1783 Justinian II. First reign AD 685-695. Constantinople Solidus AV 19 mm, 4,44 g very fine Justin II was the Byzantine emperor who reigned from 565 to 578 AD. He was born on November 15, 520 AD, and was the nephew and adopted son of the previous emperor, Justinian I. Justin II's reign was marked by a number of significant events and challenges. One of the major issues during Justin II's reign was the ongoing conflict with the Sassanian Empire. The Byzantine Empire and the Sassanian Empire were engaged in a series of wars over control of territories in the Caucasus and the eastern Mediterranean. These conflicts put a strain on the Byzantine economy and military resources. Another important aspect of Justin II's reign was his relationship with the Avars, a nomadic people from Central Asia who posed a threat to the Byzantine Empire's northern borders. In order to secure peace, Justin II paid large sums of money as tribute to the Avars. However, this heavy financial burden contributed to economic instability and led to increased taxation on the Byzantine population. Justin II also faced challenges within the Byzantine Empire itself. He struggled with mental health issues, and his behavior became increasingly erratic and unpredictable. He reportedly suffered from fits of insanity and periods of catatonia. This instability affected his ability to govern effectively and maintain control over his empire. In 574 AD, Justin II decided to abdicate the throne due to his deteriorating mental condition. He named his general Tiberius as his successor and retired to a monastery, where he lived until his death in 578 AD. Overall, Justin II's reign was marked by military conflicts, economic challenges, and his own personal struggles with mental health. His reign is often seen as a period of decline for the Byzantine Empire, with the empire facing significant external and internal pressures. 10
