presumed restoration of democracy to Knidos after 333. However, numismatic evidence suggesting a mid-fourth century date for these coins indicates that Aristotle's democratic revolution took place during the hegemony of Mausolos or one of his successors (Ashton 1999, 91–2). Described by the Paestum Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

693 PB Historically very important and rare (late 7th-6th century BC) Obv: On the left, a goddess standing on a lion, r.; another goddess standing in front of the lion, l., holding wreath in her l. and thymiaterion in r. hand. Behind the goddess on the lion, six-rayed star. Rev: Two flanking lions, each with head reverted and roaring; stars behind them. Weight: 12.42 g. Diameter: 38.26 mm. This figuratively decorated lead medallion belongs to the group of Ionian origin, which show similarities in terms of their production technique and stylistic features, created under the influence of Near Eastern art and whose rare specimens are found in European museums. The type of lead medallions depicting a goddess standing on a lion was first introduced to the professional world by the scholars W. Deonna and H. Möbius and subsequently by O. Brehm. See, W. Deonna, Le mobilier Délien, Exploration Archéologique de Délos 18 (Paris 1938); H. Möbius, Griechisch-Orientalische Bleimedallions in Ionien, AA 1941, 1–36; O. Brehm, Griechisch-orientalische Bleimedallions, in: Mousikos Aner, O. Brehm – S. Klie (Hrsg.), Festschrift für Max Wegner zum 90. Geburtstag, Antiquitas 3, 32 (Bonn 1992) 59–74; H. Cevizoglu, Zwei Bleimedallions aus Klazomenai, in: Zurück zum Gegenstand, Festschrift für Andreas E. Furtwängler (Langenweißbach 2009), 217–224. The specimens in this group come from Samos, Ephesus, Chios, Delos and Klazomenae. Research indicates that they were used in the Middle East and Anatolia, from the 3rd millennium BC, long before discoid pendants appeared as pendants in Archaic Greek art. Various archaeological finds such as Akkadian, Old Babylonian, Neo-Assyrian, Persian, Urartian and Hittite cylinder seals, reliefs, sculptures and medallions from the 9th and 8th centuries BC have cultic scenes as their theme, in which a mighty lion strides with a goddess on its back. They all clearly point to the origin of the depiction that also adorns this medallion. As in Mesopotamian iconography, a figure standing in front of the lion testifies to her devotion to the goddess. In her outstretched hand the goddess sometimes holds a wreath. The adorant figure holds a thymiaterion. See, H. Möbius, Die Göttin mit dem Löwen, in: G. Weissner, (Hrsg.), Festschrift für Wilhelm Eilers. Ein Dokument der internationalen Forschung zum 27. September 1966 (Wiesbaden 1967) 449–468. The reverse iconography of our medallion, which is unique in Archaic Ionian lead medallions, is also of Mesopotamian origin. It shows a Master of Animals motif: two confronted lions, flanking a central figure. This pair of lions was not only a symbol of power, but also played an apotropaic role in the archaic Greek art, which they penetrated from Anatolia and Mesopotamia. The Early Greeks wore this medallion as a symbol of power and a protective amulet. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA). 10

694 PB Asia Minor. Lead gnostic ring bezel (c. AD 2nd-4th centuries) Obv: IAΩ. Abrasax facing, with the head of a rooster and snakes for legs, holding a whip in his right hand and a shield with his left. Rev: Inscription in two lines: ABP/ACAΞ. Ref.: Cf. Campbell Bonner Database 2613. The worship of the ancient demon Abrasax (or Abraxas) rose to great prominence in Roman times through the teachings of the Christian Gnostic Basilides of Alexandria (circa 85-145 AD), who called Abrasax the 'great archon' and the first of the 365 Gnostic Aeons. During the Roman Imperial Period, the production and use of Abrasax amulets became widespread in the west of Asia Minor through the commercial relations of Alexandria and Ephesus. Weight: 2.78 g. Diameter: 19.35 mm. 10

695 PB Roman provincial conical seal (AD 2nd-3rd centuries) Obv: Helios standing facing in spread quadriga, raising right hand in salute, holding globe in left. Rev: Conical surface. Sun-worship became particularly important in the Roman Empire in the first and second centuries AD with the spread of the worship of Mithras. The creed was fostered by emperors for political reasons: the sun was the royal planet par excellence, Helios Aniketos or Sol Invictus, the cosmocrator or pantocrator, represented on many Roman coins of the period. The Roman monetary type was similar to that found on this very rare seal and was used specially under the Antonines and by Caracalla who was particularly devoted to the cult of Sol Invictus. The four horses of the quadriga represented fire, water, earth, and air, the four elements of the universe which were governed by the Sun-god, the cosmocrator. Weight: 4.58 g. Diameter: 16.77 mm. 10

Miller 2008, 'Charitable Institutions', Oxford Handbook of Byzantine, pp. 621–29. The name of Orphanotrophos Peter is known for the first time with this seal. Rev: Inscription of six lines beginning with a cross: τοῖς θε]οσεβ[εστά]τοις π[ρεσ]βυτέροις καὶ ἐκκλ[ησε]κδί[κοις]. Border of dots. Translation: Most holy Mother of God, help the most reverent priests and judges of Hagia Sophia. The ekdikoi, or ekklesiekdikoi, were a group of priests who formed a tribunal, ekdikeion, which was instituted by Justinian I and assigned to Hagia Sophia. These judges defended those accused of murder and other offences; they oversaw the liberation of slaves or those freed from prison; they granted the right of asylum in the Great Church; and they instructed converts and those who had lapsed. Also, the role of the Virgin as the most powerful intercessor was closely associated with the tribunal character of the ekklesiekdikoi. Her image as an intercessor on behalf of criminals and penitents was an established iconographic type in manuscript illumination and wall paintings. An actual icon of the Virgin was kept in the inner narthex of Hagia Sophia, that is, in proximity to the seat of the tribunal. The iconography found on the Ekklesiekdikoi seals remained relatively constant from the eleventh through the fifteenth century. This group of seals consists of standing figures of the Virgin and Justinian I supporting a model of a church identified as Hagia Sophia. It is remarkable that, unlike this usual iconography, on our seal, the Virgin Mary figure is depicted alone. For the seals of Ekklesiekdikoi of Hagia Sophia, see J. Cotsonis, 'The Virgin and Justinian on Seals of the Ekklesiekdikoi of Hagia Sophia', DOP 56 (2002), 41-55. Weight: 11.84 g. Diameter: 35.82 mm. 10

Weight: 4.36 g. Diameter: 12.43 mm. Bird-figured weights are rarely seen in collections and publications, and they are difficult to date as there are no inscriptions or markings on them. However, both their weights and the depictions on them confirm that they are Byzantine weights. The weight of thousands of surviving Byzantine nomisma varies between 4.00 and 4.50 g. This can be explained by the fact that they are worn out or that their sensitivity has not been taken care of. In addition, nomisma had different names such as histamenon nomisma, tetarteron nomisma, hyperpyron nomisma between the 10th and 12th centuries, and their weight has now decreased to less than 4.50 g. With these characteristics, they are symbols that are vividly beautiful. They bring joy and happiness to the hearts of men and gods. They also reveal the creativity of gods and humans. They join the procession of Aphrodite and Eros and sometimes Dionysus. Hesiod defines the Charites as follows; Zeus married Eurynome, daughter of Oceanus, the goddess of harmony whose beauty fascinates all who see her. He had three daughters from her Charites; three beauties; Aglaie, Euphrosyne and the beautiful Thalia. 10

Her first task to Heracles was to rescue her country from bandits. Heracles easily coped with this task, the queen began to fall in love with the hero. Heracles had the same feelings to the queen. Throughout the slavery of Heracles, the queen continued to assign a number of duties to him. After a while, Omphale forced Heracles to dress in women's clothing. Omphale took the lion skin of Heracles and placed it on her back and took his stick in her hand. As a reference to this scene, on the reverse of the coin we see Omphale wearing the lion skin of Heracles and holding his stick. The presence of Heracles on the face of the coin is a symbol of the legendary love between Heracles and Omphale. 10

Strabo states that the city's founder was Kelaino, son of Poseidon (Strabo, 12.8.18). The city's early name was Kelainia. Antiochus, king of Seleucus, rebuilt the city and changed its name to Apamea, after his mother Apama. Especially with the Pan-Hellenistic thought movement that began with Hadrian, cities began to compete with each other to base their descent on their Greek-origin ancestors. The city of Apamea also featured Kelainos, a descendant of Poseidon, as its founder on its coin during the Roman Imperial period. So he traced his lineage back to powerful Greek ancestors.
