Because the Romans were slow in securing their claim, Aristonikos, son of the earlier Pergamene king Eumenes II, filled the power vacuum, claiming the throne and taking the dynastic name Eumenes. Although he was unable to capture Pergamon, his revolt lasted four years, until he was defeated and captured by the Romans under the consul M. Perpenna. After his surrender, he was paraded through Rome and executed.

1053 Silenos (?) head applique Silenos is the general name given to elderly Satyrs. However, there is also a person named Silenos. It is claimed that he was a native or someone born from Pan's intercourse with one of the Nymphs. It is also said that he is the son of Hermes. He is often portrayed as a drunk, flat-nosed, ugly, old man, always on a donkey, and a big-bellied man who constantly falls off his donkey because he is always drunk. He wanders around in Dionysus' procession. Silenus, the instructor of Dionysus, traveled all over the world with his companions consisting of Satyrs and Maenads. He is a very smart and wise person, just like in the example of Midas, people are eager to get the secrets of life from his mouth. While Silenos is the name given to old Satyrs, Silenus is the singular name given to the old sage who was the teacher of Dionysus. Silenus are very similar to Satyrs. They are daemons with tails, horse hooves and donkey ears. They are usually old, fat, disgusting-looking, and almost always prey to a restless sexual desire. The sight of these half-human, half-horses with full manhood arouses fear among the Nymphs who share with them the wild surroundings of the mountains. Silenus and Satyrs are known for their prominent phalluses. These are mostly the personalities of forest and wild environments. They spread fear among people and lack the ability to reproduce and maintain productivity. (59.12g 34.3mm diameter)
