In the Epic of Aeneas, written by Virgilius, Aeneas' flight from the city with his father and son is told. In some variations it is told Aeneas' flight with Palladion, the symbol and protector of the city of Troy. His role in this war is to flee the city and found a new kingdom and to continuing the Trojan lineage. The mother of Aeneas, who came from the Trojan royal family, was the goddess Aphrodite. Hence, Aeneas is a very noble figure with kinships based on both kings and gods. The descendants of Aeneas who settled in Italy established a new kingdom and thus formed the foundations of Rome. One day, Queen Omphale bought Heracles as slave and started giving him some tasks. Her first task to Heracles was to rescue her country from bandits. Heracles easily coped with this task, the queen began to fall in love with the hero. Heracles had the same feelings to the queen. Throughout the slavery of Heracles, the queen continued to assign a number of duties to him. After a while, Omphale forced Heracles to dress in women's clothing. Omphale took the lion skin of Heracles and placed it on her back and took his stick in her hand. As a reference to this scene, on the reverse of the coin we see Omphale wearing the lion skin of Heracles and holding his stick. The presence of Heracles on the face of the coin is a symbol of the legendary love between Heracles and Omphale. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA).

Cerberus's tail is made of snakes and there are countless snake heads on its back. Their bites are poisonous and deadly. Heracles' twelfth and final task was to capture Cerberus. This task of Heracles, who managed to capture Cerberus despite his terrible appearance, made him very impressive in Greek mythology. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA).

Of course, the irony here would be obvious. These ‘nice things’ are designed to destroy enemies and to sting like a bee or scorpion, and the message of those with the image of a bee can be understood as: “nice things sting like a bee.” See, M.
