Certified by NGC 663808081-004 After the death of his mother Agrippina in 59 and prefect Burro in 62, the praetorian prefects Fenio Rufus and Ofonius Tigellinus became closer to the emperor, contributing to the resentment towards him, as they pandered to Nero's every vice and excess. Tacitus and Suetonius in particular report how indignant the Senate was. Military successes in Britannia and Armenia did not earn the emperor much favour and in 64 he had to face the famous fire that destroyed part of the city. Inevitably, conspiracies against him followed, the most famous of which was that of Gnaeus Calpurnius Piso, which involved eminent personalities, including the prefect Fenius Rufus, the writer Seneca, the poet Lucanus, the philosopher Paetus and even the general Corbulo, who had achieved success in Armenia. Nero attributed the merit of having survived this conspiracy to divine intervention, in particular to Jupiter Custos (=Guardian), depicted on the reverse of this aureus. Temple of Janus with laticed window to left and closed doors to right. Cf. Paul-André Besombes, "Les miroirs de Néron" in RN 153 (1998), pp. 119-140; cf. RIC² 438 (for coin). The production of these circular mirrors began during the reign of Nero, but did not continue under later emperors. They bear one or both sides of an actual dupondium or sestertius, or they bear a cast reproduction of a coin. Complete circular mirrors, such as this one, have a lid and bottom that fit into each other, and a reflecting surface made of silvered or tin-plated metal, sometimes attached to the inside of the lid or bottom by a notched surface. The first type of mirrors consists of large specimens in which the copy of the coin is set in a double or triple circle of a separately shaped mount. The second type, to which our specimen belongs, consists of mirrors whose diameter matches that of the coin and is obtained by copying or using a real coin. The artisan expertly excavated a thin disc from the right side of the coin. Given the distribution of the finds and the manufacturing technique, it is probable that such coins were made into mirrors in small bronze workshops, such as existed in many provincial villages and shrines, resulting in a very local distribution. It is an article that can be likened to a fine jewelry or toiletry item, often donated in shrines as an ex voto or buried in graves. This might lead us to consider the symbolism of the mirror helping the deceased find their way in the afterlife. Other times they are found in military settings, suggesting that they were offered by the emperor to civil or military officials. The diameter, obverse and reverse legends, and details of this extraordinary specimen suggest the use of a true sestertius for this mirror. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 10.38 g. Judaea seated right, with head resting upon hand in attitude of mourning; trophy to left. RIC² 1; Hendin 6492; Calicó 643. Before becoming emperor, Vespasian made a career distinguishing himself in the invasion of Britain (43-44), then as consul in 51 and proconsul in Africa in 63. But his most important assignment came in 67, when he was sent to Judea to suppress the 'First Jewish Revolt'. Religious hatred began to spread when, in 40, Caligula ordered a statue of him to be placed in the temple in Jerusalem. The prince died shortly afterwards, so the revolt was only postponed and exploded in 66 due, according to Flavius Josephus, to the mismanagement of the Roman procurators, especially of Gessius Florus, guilty of stealing money from the temple treasury. Vespasian, with a 60,000-strong contingent, had control of the country within a year and was preparing to march on Jerusalem when, on hearing the news of Nero's death, he interrupted military operations to support Galba and recognise him as emperor. MIB 816 (1 specimen) var. (also draped); RIC 393 (Mediolanum) var. (same). Second specimen known and first on market. According to the most popular Greek myths Rhea is said to have given birth to Zeus either in Arcadia, on Mount Lycium, or in a sacred cave on the island of Crete, rescuing him from the jaws of his father, who had already swallowed his brothers Hades and Poseidon and sisters Hestia, Demeter and Hera. Zeus, moreover, spent his childhood on Crete, under the care ofAdrastea (Nemesis) and Io, daughters of Melissaeus, and especially of Amalthea, a magical goat that produced milk rich enough to feed the future king of the gods, later assumed to be the constellation Capricorn. From its large horns originated the identification of the cornucopia as a symbol of abundance. This type of reverse, very rare for Gallienus, is more common on the coins of Valerian II, evidence of the ideological program of his father Valerian I. Indeed, by relating it to the infant Zeus/Jupiter, who would later become the king of the gods, he hoped that the young Caesar would continue the family dynasty. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 2.71 g. Roma seated left on cuirass, holding Victory standing on globe and reversed spear. RIC 1532. Very rare. Ex Fritz Rudolf Künker 288 (2017), lot 922. Flavius Claudius Constantinus was a usurper who ruled Gaul between 407 and 411. In fact, the Emperor Honorius also associated him with the throne, and later fought and defeated him. The Roman army of Britain, abandoned by Honorius, elected as emperor Constantine, a simple soldier who made himself believe he was a descendant of Constantine the Great, claiming this false genealogy through his sons, whom he renamed Constans and Julian. Constantine III initially defeated Varus, Stilicho's lieutenant sent by Honorius, then succeeded in securing the Rhine frontier with victories and military treaties and by placing garrisons between Gaul and Italy. In 408 he placed the prefect of the praetorium in Arelate, of which he made his capital, then achieved important victories against the Vandals and extended his rule into Spain. Constantine was still threatened by Honorius, who was reorganising in Italy, and by the revolt in Spain in favour of the emperor. He managed to defeat and kill Verenian and Didymus, cousins of Honorius, and demanded recognition of his title of augustus. Honorius granted him the consulship and recognised him as a colleague. In 409 Constantine faced an uprising in Britain and promised to help the emperor against Alaric's Visigoths who were penetrating Italy, thus being appointed co-emperor. With the excuse of helping Honorius, Constantine conspired against him and crossed the Alps, but was forced to return to Arelate, facing the army of Gerontius, who invaded Gaul in 411 and killed Constans. On the death of Alaric, Honorius sent Magister Constantius (future Constantius III) to Gaul, who besieged Arelate and finally had Constantine III and his youngest son Julian killed. Rev: D IUSTINIANVS SERVVS CHRISTI ET CONOP. Justinian standing facing, holding akakia and cross potent set upon three steps. Sear 1248. Son of Constantine IV and Anastasia, Justinian II became emperor at the age of sixteen and was the last of the Heraclian dynasty. He initially renewed the peace with the Arabs, also at the behest of the new caliph, 'Abd al-Malik ibn Marwan, who agreed to very advantageous terms, and also sent ten thousand Mardaites who were integrated into the Byzantine army. Justinian was thus able to concentrate on the Balkans, sending troops to subdue Bulgarians and Slavs, and achieved an important victory, after which he deported thousands of Slavs to Asia Minor, important for the strengthening of the army and the economic system linked to the working of thematic land. However, probably for religious reasons, there was soon a return to war with the Arabs (691-692), who refused to depict Christ on the coins they minted to pay tribute to Byzantium. The decisive battle took place at Sebastopolis in Armenia, where the army of deported Slavs were corrupted by the caliph's gold. The defeat was a heavy one and Armenia submitted to the Arabs. Justinian II was also hated by the people for his fierce tax policy and by the aristocracy for his concessions to small landowners. Inevitably he was overthrown after ten years of his reign, with the revolt of Leontius in 695. The emperor was imprisoned and had his nose amputated, hence the nickname 'Rhinotmetus' = 'the Slit-Nosed'. Finally he was sent into exile in Crimea. However, he did not give up. He escaped more than one assassination attempt and married the daughter of the Khazars leader, who converted to Christianity and took the name Theodora. He allied himself with the Bulgarians, granting the title of Caesar to Khan Tervel in exchange for military support. He then succeeded in retaking Constantinople in 705 and had Leontius and Tiberius II executed. His second reign was marked by his thirst for revenge against those who had made attempts on his life, especially in the city of Cherson. Hence the revolt that dethroned him the second time, led by Bardanes who, after taking the name Philippicus, cut off Justinian's head and put an end to his dynasty Condition: Near extremely fine. Weight: 4.20 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

898 JOHN V PALAEOLOGUS (1341-1391). Basilikon. Constantinople. Obv: IC - XC. Half-length figure of John V, holding cross potent and globus cruciger, above figure of Christ with hands outstretched. Rev: TIMA ANAPONIK / Γ/O/A. St. Demetrius, holding cross before chest, and John, orans, standing facing. DOC 944; LBC 846; Sear 2474 (Andronicus III). When his father, Andronicus III, died, John had not yet turned ten years old. Hence to rule would be his mother Anne of Savoy, opposed by John Cantacuzenus, the able 'megas domestikos' who had 'de facto' ruled up to that time. Another civil war thus loomed for Constantinople, already struggling to face external enemies. While in Greece, Anna had Cantacuzenus declared a "public enemy" who, in response, accepted the title of emperor given to him by the troops. On his side were the Hesychasts, Thessaly, Epirus, Aetolia and the Seljuk Turks, while Serbia supported the emperor and his mother. This bloody civil war ended up increasingly disfavoring the empire, which lost several regions to the Serbs and Turks, until Anna surrendered in 1347 and John Cantacuzenus was crowned in Constantinople, with the agreement that he would reign alone until John V came of age. The empire was now tired and worn out, flanked by the powerful Serbian kingdom of Stephan Dusan. Once John V grew up he appealed to the Venetians to get rid of the Cantacuzenus, which put Constantinople even deeper in debt. And the situation worsened when the Ottoman Turks conquered Callipolis and threatened the capital. The last chance for salvation was Pope Innocent VI, to whom John V wrote a letter in which he made the impossible promise of converting all the Byzantine people to the Roman Catholic apostolic faith. Upon the pontiff's refusal, John V then asked for help from Hungary's King Louis the Great, resulting in another failure due to the Christian king's huge demands. Moreover, on his return he was attacked by the Bulgarians and only a crusade led by his cousin Amadeus of Savoy could save him. Eventually Constantinople and Bulgaria became vassals of the Ottomans, who had also taken Macedonia. An internal revolt forced John V to accept vassalage to the Ottomans, and to split the empire, recognizing Andronicus IV and Manuel II as his legitimate successors. He died of gout in 1391, a few years before the fall of the empire. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 1.13 g. Diameter: 18 mm.
