19 LUCANIA. Sybaris. Nomos - Stater (Circa 550-510 BC). Obv: Bull standing left, head right; V M in exergue. Rev: Incuse bull standing right, head left. HN Italy 1729; SNG ANS 828-44. The Greek colonial presence on the coasts of southern Italy and in Sicily generated very important cities and significant coin productions, initially characterized by the “incuse coin phenomenon,” which featured reverse types equal to obverse types, but in negative instead of relief. This was not simply an embossed worked foil, but an actual minting process, which involved the use of a reverse die with types rendered in relief. Various hypotheses have been advanced over time regarding this choice; there was probably a desire on the part of the Magna Graecia cities to differentiate these coins from those produced by the other Greek mints. Moreover, it could have been an expedient that made overstruck difficult, thus avoiding one of the possible causes of coin migration to places far from the issuing centers. This coin type was clearly intended for a local Magna Graecia market, as the hoards data show. Hence the existence of a circulation area controlled by the Magnogrean cities is assumed. The coinage of Sybaris is based on the “Achaean-Corinthian” weight system, with a stater of 7.80-8g, divided into three drachms, also used by Tarentum and other colonies of Achaean origin, such as Metapontion, Kroton and Kaulonia. The destruction of the city by Croton in 510 is a very important chronological term. Sybaris must have begun minting incuse coinage around 530 and may have been the first to introduce this type of coinage. The emblem chosen by the city is the bull with head reverted, found in an abundance of issues with different fractions (Drachms, Triobols and Obols). Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 7.38 g. Diameter: 30 mm.

71 KINGS OF KABYLE. Skostokos I (Circa 285/1-273/2). Tetradrachm. Uncertain mint, struck in the name of Lysimachos. Obv: Diademed head of the deified Alexander right, with horn of Ammon. Rev: ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ / ΛΥΣΙΜΑΧΟΥ / ΣΤΟΣΤΟΚΟΥ. Athena seated left, holding Nike and spear over shoulder, resting elbow on shield. Control: cult pillar to inner left. Fischer-Bossert, Lysimacheier 9; HGC 3.2, 1471. Rare. Very little is known about Skostokos, who ruled southern Thrace in the early third century. The coins attributed to him, tetradrachms and drachms, have been found exclusively in Thrace and imitate the types of Lysimachus, usually bearing Skostokos' name in the exergue. The only symbol consistently found on the reverses of these coins is traditionally identified as a herm, leading to identification of the possible mint with Sestos or Ainos. Recent studies however reject this hypothesis, rather than a 'xoanon' with a human head the symbol could be considered an 'Agyeus' or cult pillar. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 16.80 g. Diameter: 27 mm.

Aegina's coinage was very important in the Greek world. According to Ephorus, historian from Cyme, it was the first city to mint silver coinage to facilitate the mercantile practices of its inhabitants, who engaged in trade to make up for the poverty of the agricultural soil. Aegina's coinage is certainly among the oldest and played a leading role among the Aegean islands, which adopted its weight for their own coinage. Very widespread is the diffusion of early Staters from the mid-6th century BC, with the sea turtle type remaining a constant throughout production. The only variation is the change to land tortoise that occurred after the defeat suffered against the Athenians in 431, at the beginning of the Peloponnesian War. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 12.51 g. Diameter: 21 mm.

134 ATTICA. Aegina. Stater (Circa 480-457 BC). Obv: Sea turtle, head in profile, with 'T-back' design on shell. Rev: Square incuse with large skew pattern. SNG Copenhagen 507; SNG Delepierre 1522-6; HGC 6, 435. Aegina's coinage was very important in the Greek world. According to Ephorus, historian from Cyme, it was the first city to mint silver coinage to facilitate the mercantile practices of its inhabitants, who engaged in trade to make up for the poverty of the agricultural soil. Aegina's coinage is certainly among the oldest and played a leading role among the Aegean islands, which adopted its weight for their own coinage. Very widespread is the diffusion of early Staters from the mid-6th century BC, with the sea turtle type remaining a constant throughout production. The only variation is the change to land tortoise that occurred after the defeat suffered against the Athenians in 431, at the beginning of the Peloponnesian War. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 12.25 g. Diameter: 21 mm.

622 JULIUS CAESAR. Denarius (49 BC). Military mint traveling with Caesar. Obv: CAESAR. Elephant advancing right, trampling upon horned serpent. Rev: Emblems of the pontificate: simpulum, aspergillum, securis and apex. Crawford 443/1; CRI 9. With the beginning of the Civil Wars, this is the first coin issued in open defiance of the Senate, bearing the name of a private individual. There is no agreement on the place of issue, Crawford attributes it to an itinerant mint. According to D. Van Meter (The Handbook of Roman Imperial Coins) the coin, was minted in 49-48 to finance the invasion of Italy, the allegory would refer to the salvation of the Republic (the snake/dragon), crushed by Metellus Scipio (whose gens had an elephant depicted on their coins). It is generally believed that it is a dragon that is trampled upon; the African elephant would not only allude to the victory against Ariovistus in 58 BC (the dragon was on the banner of the Germans) but also to the name of Caesar, who discovered the existence of a homograph word for elephant in the Mauri' language in Mauretania. Religious emblems here depicted are symbols of priestly offices: the jug and the lituus representing the functions associated with the Pontefices and the Augures. Both ensure the legitimacy of all political action, ensuring the salvation of the Roman state through respect for the divine will. Caesar himself holds most of the religious offices and uses them for propaganda purposes in a new type of coin that emphasises his supreme authority Condition: Extremely fine; some luster in field. 680 TIBERIUS (14-37). GOLD Aureus. "Tribute Penny" type. Lugdunum. Obv: TI CAESAR DIVI AVG F AVGVSTVS. Laureate head right. Rev: PONTIF MAXIM. Livia (as Pax) seated right on throne, holding sceptre and olive branch. RIC² 29; Calicó 305a. The obverse legend calling Tiberius 'divi filius', son of God (Augustus), is one of the contradictions of what was considered one of the most controversial princes of ancient Rome. In fact, Tiberius was reluctant to accept the succession, more loyal to republican ideals. When he became emperor, he first of all refused the name 'Imperator', which was his by right. He also did not want the prestigious title of 'Father of the State' and apparently despised that of 'Augustus', which he ended up accepting, however, together with the 'imperium maius et infinitum' and the 'tribunicia potestas', which were the foundations of the Republic. He also arranged for the cult of the living emperor to be abolished. All these refusals contributed to the misunderstanding of Tiberius by his contemporaries, who were now attached to the Augustan concept of Empire. Tiberius was the son of Tiberius Claudius Nero, of noble lineage and republican orientation, and Livia Drusilla. His father had sided first with Julius Caesar, then, upon his assassination, with the Caesaricides, to join the revolt against Octavian and fall back south with Sextus Pompey. In 39 B.C. at Misenum, Nero was forced to divorce his wife to give her to Julius Caesar's heir, so Tiberius ended up in Augustus' custody and Livia gained an important political advantage. Tiberius married Vipsania Agrippina, the woman he loved and who bore him a son, Drusus, but was forced by Augustus to divorce and marry his daughter Julia. This was another blow to Tiberius who, disgusted with his new wife and politics, decided to retire to Rhodes, leaving room for Augustus' chosen heirs, Gaius and Lucius Caesar. The two, however, died (AD 2 and 4) and Augustus ended up associating Tiberius himself with the throne, whom he considered to be competent above all in military matters

Manlia Scantilla became the wife of Marcus Didius Julianus in 153, and from this marriage a daughter, Didia Clara, was born, with whom she was elected to the rank of augusta by the Roman Senate on the occasion of her husband's elevation to emperor. According to the historian Herodianus, the two women themselves suggested that Didius buy his imperial office at auction. When her husband was beheaded on 1 June 193, Manlia Scantilla was able to dispose of the body but not the hereditiy, losing the title of augusta. There are no records after that, and depictions of her and her daughter on coins or statues remain very rare. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 3.18 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

860 GORDIAN I AFRICANUS (238). Denarius. Rome. Obv: IMP M ANT GORDIANVS AFR AVG. Laureate, draped and cuirassed bust right. Rev: ROMAE AETERNAE. Roma seated left on shield, holding crowning Victory and sceptre. RIC 4. Very rare, superb portrait and well centered. Marcus Antonius Gordianus Sempronianus Africanus, better known as Gordian I, was Roman emperor for a few weeks in 238, together with his son Gordian II. Gordian I came from a wealthy family of the equestrian order related to several senators. The name Gordian suggests an Anatolian origin, from the city of Gordius. He had a sister, Antonia Gordiana, who was the mother of Gordian III. It seems that Gordian accepted the empire in old age only on the condition that his son would be associated with it, in order to succeed him. His political career began as Quaestor under Elagabalus and as Praetor and Consul under Severus Alexander. He also wrote an epic poem entitled The Antoninians to celebrate the emperor Caracalla. Gordian commanded the Legio Scythica in Syria. He held the office of governor in Britain in AD 216 and was consul suffectus under Elagabalus. The fact that his name was erased from some inscriptions in Britain suggests that he was disgraced and later rehabilitated. After a rebellion in Africa in 238, mainly because of the exorbitant taxes imposed by Maximinus, Gordian accepted the imperium offered by the army and also the title of Africanus. He entered Carthage acclaimed by the crowd and politicians, while in Rome the prefect of the Praetorians was assassinated. The Senate, happy to deprive Maximinus, accepted the new emperor, and most of the Provinces sided with him. However, Capellius, governor of Numidia and supporter of Maximinus Thrax, invaded the province of Africa with the Legio III Augusta, composed of veterans. Gordian II, was defeated and killed in the battle of Carthage. Following the death of his son, Gordian I committed suicide by hanging himself with a belt, after just twenty days of reign. Condition: Near very fine; hair eventually tooled. Weight: 2.96 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

Victory advancing right, holding wreath and palm frond. RIC² 472. Ulpianus, also called Lollianus, reigned for only a few months, in 269 AD before being killed. He was a usurper of the Emperor of Gaul Postumus and is included in the list of Thirty Tyrants in the Historia Augusta, but little is known about his origins. Postumus was a commander of the Limes Germanicus who rebelled around 260 and proclaimed himself Augustus after killing the Caesar Saloninus, son of Gallienus. He had created an empire in Gaul with its own senate, consuls and praetorians, with a capital at Augusta Treverorum (Trier) and a mint at Lugdunum (Lyon), which Laelianus also used. In 268, one of Postumus's officers, Ulpianus, rebelled against him by proclaiming himself Augustus in Mogontiacum, in Germania Superior, where the Legio XXII Primigenia was stationed, of which he probably was the commander. However, his rebellion lasted only two months, then he was beheaded, either by his own soldiers or by the soldiers of Postumus, who were besieging the capital. The siege of Mogontiacum was lethal for Postumus too. He was killed by his own soldiers for refusing to allow them to plunder the conquered city, and was immediately replaced by Marcus Aurelius Marius. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 3.02 g. Roma seated facing and Constantinopolis, resting right foot on prow, seated left, each holding sceptre and supporting between them a shield inscribed VOT/ XXX/ MVLT/ XXXX in four lines. RIC 196; Depeyrot 14/1. Very rare. Constantius II obtained the title 'Maximus Augustus' in 346, evidenced by the legend of some coins such as this Solidus, after the death of his brothers. He thus succeeded in reuniting the empire again, as his father did in 324 after the battle of Chrysopolis in which he defeated Licinius. Son of Constantine I 'the Great,' born in Sirmium, Constantius II became Caesar at age 17 and, upon his father's death in 337, became Augustus of the East. Constantius was of the Arian faith and organized a synod in Antioch in 341 to promote his own creed in opposition to the Nicene creed defended by his brother and Augustus of the West, Constans I. In 359 he also declared Arianism the state religion. On the death of his brothers, Constantine II (340) and Constans I (350) he became sole emperor and had to face the usurper Magnentius, aided in this by his sister Constantina, who managed to secure for him the strong army of General Vetranio. Thanks to this in the famous battle of Mursa, Constantius succeeded in defeating the usurper who, together with his brother and Augustus of the West Decentius, committed suicide shortly afterwards. He initially (351) appointed as Caesar his cousin Constantius Gallus, who married Constantina. Constantius Gallus was considered by the sources to be an able commander but made himself hated for his despotic ways; he also promoted a pro-poor monetary policy, in contrast to that of Constantine I and Constantius II himself, who favored gold coinage and the wealthy classes. He was thus assassinated by the aristocracy of Antioch and struck with damnatio memoriae. In his place Constantius' cousin Julian was appointed Caesar. Constantius II is remembered for attempting to bring Rome back to prominence by granting tax privileges to the Church and donating important monuments, giving the impression that he preferred the "Urbe" at the expense of his father's chosen capital. He was nevertheless forced to return to Constantinople to face the Persians, but was betrayed by Julian, who refused to march to his aid and was acclaimed Augustus by the soldiers in Paris. However, it was illness that overcame him in 361. Condition: Extremely fine; some luster in field. Weight: 4.41 g. Diameter: 23 mm.

The reverse of this Solidus glorifies the Gallic army, which proved very attached to Julian, acclaiming him Augustus in 360. Gaul was in fact overlooked by Constantius II and was paying huge taxes. Julian was able to reduce them and win the trust of the soldiers to the tune of military victories. Julian II was born in Constantinople, son of Basilina and Julius Constantius, half-brother of Constantine I 'the Great'. Because of his young age he was spared in the 337 massacre of Constantine's family members. His youthful education at the court of Constantius II was in the care of the pagan eunuch Mardonius, marked by the myth of classical culture and paganism, particularly Neoplatonism. Upon the death of Constantius Gallus, Julian took his place as Caesar in 355 and married Constantius II's sister, Helena, after which he immediately left to fight the Germans who had invaded Colonia Agrippinensium. Here, after a series of fights, he succeeded in winning the favor of the people and the army, who acclaimed him Augustus in 360, raising the ire of Constantius II. Upon the latter's death Julian became sole emperor and moved back to Constantinople, beginning to deprive the Christian Church of all the rights that had been granted to it by its predecessors, thus earning the appellation "Apostate." Although he never openly persecuted Christians, his policies undoubtedly favored pagans and Jews. Julian also distinguished himself as a man of culture, writing several works, both satirical and philosophical. His main goal was to get the Romans to return to worshipping the ancient gods, and he thought he would succeed by winning the war against the Persians of Shapur II. After a series of victories the emperor reached the gates of Ctesiphon in June 363, but at that point he hesitated and, instead of attacking the city, decided to wait until he rejoined Procopius' army. This move proved fatal, for after a hard fight at Maranga on the Tigris, he was wounded and killed at Samarra. Julian was buried at Tarsus, while peace was signed with Shapur II and Jovian, a moderate Christian, was elected new emperor. Condition: Extremely fine; some luster in field. Weight: 4.48 g. Valentinian standing facing, head right, holding labarum with cross on banner and Victory on globe. RIC 25a; Depeyrot 21/1. Flavius Valentinianus, originally from Pannonia, was a tribune of the cavalry in Gaul under Constantius II, then tribune of the 'scrutarii' (shielded soldiers) at the time of Jovian. In 364 he was chosen as emperor of the West, while in the East his brother Valens was elected, following the division of the Empire that was now necessary, all attempts at reunification having failed. The problems facing the Empire required more than one emperor. For Valentinian the main difficulty was the barbarians: first the Alamanni in Mogontiacum, then the Saxons and Picts in Britain. The various expeditions to Germany constituted a constant and costly expense to keep up the military apparatus. Valentinian also favoured the status of soldiers at the expense of civilians and especially the poor. The emperor faced the attempted usurpation of Firmus in 374-5, then was involved in settling a matter of religious disputes. Valentinian was a Christian, but he did not condemn the pagan faith. In fact, with the help of Pope Damasus, he promulgated an edict of universal tolerance by which anyone could worship the god they preferred. But when it came to preserving the stability of his dynasty, Valentinian did not hesitate to execute several members of the pagan aristocracy who were hostile to him, replacing them with trusted Christians. Valentinian I died in 375 in Pannonia, while negotiating difficult conditions with local leaders. He received the 'consecratio' for reinforcing the borders of the empire, instituting a fixed price scale and the 'defensor plebis' Condition: Extremely fine; some luster in field. Weight: 4.46 g. Flavius Valentinianus, originally from Pannonia, was a tribune of the cavalry in Gaul under Constantius II, then tribune of the 'scrutarii' (shielded soldiers) at the time of Jovian. In 364 he was chosen as emperor of the West, while in the East his brother Valens was elected, following the division of the Empire that was now necessary, all attempts at reunification having failed. The problems facing the Empire required more than one emperor. For Valentinian the main difficulty was the barbarians: first the Alamanni in Mogontiacum, then the Saxons and Picts in Britain. The various expeditions to Germany constituted a constant and costly expense to keep up the military apparatus. Valentinian also favoured the status of soldiers at the expense of civilians and especially the poor. The emperor faced the attempted usurpation of Firmus in 374-5, then was involved in settling a matter of religious disputes. Valentinian was a Christian, but he did not condemn the pagan faith. In fact, with the help of Pope Damasus, he promulgated an edict of universal tolerance by which anyone could worship the god they preferred. But when it came to preserving the stability of his dynasty, Valentinian did not hesitate to execute several members of the pagan aristocracy who were hostile to him, replacing them with trusted Christians. Valentinian I died in 375 in Pannonia, while negotiating difficult conditions with local leaders. He received the 'consecratio' for reinforcing the borders of the empire, instituting a fixed price scale and the 'defensor plebis' Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.30 g. Diameter: 22 mm.

Rev: SALVS REIP / (two stars) / SMTES. Valens standing facing, head right, right foot on bound kneeling captive, holding labarum and Victory on globe. RIC 3b.2; Depeyrot 31/2. Very rare. Flavius Julius Valens was the younger brother of Valentinian I. After serving as protector domesticus (personal guard) of Julian II and Jovian, he immediately became emperor of the East in 364 thanks to his brother who was already Augustus of the West, although the two differed in faith. Valens in fact was an Arian, while Valentinian was a Nicene Christian. The first problem was presented by the usurper Procopius, comes of Antioch, who proclaimed himself Augustus of the East in 365. Valens defeated him, sentenced him to death and struck with damnatio memoriae. He later faced the Visigoths and a second conspiracy, hatched by Theodore of Antioch. In 374 Valens celebrated the decennalia and became Maximus Augustus in 375 on the death of his brother, after which he organized an expedition against the Persians that proved unsuccessful, forcing him to sign an unfavorable peace. Another problem was the confluence of Ostrogoths and Visigoths into Roman territory across the Danube because of the advance of the Huns. The Romans were forced to accept them, but this integration was not easy; the Visigoths felt oppressed and exploited as a labor-power, resulting in an insurrection. Valens, considered a general of little ability by his contemporaries, was thus induced to recruit Goth mercenaries, with the risk that they would end up allied with his enemies. In fact, a large contingent of Visigoths, Ostrogoths, Huns, and Alamanni joined forces to fight the Romans and achieved a decisive victory at Hadrianopolis (Thrace) in 378. The tremendous defeat was caused by Gratian, who was meanwhile on the Western throne and did not arrive in time with his troops. Valens died in the battle but the Goths failed to conquer Constantinople. According to Ambrose, bishop of Mediolanum, the defeat at Hadrianopolis heralded the fall of the empire and the end of the world. Condition: Near extremely fine; some luster in field. Weight: 4.44 g. Victory seated right on cuirass, inscribing VOT/V on shield placed on small column. RIC 39a.1; Depeyrot 42/1. Flavius Valentinianus, of Augusta Treverorum (Treveri), son of Justina, ascended the throne when he was only four years old. He was elected augustus in 375 by the soldiers, because they refused to let the sole legions of Germania, who had nominated Valentinian's elder half-brother Gratian, choose the emperor. However young, Valentinian faced complicated situations with his mother and Gratian, such as the usurpation of Magnus Maximus in Britain, which was remedied by Theodosius I, who managed to prevent Valentinian from being attacked by the insurgent's legions. More complicated was the matter of the removal of the Altar of Victory from the Senate of Rome, which represented the city's glorious pagan tradition. Its removal was supported by Gratian, on the advice of charismatic figures such as Mediolanum bishop Ambrose, which led him to confront a group headed by senator Quintus Aurelius Simmachus. As much as Justina and her son were of the Arian faith and close to Simmachus, the altar was nevertheless removed to the great scandal of the court of Rome. When his mother and brother faced such situations, because of his young age Valentinian often remained in the background; moreover, he fell under the spell of a dangerous character: the Frank leader and able warrior Arbogastes, his magister equitum. Soon, however, their relationship became conflictual, partly because of the Altar of Victory, which Arbogaste wanted to see restored. Valentinian was found hanged from a tree in 392 at Vienne in Gaul. Sources disagree on the cause of death, some mentioning suicide, others leaning toward murder by Arbogaste. The emperor was probably the victim of a palace conspiracy, as Arbogaste had led to the elevation of Flavius Eugenius to augustus. The damnatio memoriae documented by some eroded inscriptions may support this hypothesis. His funeral was held in Mediolanum, at the behest of Theodosius I, by Bishop Ambrose, who also wrote a consolatory piece on the young emperor's death for the occasion. Constantinopolis seated facing on throne, head right, with foot set upon prow and holding sceptre and shield inscribed VOT / V / MVL / X; throne decorated with lions' heads. RIC 68b.2; Depeyrot 35/1. Theodosius I, called "the Great" by Christian writers, was of Spanish origin. His father was a magister equitum who fell into disgrace under Valentinian I and was later executed by Gratian. However, Theodosius' military exploits in Britain against the Alamanni and Sarmati, and in Africa against the usurper Firmus, induced Gratian to elevate him to the rank of Augustus of the East in 379, to give him control of Thrace, Dacia and Macedonia. Theodosius managed to prevent another war against the Huns and Visigoths by signing an agreement in 382, allowing them to settle in Thrace on condition that they fight for him. The need to pay these mercenaries caused a considerable tax increase for the Romans, but it proved to be a successful move. Upon Gratian's death, the usurper of Britain, Magnus Maximus, marched into Italy and threatened the throne of Valentinian II. Theodosius married Valentinian II's sister, Galla, and succeeded in defeating Magnus Maximus in 388 with troops from the Visigoths and Huns. Another threat, however, was posed by Arbogaste, a Frankish general, who was able to put Eugenius on the Western throne instead of Valentinian II. Theodosius refused to recognize his position and appointed his son, Honorius, as Augustus of the West, inducing Eugenius to invade Italy and start a war. Eugenius and Arbogaste were defeated at the Frigidus River in 394, and Theodosius became sole Augustus of the entire empire, but he died shortly thereafter in Mediolanum. His funeral was celebrated by Bishop Ambrose, and the body was transported to Constantinople, where the consecratio took place. Theodosius is remembered as a fervent believer in the Nicene faith and for issuing the Edict of Thessalonica, by which he attempted to end theological disputes. He also made Christianity the sole state religion in 380, declaring Arians and devotees of other movements heretics. In 392 he banned the pagan religion. Condition: Near mint state. Weight: 4.52 g. Sear 1600. Irene was born in Athens in 752 and was the first woman to reign as emperor. She was the wife of Leo IV with whom she had a son, Constantine VI. Initially she found herself reigning in place of her son, who was only ten years old. But when he became old enough to claim the throne, Irene did everything in her power to remain in charge, going so far as to misadvise him and even having him imprisoned. After the riots that broke out due to the blinding of General Alexios Mosele and the army's disappointment over his escape to the Bulgarians in 792, Constantine VI attempted to flee to the East, but his mother had him captured and blinded. Injuries led to Constantine's death and Irene found herself alone at the command, despite the fact that she was not particularly popular herself, both as a woman and because she was a promoter of a return to image worship and opposed iconoclasm. In 787 she organised the Second Council of Nicaea, where she condemned iconoclasm as heresy and, in order to gain the favour of the people, promoted a policy of donations and tax relief, especially for monasteries. These measures gained her popularity at the expense of state taxes, which did not help in view of defence against external dangers. The Empire was in fact threatened by the growth of the Arab caliphate and the Bulgarians in the north. Moreover, in the west Charlemagne had defeated the Lombards and was supported by the pope, who had turned his back on Constantinople. Before considering a marriage to the Frankish king in 802, Irene was deposed by a palace conspiracy, forced to take her vows and exiled to the island of Lesbos, where she died the following year.
