Ref.: SC 955; HGC 9, 435. Fine. Achaeus was a general and kinsman of Antiochus III of Seleucid Asia Minor. Married Laodice, daughter of Mithridates II of Pontus. Appointed commander of all Asia west of Mount Taurus in 223 BC and then recovered Seleucid territories from Attalus I of Pergamum. The fourth Syrian war and the preoccupation of Antiochus and his army with Ptolemy IV and Molon provided Achaeus the opportunity to declare himself king in Phrygia in the autumn of 220, thus finally severing the ties with Antiochus III. In 218 BC Attalus regained control over the Greek cities of northern Ionia, Aeolis and Troas and the Mysian lands as far east as the Megistos river, which occupied Achaeus during the fourth Syrian war. He held power only until Antiochus had reached a peace with Ptolemy, and issued bronze coinage in his name; Antiochus then allied with Attalus to retake the territory Achaeus had claimed. Achaeus withstood a siege in the citadel of Sardis for two years. After sustaining a siege of two years, the citadel at last fell into the hands of Antiochus in 213 BC, through the treachery of Bolis (who had been employed by Sosibius, minister to Ptolemy). Bolis pledged to deliver Achaeus to safety, but turned him over to Antiochus, who immediately put him to death.

210 Ionia, Magnesia ad Maeandrum. Archepolis, son of Themistokles, after ca. 459 BC. AR, Trihemiobol. 0.79 g. - 9.19 mm. Obv.: Bearded head of Zeus(?) right, wearing tainia. Rev.: Eagle flying left; all within border of pellets within incuse square. Ref.: Nollé & Wenninger A 2a var. (differing arrangement of monograms). An extremely rare variety. Fine. The Greek general Themistokles was perhaps the most important, and certainly one of the most powerful, political figures in early fifth century Athens. He is settled in Magnesia in collaboration with the Persians, lived and ruled here and also died here, as we learn from Pausanias, in 459 BC in Magnesia. During his dominion here, he minted many coins in his name, including the Persian satraps. After his death, his son Archepolis continued to mint coins. These coins are part of the primary evidence of his otherwise little-known reign. The fact that Archepolis continued to mint coins after the death of Themistokles is an indication that the Persian regime allowed the children of the families that dominated the cities to continue to rule the cities in return for their loyalty. Although they owed all their power to the favor of the Persian king, these rulers were free to mint their own currency.

Parion, also called Parium, was a Greek city located on the border of historical lands of Troad and Mysia. In ancient times, Parion functioned as an important harbor for the surrounding settlements. There are also rumors about where the name of the Parion came from. It is said that its name may have come from Paros because it was founded by Parosians, or it may have come from Paris, the son of King Priam, one of the most important actors of the Trojan War. Antique coins from Parion testify to its great importance and advanced minting facilities. The most interesting picture, visible on the coins from the Hellenistic period, is the coat of arms. It depicts the so-called gorgoneion, i.e. the head of the Gorgon – a terrible mythological beast with sharp fangs, and hair in the form of poisonous snakes. In ancient times, gorgoneion served as an apotropaic amulet, reversing evil charms. The relation between the city of Parion and the Gorgon is not fully understood, most likely the monster was chosen as the emblem of the city to reverse bad intentions and repel attacks against its inhabitants. Perhaps it had to do with military power represented by Parion.

Ref: RIC 21; LRBC 1066; Vagi 3043. Very Fine. The Milvian Bridge is a structure of historical and strategic significance in the Roman Empire. Located over the Tiber River, northwest of Rome, it stands in the Ponte Milvio district, which is now a neighborhood of the Italian capital. The Milvian Bridge is famous, especially for an event in the early 4th century that greatly influenced the future of the Roman Empire. In the year 312 AD, a pivotal moment in the fate of the Roman Empire occurred at the Battle of the Milvian Bridge, fought at this very crossing. The battle was between Constantine (Constantine the Great) and his rival Maxentius. Constantine's successful crossing of the bridge led to his victory in the battle, ultimately strengthening his hold on the empire and eventually leading to his sole rule as the Roman Emperor. The outcome of the Battle of the Milvian Bridge is also significant for Constantine's support of Christianity and its subsequent spread throughout the Roman Empire. Traditionally, it is believed that Constantine had a vision before the battle, seeing the Christian symbol "Labarum" (the Chi-Rho), and after this vision, he carried the Labarum into battle, achieving victory under its banner. The Milvian Bridge and the battle fought upon it remain pivotal moments in Roman history. Although the bridge has undergone many repairs and alterations over time, it still holds symbolic and historical importance for Rome.

546 Hannibalianus. Rex Regum, AD. 335-337. AE, Follis. 1.11 g. - 15.88 mm. Constantinople. Obv.: FL HANNIBALIANO REGI. Bareheaded, draped and cuirassed bust right. Rev.: SECVRITAS PVBLICA. River god Euphrates reclining right, holding sceptre and reed, and resting elbow upon overturned urn from which liquid flows ; CONSS in exergue. Ref.: RIC 147. VF. The position of young Flavius Claudius Hannibalianus in the succession arrangements of Constantine I the Great (AD 306-337) remains obscure and mysterious. Rather oddly named in honor of Hannibal, one of Rome's greatest enemies, Hannibalianus was the son of Constantine's half-brother and thus the great Emperor's nephew. In AD 335 he was included in an elaborate five-way succession scheme along with his brother Delmatius and the three surviving sons of Constantine, who were all named Caesar. Hannibalianus, however, received a very different title-- Rex Regum et Pontiacarum Gentium, or "King of Kings and of the Pontic Peoples." Constantine apparently foresaw Hannibalianus as the eventual ruler of territories beyond the formal boundaries of the Empire, including the vast Sasanian Persian kingdom then ruled by Shapur II (AD 309-379). Indeed, Constantine spent his last years preparing a massive campaign against the Persians, but fell ill and died in May of AD 337, before it could be launched. The five-way succession scheme abruptly collapsed as Constantine's three sons seized control of the army and ordered the executions of their cousins. Coins of Hannibalianus were struck only at Constantinople and remain the only pieces struck to give the title "king" (REGI) to a Roman ruler. The reverse type, a reclining personification of the River Euphrates, supports the view that Constantine's eventual aim was to invade the Sasanian Persian Kingdom and install Hannibalianus at its head, thus ending the centuries-old conflict between East and West. In ancient times, Parion functioned as an important harbor for the surrounding settlements. There are also rumors about where the name of the Parion came from. It is said that its name may have come from Paros because it was founded by Parosians, or it may have come from Paris, the son of King Priam, one of the most important actors of the Trojan War. Parion was colonized twice by the Roman Empire during the reigns of Augustus and Hadrian. In the first colonization process during the reign of Augustus, it was aimed to provide land for two veterans of legion army in Parion, and in the second colonization process during the reign of Hadrian, it was aimed to honour the town by gaining it the status of a colony.

The Abduction of Persephone: Hades driving galloping quadriga right, while struggling with a protesting Persephone. Ref.: RPC IV.2, 11908. Fine / VF. Fascinating mythological reverse. This reverse depicts the famous Greek myth, Hades, god of the Underworld, abducting the beautiful Persephone, setting in motion an eternal story of love, fear, power, desire, and the cycle of the season. Hades fell in love with Persephone, the daughter of Demeter, and asked Zeus for permission to marry her. Fearing to offend his eldest brother by a downright refusal but also knowing that Demeter would not forgive him if Persephone were committed to the underworld, Zeus diplomatically answered that he could neither give nor withhold his consent. This act emboldened Hades to abduct Persephone as she was picking flowers in a meadow and carry her away in his horse-drawn chariot to the underworld.

868 Michael VIII Palaeologus, AD. 1261-1282. AE, Trachy. 2.65 g. 24.29 mm. Constantinople. Obv.: St. Tryphon, nimbate, standing facing, holding cross in right hand on chest. OA[Γ] monogrammed abbreviation of the OΑΓΙΟΣ (Saint) followed by TP (monogrammed) / V to left, and Φ / ω/ N to right, above lis. Rev.: Facing figures of Michael wearing crown and loros, holding labarum and akakia, and the Theotokos, crowning Michael. Ref.: SB 2271; Numismatik Naumann, Auction 94 (2020), lot 819, (100€). Near extremely fine. Saint Tryphon came from Lampsakos in Hellespontos Phrygia and lived in the years of the emperors Gordianus (238-244), Philip (244-249) and Decius (249-251). He came from a poor family and in his childhood, he herded geese for a living. His family was poor, so he did not receive the education he desired. Nevertheless, with personal effort and willingness he studied the Scriptures and the teachings of Jesus Christ. In the following years, he preached Christianity and was blessed with the gift of miracles with which he helped many people in need. In 250 AD he was arrested for his faith and brought before the local rulers to deny Christ. He was then subjected to horrific torture. They pierced him with swords all over his body, then tied him by the feet to horses and dragged him, in hours of terrible cold, to difficult and stony places. Moments after his gruesome death, the pagans beheaded him. The Christians received the honest relic of the Martyr and after anointing it with precious myrrh and wrapping it in a shroud, deposited it in an altar and sent it to the city of Lampsakos according to his wish. Fabulous stories are interwoven with his hagiography.

Cf. fort he obv., Gary Vikan: Art, Medicine, and Magic in Early Byzantium, in: DO Papers 38, pp. 65-86, figs 5, 7. A very interesting medallion blessing associated to Byzantine pilgrimage. Weight: 3.44 g. Diameter: 29.55 mm. Symeon the Stylite the Elder (ca. 389-459) was a notable ascetic who spent 37 years living atop a pillar near Aleppo, Syria, attracting numerous pilgrims during his lifetime and posthumously. Symeon the Stylite the Younger (521-592) followed a similar path, living on a pillar near Antioch. The Symeon tokens and medallions often depicted the stylite saints standing on their columns, sometimes flanked by angels or other religious symbols. These medallions were considered to provide spiritual benefits or healing to those who carried them. They were part of a broader tradition of pilgrimage souvenirs in the Byzantine world, similar to ampullae or other religious mementos collected by pilgrims visiting holy sites.

965 French, Champagne Seal, Theophile Roederer & Co (1864) Obv: B on scroll-work, inscription: BREVETÉS S.G.D.G. Rev: Inscription: THEOPHILE ROEDERER & CIE REIMS MAISON FONDÉE EN 1864. Weight: 10.62 g. Diameter: 22.49 mm. "BREVETÉ S.G.D.G." is a historical French patent marking indicating that a product is patented but not guaranteed by the government. It was a common phrase in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, used to signify intellectual property protection without implying any official government endorsement. The decree establishing "BREVETÉ S.G.D.G." reflects Napoleon Bonaparte's broader efforts to reform and modernize French law, including intellectual property rights. The phrase remains an important historical reference to the evolution of patent law and the commercialization of innovation in the 19th century.

981 PB Greek sling bullet. Thrace. (c. 4th–1st centuries BC) Sling bullet is with an image of a bee on one side and with an inscription ΚΑΛΑ (Κάλα, Kala) on the other, which may be a name. Cf. Concordia 9, 900–902. Well known are other similar lead sling bullets – practically with alternating symbols – bee and scorpion, as on them invariably is written Κάλα, which is believed to originate from the island of Rhodes. On these sling bullets Κάλα can both be a name – Kalas, probably a military commander, so can not be a name, but a word neuter plural – καλά, which should be translated as ‘nice things’. Of course, the irony here would be obvious. These ‘nice things’ are designed to destroy enemies and to sting like a bee or scorpion, and the message of those with the image of a bee can be understood as: “nice things sting like a bee.” See, M. Manov – N. Torbov 2016, ‘Inscribed Lead Sling Bullets with the Name of Alexander the Great and with Other Names and Symbols Found in Thrace’, Archaeologia Bulgarica 20, 32. Weight: 28.06 g.
