Nero's name has become synonymous with decadent, depraved tyranny. It is surprising, then, that the first five years of his reign were looked upon as a golden age of wise, moderate government. At first true power resided in his mother's hands, but within a few months Nero's able advisors, Seneca and Burrus, had pushed Agrippina aside and seized the reigns of government. They proved excellent rulers, allowing the Senate a large consulting role, keeping finances in check and managing provincial affairs with restraint. Nero, who fancied himself more of an artist than a statesman, was content with this arrangement for awhile, but began to assert his independence after arranging the murder of his mother in AD 58 and his behavior became more erratic and tyrannical.

According to the author of the Historia Augusta, the reign of Gallienus represented one of the lowest points in Roman imperial history. Although faced by no less than thirty different usurpers, including the Gallic emperors and Zenobia, the emperor was reputed to have spent his time instead writing poetry and sleeping on a rose-covered bed. While modern historical interpretation has taken a less hostile view, it is nevertheless clear that the Gallienus' relationship with the legions was an important one; hence this commemorative series. Unfortunately, it was this need to support the military that contributed to the financial crisis of the mid-third century.

'GENIO POPVLI ROMANI' is a Latin inscription commonly found on ancient Roman coins. It translates to 'The Genius of the Roman People.' In Roman belief, 'Genius' referred to a guiding spirit associated with individuals, families, or even entire communities. The Genius of the Roman People represented the collective guardian and prosperity of the Roman populace as a whole. This inscription on coins conveyed the Roman authorities' recognition of the well-being and protection of their citizens and their commitment to the overall welfare of the empire. It symbolized the intrinsic link between the prosperity of Rome and the harmony and strength of its people Good very fine

754 Roman Empire - The mint is Rome unless otherwise stated - Constantine I Augustus, 307-337. Silver Half siliqua or medalette (1.16 g. 17 mm.), Constantinople circa 11 May 330. Star of eight rays. Laurel wreath. Dot in center. Reference : Leu-NFA sale 16.10.1984, Garrett part II, 348. Misson, NZ 1870, pp. 449-452. Of the highest rarity, apparently only the fifth specimen known. Toned and extremely fine Since this silver piece has no inscription we must rely upon its design, style and fabric for an attribution; in each instance they lead us to the Constantinian Era, even to a specific occasion: the dedication ceremonies for Constantinople in the spring of 330. The obverse depicts an eight-rayed star and the reverse a laurel wreath (the corona triumphalis) adorned with a jeweled medallion. The star and wreath individually make no other appearance on coins of this period except on base metal tesserae that are obverse-die-linked with these silver pieces, and which have the inscription O C S C within the wreath. A star within a wreath occurs on three mainstream coinages of the era: billon nummi of Helena as Nobilissima Femina struck at Thessalonica in 318-319; siliquae of the Caesars Julian II and Gallus struck at various Imperial mints between 351 and 360; and the anonymous bronzes inscribed POP ROMANVS struck for the Constantinople dedication. Since the star-in-wreath motif was not a part of Roman numismatic iconography before the Constantinian Era, or after it, this silver piece must belong here, and among these three coinages the most satisfactory parallel is offered by the POP ROMANVS bronzes. The weight of this piece, and of all silver coins and medals struck in connection with the ceremonies of 330, is problematic because there is a great variance in the weight of individual coins. The large silver medallions (see the lot above), for example, range from about 15 to 19 grams; the issue of the present medalette ranges from at least 1.2 to 1.5 grams, and the smallest silver pieces, which pair the bust of Constantinopolis or Roma with a large K or P, range from about 0.8 to 1.1 grams. The small ones seem to have been intended as one-scripulum pieces, which ideally would have weighed 1.14 grams (1/288th of a Roman pound), which was equal to one-third of a siliqua, a denomination that has been invented by catalogers and often is applied to those coins.

755 Roman Empire - Commemorative Series, 330-354. Silver 1/3 Siliqua (1.05 g. 13 mm.), Constantinople, circa 330. Helmeted and draped bust of Roma to right. Large P. Bendall Type 2. Kent pl. 13, 29. Ramskold p. 143, fig. 10A (this coin). RIC -. Vagi 3039. Well centered and attractive. nEF. This anonymous issue, which was struck in Constantinople, is part of a considerable series of similar pieces that bear a variety of busts on their obverses; they have been given a variety of identifications – mostly as members of the House of Constantine. In fact, it now seems clear that this type, with P, represents the ancient capital of Rome, and was paired with others, with K, representing the newly founded city of Constantinople, and which showed a bust of Constantinopolis on the obverse. These ceremonial coins would have been tossed to the crowds during the festivities that took place when the city was dedicated in 330.
