Achaeus was a general and kinsman of Antiochus III of Seleucid Asia Minor. Married Laodice, daughter of Mithridates II of Pontus. Appointed commander of all Asia west of Mount Taurus in 223 BC and then recovered Seleucid territories from Attalus I of Pergamum. The fourth Syrian war and the preoccupation of Antiochus and his army with Ptolemy IV and Molon provided Achaeus the opportunity to declare himself king in Phrygia in the autumn of 220, thus finally severing the ties with Antiochus III. In 218 BC Attalus regained control over the Greek cities of northern Ionia, Aeolis and Troas and the Mysian lands as far east as the Megistos river, which occupied Achaeus during the fourth Syrian war. He held power only until Antiochus had reached a peace with Ptolemy, and issued bronze coinage in his name; Antiochus then allied with Attalus to retake the territory Achaeus had claimed. Achaeus withstood a siege in the citadel of Sardis for two years. After sustaining a siege of two years, the citadel at last fell into the hands of Antiochus in 213 BC, through the treachery of Bolis (who had been employed by Sosibius, minister to Ptolemy). Bolis pledged to deliver Achaeus to safety, but turned him over to Antiochus, who immediately put him to death.

Rev.: [...]A[...] Five-pointed Armenian tiara to left. Ref.: Kovacs -; Leu Numismatik Auction 4 (2019), lot 356 (4.500 €). Apparently unpublished in the standard references and probably this is the first known example, with this weight. Fine / VF. The civic coins of Artaxata are dually dated to the Pompeian Era and the so-called Tigranid Era, which goes back to the accession of Tigranes I to the Armenian throne in 121 BC. Given that all previously known civic Armenian issues avoid Royal types, the emergence of a coin showing an Armenian tiara is both surprising and exciting. Unfortunately, the legend on the reverse is incomplete: we can only read [...]A, which perhaps stands for Artagigarta or Artaxata. However, as all the known civic coins from Artagigarta carry the city name in the form of a monogram, it is much more likely that the present coin was issued by the city of Artaxata, perhaps in the early 50s BC, like Kovacs 213-217. On the other hand, it has to be pointed out that the Armenian tiara on the reverse resembles the very rare Royal issue of Artaxias III-Zeno (18-35 AD) with Tiberius (Kovacs 189), but the rather crude flan and style do speak against such a late dating.

Anna Dalassene, was a prominent Byzantine noblewoman who lived during the 11th century. She played a significant role in Byzantine politics and was the mother of Emperor Alexios I Komnenos, one of the most notable Byzantine emperors. Hence, this seal must date between his accession in 1081 and her death some time between 1100 and 1102. She was born into the aristocratic Dalassenoï family, which held considerable influence within the Byzantine Empire. She married John Komnenos, a military commander who later became the governor of Dyrrhachium (modern-day Durrës, Albania). Together, they had several children, including Alexios. Following the death of her husband, Anna Dalassene became a key figure in the political maneuvering of the Byzantine court. As the mother of the emperor, Anna Dalassene exercised significant influence over the imperial court during her son's reign. She was deeply involved in matters of state and served as a trusted advisor to Alexios. Anna Dalassene's prominence in Byzantine politics is evident from her portrayal in historical sources, where she is described as a shrewd and capable leader. She lived to witness her son's successful reign and the restoration of stability to the Byzantine Empire. Anna Dalassene's legacy endured through her descendants, the Komnenian dynasty, which ruled Byzantium for much of the 12th century.

He devoted his whole life to the ministry of the church and became a particularly revered bishop in Smyrna and the surrounding Churches already in the 2nd century AD. Weight: 17.71 g. Diameter: 22.81 mm. The hand on the mouth is interpreted as a gesture of silence, and the female figure is therefore usually interpreted as the personified silence (Sigé). In connection with a journey of the soul, the magical papyri recommend silence as a means of protection. That the scene refers to theories of redemption or the migration of the soul before (again) birth is also underlined by the lion image, since according to several secret teachings the sign of the lion represents the starting point for the soul's formation before birth in the world. Both the figure with the hand on the mouth and the lion often appear on the gnostic gems the lion in connection with the motif of striding over a figure lying on the ground. Cf.
