201 Troas, Ophrynon. AE, 1.68 g 12.34 mm. 4th century BC. Obv: Helmeted head of Hektor facing slightly right. Rev: [ΟΦΡΥ], Infant Dionysos kneeling right, holding grape bunch. Ref: SNG Arikantürk 713-6. Near Fine/Fine Ophrynon is stated as the burial place of Hector in ancient literature; it is said that a hero cult for him was established there. The depiction of the head of Hector on Ophrynon coins has three variations: In this remarkable variation, there is a sphinx on top of the helmet, wing-like feathers, apparently from a horse's mane, on the both side crests, and just below the feathers, raised cheek pieces looking like horse ears. The hero-horse connection, which is especially emphasized for Hector in the Homeric epic, has been reflected on the iconography of the helmet here. This type refers to the lines in the sixth chapter of Iliad, where Hector says farewell to his wife and son. A sphinx on top of the helmet, animal ears, flying horsehair crest and manes! With this image, Hector has the appearance that he can scare both his enemies and his son. The coin engraver depicted Hector with the perception of his son Astyanax. The parents' laughter at his reaction in a sad scene shows that they saw the helmet through his eyes - as the Ophrynonians would later imagine - and that they were enjoying the humorous moment. It is understood that the Ophrynonians knew the role of the helmet in farewell scene and referred to Homer's lines in the image of their prominent hero. This unique image of Hector also explains the epithet of korythaiolos, the meaning of which is arguable. The head on Ophrynon coins represents "(quick moving like) the stormy (wind) helmeted Hector (κορυθαίολος Ἐκτωρ)" who is likened to the galloping horses with their manes flying. S. Altınoluk, "The Head of Hector on the Coins of Ophrynon", Lycus 3 (2021), p. 42 var. 3. Described by Pactolus Numismatic Academy (PNA).

281 Ionia, Magnesia ad Maeandrum. Archepolis. Fourrée Drachm, 3.63 g 14.97 mm. Probably after 459 BC. Obv: Bearded man standing right, wearing himation (Archepolis?); holding Ion scepter and laurel branch. Rev: M- Σ to left and right of eagle standing front with wings spread. See Wenninger and Nolle 'Themistokles und Archepolis'; Kallet, L., Kroll, J. H; 'The Athenian Empire: Using Coins as Sources'. In many examples where the Archepolis can be seen on the obverse of the coin, it can be seen that he is seen with a himation and a beard. These coins were often supported by legends in which his name was mentioned clearly or abbreviated. Figures carrying laurel branches are usually identified as Apollo. The fact that the figure's body on this coin is completely covered with a himation and also a beard prevents him from being Apollo and brings him closer to the possibility of being Archepolis. Apollo appears as a particularly beardless and young figure and often wears a short tunic. This iconography of Apollo can also be found on all Magnesia coins. Furthermore, this coin differs from other examples, which are already very rare, in that there is no legend on the coin and that this coin is a period counterfeit. The Greek general Themistocles settled in Magnesia in collaboration with the Persians, lived and ruled here and also died here, as we learn from Pausanias, in 459 BC. in Magnesia. During his dominion here, he minted many coins in his name, including the Persian straps. After his death, his son Archepolis continued to mint coins. The fact that Archepolis continued to mint coins after the death of Themistocles is an indication that the Persian regime allowed the children of the families that dominated the cities to continue to rule the cities in return for their loyalty. So we see that Themistocles passed his rule to his son by inheritance. Although they owed all their power to the favor of the Persian king, these rulers were free to mint their own currency.

637 PB Greek sling bullet. Thrace. (c. 4th-1st centuries BC) Sling bullet is with an image of a bee on one side and with an inscription ΚΑΛΑ (Κάλα, Kala) on the other, which may be a name. Cf. Concordia 9, 900-902. Well known are other similar lead sling bullets – practically with alternating symbols – bee and scorpion, as on them invariably is written Κάλα, which is believed to originate from the island of Rhodes. On these sling bullets Κάλα can both be a name – Kalas, probably a military commander, so can not be a name, but a word neuter plural – καλά, which should be translated as ‘nice things’. Of course, the irony here would be obvious. These ‘nice things’ are designed to destroy enemies and to sting like a bee or scorpion, and the message of those with the image of a bee can be understood as: “nice things sting like a bee.” See, M. Manov – N. Torbov 2016, ‘Inscribed Lead Sling Bullets with the Name of Alexander the Great and with Other Names and Symbols Found in Thrace’, Archaeologia Bulgarica 20, 32. Weight: 28.06 g. Diameter: 32.91 mm.
