553 KINGS OF PONTOS. Polemon II, 38-64 AD. AR, Drachm. Obv: ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥC ΠΟΛΕΜΩΝΟC. Diademed head of king right. Rev: ΒΑΣΙΛΙΣΣΗΣ ΤΡΥΦΑΙΝΗΣ in three lines within a double lined circle. RecGen 25; BMC 12. Condition: VF. Weight: 3.57 g. Diameter: 18.7 mm. Polemon II was the second son and middle child of the Pontic Rulers Polemon Pythodoros and Pythodorida of Pontus. His eldest brother was Zenon, also known as Artaxias III, who was Roman Client King of Armenia. His youngest sister was Antonia Tryphaena, who was married to Cotys VIII, King of Thrace. Through his maternal grandmother he was a direct descendant of Mark Antony and his second wife, Antonia Hybrid a Minor. Antony and Antonia Hybrida were first paternal cousins. He was Antony's second born great grandson and great grandchild. Polemon II is the only known male descendant of Mark Antony that carries his name. The other male descendant of Mark Antony who carries a form of his name, Antonius, was the consul Quintus Haterius Antoninus. Through Antony, his great maternal aunt was Queen Cleopatra Selene II of Mauretania. Through Antony, he was a distant cousin to Roman Client King Ptolemy of Mauretania. Through Antony, he was also a distant cousin to Roman emperors Caligula, Claudius, and Nero, and Roman empresses Valeria Messalina, Agrippina the Younger, and Claudia Octavia. The Sophist Polemon of Laodicea was his grandson (Krystyna Stebnicka, 2007). Polemon II's father died in 8 BC. His mother then married King Archelaus of Cappadocia, and the family had moved to Cappadocia, where Polemon II and his siblings were raised at the court of their stepfather. Archelaus died in 17, whereupon Polemon II and his mother moved back to Pontus. From 17 until 38, Polemon II lived as a private citizen in Pontus and assisted his mother in the administration of their realm. When his mother died in 38, Polemon II succeeded his mother as the sole ruler of Pontus, Colchis and Cilicia. According to an honorary inscription at Cyzicus in 38, Polemon II participated in celebrating the local games in the city, honoring Julia Drusilla, the late sister of Caligula; (IGRR IV 145) in this way Polemon II expressed his loyalty to the emperor and the Roman state. With another Roman Client King, Antiochus IV of Commagene, Polemon II held athletic games in honor of Claudius in Cilicia in 47. Antiochus IV with Polemon II had showed favor towards Claudius in which they offered significant services to him. Around 50, Polemon II was attracted to the wealth and beauty of the Judean princess Julia Berenice, whom he had met in Tiberias during a visit to King Herod Agrippa I. Berenice had become a widow in 48 when her second husband, her paternal uncle Herod of Chalcis, died. She had two sons by him, Berenicianus and Hyrcanus. Berenice set the condition that Polemon II had to convert to Judaism, which included undergoing the rite of circumcision, before marriage. Polemon II assented, and the marriage went ahead. It did not last long, however, and Berenice left Pontus with her sons and returned to the court of her brother. Polemon II abandoned Judaism and, according to the legend of Bartholomew the Apostle, he accepted Christianity, only to become a pagan again. In 62, Nero induced Polemon II to abdicate the Pontian throne, and Pontus, including Colchis, became a Roman province. From then until his death, Polemon II only ruled Cilicia. This very rare coin is very important, probably because it was one of the coins that Polemon II minted during her early reign.

Bronze spoon with a long serrated handle, a wide bowl and geometric patterns on the handle. The spoon is a fascinating cultural object, often a valuable personal item at a time when the average person had very little; Spoons made of precious metal were so valuable that they were often listed in the inventories of royalty or nobility. Because of the geometric patterns, perhaps this belonged to a member of the clergy. 40
