Bull butting right; two fish in exergue. Noe J, 16; HN Italy 1823. After the foundation of Thurium (444 BC), there was a reduction in the weight of Staters in all the cities on the Ionian Sea, probably due to the period of crisis following the burning of the Pythagorean schools. The coins of Thurium spread considerably in the region, making up for the rarefaction of those of the other mints. It is difficult to say why the minting of these Distaters was decided, which became regular after the detachment from Athens, evidenced by the type of obverse showing Athena's helmet no longer encircled by the laurel wreath but decorated with Scylla. Thurium indeed supported Athens in the war against Syracuse, but refused to recognise it as motherland in 434/3 BC Condition: Very fine. Weight: 15.51 g. Diameter: 26 mm.

Rose with bud to left and right; all within incuse square. SNG BN -; SNG Ashmolean 671. Memnon of Rhodes was one of the greatest obstacles for Alexander the Great during the Macedonian expedition against the Persian empire. He was a able strategist and admiral, to whom Darios III entrusted, along with the satrap Pharnabazos, the task of confronting Alexander by land and sea. The Macedonians won the important battle on the Granicus River (334 BC), while Memnon inflicted a heavy defeat on the sea. This represented a serious threat to Alexander who, without the supplies secured by his fleet, could not have advanced into Persian territory. Memnon, however, died in 333 of an unknown illness during the siege of Mytilene, and the Persian king was deprived of his most important general. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 3.11 g. Crocodile right chained to palm branch; wreath with long ties above, palms below. RPC I 523; SNG Copehagen 696-8. Possibly a contemporary imitation. The name of the city Nemausus derives from a Celtic god worshipped by the Volcae Arecomici, who had established their capital here, later transformed by Augustus into Colonia Augusta Nemausus (27 BC). The symbol of the city was the Egyptian crocodile chained to a palm tree that appears on the reverse of this coin series, which features the portraits of Augustus and his lieutenant Agrippa on the obverse. The types are a clear allusion to the founding of the city by legionaries returning from the Egyptian campaigns and to Augustus' victory, thanks to Agrippa, over Mark Antony at the Battle of Actium (31 BC). Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 7.14 g. Diameter: 26 mm.

274 GAUL. Nemausus. Augustus, with Agrippa (27 BC-14 AD). Ae. Obv: IMP DIVI F. Back to back heads of Agrippa left, wearing combined rostral crown and laurel wreath, and Augustus right, laureate. Rev: COL NEM. Crocodile right chained to palm branch; wreath with long ties above, palms below. RPC I 524. The name of the city Nemausus derives from a Celtic god worshipped by the Volcae Arecomici, who had established their capital here, later transformed by Augustus into Colonia Augusta Nemausus (27 BC). The symbol of the city was the Egyptian crocodile chained to a palm tree that appears on the reverse of this coin series, which features the portraits of Augustus and his lieutenant Agrippa on the obverse. The types are a clear allusion to the founding of the city by legionaries returning from the Egyptian campaigns and to Augustus' victory, thanks to Agrippa, over Mark Antony at the Battle of Actium (31 BC). Naval and military trophy facing, composed of helmet, cuirass, shield, and crossed spears, set on prow of galley right; crossed rudder and anchor at base. RIC² 265a; CRI 419. After Caesar's assassination and the defeat of the Republicans in 42 at Philippi, Mark Antony began to reorganize the East while Octavian took care of the West. Relations between the two men had never been great however Octavian married his younger sister Octavia to Mark Antony who, after an initial split, returned to Egypt to Cleopatra. Moreover, rumors circulated that Antony wanted to leave the Roman lands that belonged to him to the queen and her children. Octavian, who already had the senate on his side, needed a pretext to be allowed to declare war. He somehow managed to get his hands on the donations of Alexandria that were part of Mark Antony's will and brought the document to the senate, convincing it to start the conflict. Antony and Cleopatra relied on 230 ships and 23 legions of soldiers and intended to depart from Ephesus to reach Italy, but they were stopped by the advance of Octavian, who sailed to Dalmatia with 100 ships and 24 legions. Meanwhile, Agrippa went to the Peloponnese with 300 war galleys to block enemy supplies, then established an important base at Patras and joined Octavian. Mark Antony reached the entrance to the Gulf of Acarnania, occupying the southern peninsula, ('actio' = 'promontory'). The decisive battle was fought on September 2, 31 BC. When Cleopatra realized that the battle was turning against them, she decided to flee with her ships in the direction of Egypt, followed by Antony, leaving the rest of the fleet without its commander and forcing it to surrender. The reverse type is a clear recovery of the main type used, centuries earlier, by the Greek coins of Campania and Neapolis primarily, which evidently were still circulating at the time of Augustus. Scholarly hypotheses do not exclude the Campanian origin of the tresvir M. Durmius who struck this coin, although it is possible to trace the choice of this type to the fact that ancient coins were also collected and imitated at the time. Augustus himself was a collector according to Suetonius. Condition: Fine. Weight: 3.52 g. Diameter: 21 mm.

437 TIBERIUS (14-37). GOLD Aureus. "Tribute Penny" type. Lugdunum. Obv: TI CAESAR DIVI AVG F AVGVSTVS. Laureate head right. Rev: PONTIF MAXIM. Livia (as Pax) seated right on throne, holding sceptre and olive branch. RIC² 29; Calicó 305a. The obverse legend calling Tiberius 'divi filius', son of God (Augustus), is one of the contradictions of what was considered one of the most controversial princes of ancient Rome. In fact, Tiberius was reluctant to accept the succession, more loyal to republican ideals. When he became emperor, he first of all refused the name 'Imperator', which was his by right. He also did not want the prestigious title of 'Father of the State' and apparently despised that of 'Augustus', which he ended up accepting, however, together with the 'imperium maius et infinitum' and the 'tribunicia potestas', which were the foundations of the Republic. He also arranged for the cult of the living emperor to be abolished. All these refusals contributed to the misunderstanding of Tiberius by his contemporaries, who were now attached to the Augustan concept of Empire. Tiberius was the son of Tiberius Claudius Nero, of noble lineage and republican orientation, and Livia Drusilla. His father had sided first with Julius Caesar, then, upon his assassination, with the Caesaricides, to join the revolt against Octavian and fall back south with Sextus Pompey. In 39 B.C. at Misenum, Nero was forced to divorce his wife to give her to Julius Caesar's heir, so Tiberius ended up in Augustus' custody and Livia gained an important political advantage. Tiberius married Vipsania Agrippina, the woman he loved and who bore him a son, Drusus, but was forced by Augustus to divorce and marry his daughter Julia. This was another blow to Tiberius who, disgusted with his new wife and politics, decided to retire to Rhodes, leaving room for Augustus' chosen heirs, Gaius and Lucius Caesar. The two, however, died (AD 2 and 4) and Augustus ended up associating Tiberius himself with the throne, whom he considered to be competent above all in military matters. Condition: Very fine. Ascertained celebrations during the Republican period took place in 249 and 140 BC. Then they were held in AD 22, wanted by Augustus, and in AD 88 by Domitian, as evidenced by this denarius. 497 DIVA MARCIANA (Died 112/4). Fourrée Denarius. Rome. Obv: DIVA AVGVSTA MARCIANA. Draped bust right, wearing stephane. Rev: CONSECRATIO. Eagle standing left, head right. Cf. Woytek 719 (for prototype); cf. RIC 743 (same). The eldest daughter of the senator Marcus Ulpius Trajan and of Marcia, therefore Trajan's elder sister, she inherited her middle name, Marciana, from her mother's paternal ancestors. She married around 63 Gaius Saloninus Matidius Patricius, a very wealthy man, praetor and member of the religious college of the Arvales. From him Ulpia had a daughter Salonina Matidia. After Saloninus' death, Marciana did not remarry, although she had many pretenders due to her prestigious relationship with the emperor and her beauty. However, Trajan respected her wishes and never forced her to remarry. Her daughter Matidia instead married first a Matidius, then Lucius Vibius Sabinus, from a consular family, and from this marriage was born Vibia Sabina, future wife of Hadrian. When Vibius Sabinus died in 84 or 87, Ulpia Marciana with her daughter and granddaughters went to live in the family home of Trajan and his wife Plotina, and later in the palace. After 105 she was elevated to the rank of Augusta by her brother, the first sister of an emperor to receive this title. Although she was initially reticent, she was finally convinced by Plotina and first appeared on coins and depicted by statues. Her portrait is known for its complicated hairstyle with a high diadem. Marciana often travelled with Trajan, who considered her a trusted advisor and often asked her opinion on decisions. He also dedicated two cities to her, Colonia Marciana in Africa, and Marcianopolis in Moesia. She died between 112 and 114, when she was deified at the behest of Trajan, along with their father Marcus Ulpius Trajan. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 2.69 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

Very rare. In the months following his coronation, Hadrian immediately intended to gain the consent of the citizens of the empire and the provinces. To achieve this goal he chose to cancel the tax debts of the last sixteen years with a single generous accounting act, which amounted to over 900 million sesterces. The sum is confirmed by the transcription of the reverse legend of this sestertius (=old receipts in the amount of nine times a hundred thousand sestertii cancelled), which shows the approval of the citizens toward the emperor's actions. Saeculum Frugiferum standing left, holding trident and caduceus with cornucopia. RIC 56b. Saeculum Frugiferum is linked to the concept of eternity and the idea of 'renovatio'. A bearer of peace and justice, symbolizing the idea of a better order of the universe and the return of the Golden Age, it played a strong role in political propaganda. The Saeculum Frugiferum or 'Saeculum Aureum' is the figurative representation of the idea of time renewing itself eternally, presiding over the regular succession of Seasons, bearer of annual fruits and harvests, making itself the guarantor of an era of universal prosperity. On the coins of Clodius Albinus and Septimius Severus, he is depicted as a naked youth, equipped with the symbols of cosmic power and fertility, according to an iconography that recalls the Ba'al-Saturn of the Punic pantheon worshipped in Africa. Concordia standing left, holding double cornucopia and patera over lighted and garlanded altar to left; star to inner left. RIC 225 (Elagabalus). Ex Münzhandlung Ritter, bought before 2000 (with Ticket). Aquilia Severa, high priestess of Vesta, was Elagabalus' second wife. The marriage, celebrated in AD 220, was not well accepted by the Roman people, as the vestal vow of chastity was considered sacred. In the mind of the emperor, who identified himself with the Sun God, the marriage was meant to symbolise the union of two different religions, the Syriac and the Roman. The two however had no heirs and Elagabalus divorced Aquilia in 221 to marry Annia Faustina. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 3.28 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

Sol standing facing, head left, holding globe and raising hand. RIC 97; Calico 3186. Born to a daughter of Gordian I, sister of Gordian II, because of the young age at which he came to occupy the throne (13), Gordian did not rule directly, but the Senate did so for him. Gordian had become prince because the Senate needed to placate an uprising of the traditionalist urban plebs, bound to the dynastic ideal, and in order to take advantage of his family's wealth. Moreover, the praetorians had acclaimed him emperor just to show the Senate that they were the ones who decided who to put on the throne. Among the first moves was the dismissal of the legion in Africa because it had supported Capellianus and led to the deaths of Gordian I and II, who were deified. During his relatively long tenure there were several problems to deal with. In 240 Sabinianus, elected caesar in Carthage, prepared to make war on him, but was stopped by the governor of Mauretania. In the north the barbarians were making constant raids and sacking villages and towns. Gordian was too young to face these problems, but fortunately for him he could count on the diplomatic and military skill of Timesitheus, who had become prefect of the praetorium and granted him his daughter, Tranquillina, in marriage in 241. Rome succeeded in repelling the Persians of Shapur I in 243 thanks to Timesitheus, but on his death he was replaced as prefect of the praetorium by Marcus Julius Philip known as 'the Arab'. The latter, however, was not satisfied with this title but aimed at the throne, and he convinced the army that they needed an adult prince and not a boy. Gordian showed maturity and offered to cede the throne to Philip and become his caesar, but he was killed in 244. The Senate was informed that he had died of wounds sustained in a battle against the Persians. His body was sent to Rome where he was deified. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 5.01 g. 653 MARIUS (269). Antoninianus. Colonia Agrippinensis. Obv: IMP C MARIVS P F AVG. Radiate, draped and cuirassed bust right. Rev: CONCORDIA MILITVM. Clasped hands. RIC² 482. Marius was emperor in Gaul for a short period in AD 269. He is listed among the Thirty Tyrants in the Historia Augusta. It seems that Marius was elected by the soldiers who had killed his predecessor Postumus, because he had not allowed them to sack the newly conquered city of Mogontiacum (Mainz). Marius allowed the soldiers to loot in Mogontiacum, then moved the capital to Augusta Treverorum (Trier) as evidence of mints active there, such as the one in Mogontiacum which was probably moved to Colonia. After a few months of reign he was assassinated, the reason is not known. According to a late tradition, he was a blacksmith who made a rapid career in the Roman army, becoming an officer. After the death of Postumus, he held power for perhaps two or three days before being killed by a sword of his own making. But the story is unreliable because from the number of coins he minted, he must have reigned for at least twelve months Condition: Near extremely fine. Weight: 2.27 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

Among the best pieces in the market. Vetranio was a valiant soldier of humble origins who served under Constantine I and became magister militum under Constans I, proving himself an experienced officer. When the usurper Magnentius killed Constantus in 350, Constantina, sister of Constantius II and Constantus I, asked Vetranio to proclaim himself augustus to protect his family, as the Danubian troops would be more loyal to him than to an emperor in the far East. He was proclaimed augustus at Sirmium in March 350. Constantius, who was involved against the Sasanids, accepted him as a colleague, sending him a diadem and money and putting him in command of Danubian troops to fight Magnentius. Vetranio was initially loyal to Constantius, but then their relationship broke down and he decided to ally himself with Magnentius. The two sent a peace proposal, demanding the marriages of Magnentius to Constantina and Constantius to Magnentius' daughter, but Constantius refused. Vetranio then met with the latter first at Serdica, then at Naissus, where he was deposed on December 25, 350. Constantius managed to get the troops to acclaim him emperor and stripped Vetranio of his purple, but rewarded him with an estate at Prusa in Bithynia, where, however, he committed suicide in 356. Honorius standing facing, right foot on lion couchant left, holding long staff surmounted by stauogram and crowned by Manus Dei. RIC 1310; Ranieri 14; Depeyrot 3/1. Honorius became Augustus of the West at the age of ten at the behest of his father Theodosius I, who was intent on establishing the succession before his death. Given his young age, however, he was assisted by the valiant general Stilicho, who was half Vandal in origin and unlikely to have been aiming for the throne. The East, on the other hand, was entrusted to Honorius's brother Arcadius, and this was home to unrest because the two brothers did not like each other and were both assisted by cunning and manipulative advisers. By now there was no longer talk of a western and eastern part of the empire, but of two separate empires. Theodosius' project of a united empire in solidarity with the barbarian peoples, integrated into the Roman army, had failed. According to some historians Arcadius was the first Byzantine emperor. Stilicho faced great difficulties on the eastern front, mainly due to Alaric's Goths and other tribes crossing into Gaul. The situation precipitated and the Senate refused to pay a large sum of money to Alaric, further accusing Stilicho of conspiring with the enemy and condemning him to death in 408. It was the beginning of the end for the West, because the most valuable politician and general was lost. Honorius resided in Ravenna, where he treacherously attempted to murder Alaric, who was there to renew the 'foedus' with the emperor. This caused him to break off all negotiations and led to the famous 'sack of Rome' in 410, which marked the end of the city as capital. The news of Rome's fall represented a trauma for the empire and the collapse of the certainty of its invincibility. Honorius also did not recognize the marriage between his half-sister Galla Placidia and Ataulf, Alaric's successor. This marriage was strongly desired by the Goths and may have been a response to the crisis in the empire, as Ataulf intended to settle permanently in Roman territories by offering protection to the emperor instead of fighting him. In 413 General Flavius Constantius defeated four usurpers in the western provinces, succeeded in signing a peace treaty with Ataulf, and became associate emperor under the name Constantius III (421) but, unrecognized by the eastern empire, died shortly thereafter. With her two Roman imperial dynasties were united, the Valentinianic dynasty (her maternal grandfather was Valentinian I) and her father's Theodosian dynasty. In 390 she received the title 'nobilissima,' which gave her dignity on a level with her brothers (Arcadius, Honorius, and Gratianus). After the sack of Rome in 410, Alaric's Visigoths left the city and took with them Galla Placidia, then 18 years old, as a hostage to force Honorius to concede to their demands for tribute and land. Upon Alaric's death, Ataulf led the Visigoths and Galla Placidia to Gaul, whom he took in marriage by Roman rite in 414 at Narbo, naming her queen of the Visigoths, hoping for Honorius' recognition. But the marriage was not recognized by the court in Ravenna, and Ataulf elected Priscus Attalus emperor, who was defeated by the Roman army, captured and sent to Honorius. Ataulf and Galla Placidia then traveled to Spain (early 415), where the king died shortly thereafter. The successor Walha, in exchange for a large amount of grain, agreed to fight for the Romans against the Vandals and Suebi in Spain, and to give back Galla Placidia, who returned to Ravenna with Constantius, who became her husband and was rewarded by Honorius with the consulship (417). Constantius III and Galla Placidia had two children, Justa Grata Honoria and the future emperor Valentinian III, on whose behalf Galla actually reigned for more than a decade. She died in 450, shortly after Justa Grata Honoria's marriage to Bassus Herculanius, and was buried in Rome in a chapel in the old St. Peter's Basilica. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.46 g. Almost nothing is known about Johannes Primicerius except that he died in Aquileia in 425 and was the chief of the congregation of notaries, the civil officials of the Western Empire. When Emperor Honorius died in 423, Theodosius' nephew, Theodosius II, delayed choosing a successor, perhaps thinking of reuniting the two empires under his own command. Castinus, an esteemed victorious general against the Visigoths, obtained from the Senate the proclamation of Johannes and the appointment of consul for himself. With this gesture, however, Castinus made himself an enemy of Theodosius and of Galla Placidia, who probably wanted to have Valentinian, who was then four years old, elected and become his mentor. Johannes' brief reign was marked by tolerance for all non-Christian confessions, unlike the previous emperors of the lineage of Theodosius. Praised by Procopius of Caesarea for his temperance and intelligence. But rebellions were not long in coming: the military garrison of Arles rose up and assassinated the prefect of the praetorium, while Bonifatius rebelled in Africa, blocking grain supplies directed to Rome. Johannes then attempted to make peace with Theodosius, who instead confirmed the appointment of Valentinian III and Galla Placidia and began the conflict. Johannes in 424 sent his collaborator Flavius Aetius to seek military support from the Huns, and closed in on Ravenna. The Eastern army, however, easily descended into Italy and besieged the city, which fell thanks to the corruption of the garrison. Johannes was captured and deposed, then sent to Aquileia where he was beheaded. A few days later Aetius arrived with a large Hunnic contingent, but he came to an agreement with Galla Placidia: the Huns were paid off and sent back home, while Aetius became magister militum. Castinus instead ended up in exile. Condition: Near extremely fine. Weight: 1.45 g. Diameter: 13 mm.

Valentinian standing facing, with foot set upon serpentine human head, holding long cross and crowning Victory on globus. RIC 2018; Ranieri 95; Depeyrot 17/1. Flavius Placidius Valentinianus was born in 419 to Constantius III and Galla Placidia, placed very young on the throne after the death of Honorius, who had left no heir, while the court of Ravenna had chosen Johannes as augustus in an attempt to free itself from the control of the Eastern Empire. Appointed caesar in 424, he was crowned augustus of the West in Rome the following year, but his mother Galla ruled in his stead for more than a decade. Despite her diplomatic prowess Galla Placidia was in trouble when she faced the valiant general Flavius Aetius, who had sided with Johannes and for him gained the support of the Huns. After the defeat of the usurper Galla could not put the general to death, but she put him back to work in the Gauls, where he displayed great military experience and earned the title of 'magister militum'. Flavius Aetius, in fact, found himself in charge of a power greater even than that of the young emperor and his mother, and did his best to contain barbarian pressure on the Rhine and Danube fronts, while he could do nothing against Genseric's Vandals who conquered Carthage. Another serious threat was posed by the Huns who, having renounced tribute from the Eastern Empire under Marcian control, turned to the West: the sister of Valentinian III, Justa Grata Honoria, unwilling to marry the man for whom her family had destined her, sent a plea for help to Attila, in some ways legitimizing his coming to the West. This started a war in Gaul. Aetius prevailed in the battle near the Catalaunian Fields (451) but Attila, although defeated, managed to sack Mediolanum. Here occurred the famous and mysterious meeting with pope Leo I the Great, who succeeded in getting him to desist from an invasion of Italy (453). Attila died shortly afterward, however. The end of Valentinian III's reign came, however, at the hands of his most trusted advisers. Jealous of the power Aetius was gaining, the eunuch Heraclius and the prefect of the praetorium in Rome, Petronius Maximus, persuaded the emperor to get rid of him (454). Without Aetius Valentinian had deprived himself of his own power and was murdered the following year by two assassins sent by Maximus. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.47 g. Diameter: 22 mm.

Emperor standing facing, wearing crown with trefoil ornament, holding long cross and crowning Victory on globe, right foot on human-headed serpent. RIC 2201; Depeyrot 48/1. Extremely rare. Petronius Maximus was born in Rome in 397, coming from the prominent Anicia family. Thanks to his father, a consul, he began his long career at age 14 and soon became praetor, serving under three emperors, Honorius, Johannes, and Valentinian III. By 445 he was appointed patrician and had become the most distinguished and richest of the senators. He even financed a forum in Rome on the Caelian. When he came into conflict with Valentinian III, Petronius Maximus decided to get Flavius Aetius out of the way first, agreeing with the eunuch Heraclius to persuade the emperor to kill the important general. Petronius therefore asked to take the place of Aetius and, upon Valentinian's refusal, hired two assassins to kill the emperor in 455. Thereupon he forbade Empress Licinia Eudoxia to observe mourning for her husband's death and forced her to marry him, then appointed her son Palladius as caesar and gave him in marriage one of Valentinian and Licinia's daughters. Petronius failed, however, to gain recognition from the Eastern emperor, Marcian, and had to face the threat from North Africa. Licinia in fact asked for the help of Genseric's Vandals, who headed for Rome and caused terror and riots in the city. Petronius attempted to flee but was assassinated and thrown into the Tiber. Only gold Solidi were struck in his name, in the mints of Rome and Ravenna, and no silver or bronze denominations. His portrait is characterized by the sole use of the pearl diadem, in total contrast to the rosette diadem of the other emperors of the period. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 4.44 g.
