Ref.: SC 955; HGC 9, 435. Fine. Achaeus was a general and kinsman of Antiochus III of Seleucid Asia Minor. Married Laodice, daughter of Mithridates II of Pontus. Appointed commander of all Asia west of Mount Taurus in 223 BC and then recovered Seleucid territories from Attalus I of Pergamum. The fourth Syrian war and the preoccupation of Antiochus and his army with Ptolemy IV and Molon provided Achaeus the opportunity to declare himself king in Phrygia in the autumn of 220, thus finally severing the ties with Antiochus III. In 218 BC Attalus regained control over the Greek cities of northern Ionia, Aeolis and Troas and the Mysian lands as far east as the Megistos river, which occupied Achaeus during the fourth Syrian war. He held power only until Antiochus had reached a peace with Ptolemy, and issued bronze coinage in his name; Antiochus then allied with Attalus to retake the territory Achaeus had claimed. Achaeus withstood a siege in the citadel of Sardis for two years. After sustaining a siege of two years, the citadel at last fell into the hands of Antiochus in 213 BC, through the treachery of Bolis (who had been employed by Sosibius, minister to Ptolemy). Bolis pledged to deliver Achaeus to safety, but turned him over to Antiochus, who immediately put him to death.

154 Troas, Assos. AR Drachm, 3.52 g 14.17 mm. Circa 500-440 BC. Obv: Satyr; bearded, curly hair, muscular legs and arms; running right. in archaic style. Rev: Head of lion, right; roaring and tongue out; within square incuse. Bucephalus Numismatic Auction, 4 Lot, 171; BMC 1 = Traité I 691 (Termera in Caria); HPM pl. XVII, 21 (Thraco-Macedonian) = De Luynes 1529 (Lete in Macedon). Fine/ Extremely RARE. The reverse type elaborate in style, head of a roaring lion with protruding tongue facing right and in an incuse square, is stylistically quite similar to that shown in drachms with griffin of Assos. These very rare drachms without the ethnic should be attributed to Assos. Also, the cultic connections of the satyr in Assos is another evidence. A nymph head is depicted in Assos' obols (with and without the Assian ethnic) dated to 430-410 BC (see for example Gorny&Mosch, Au 212, lot 1747). The nymph and satyr types may both be related to a local Aegean cult, in Assos possibly connected to a spring such as the one monumentalized in Roman times (and still pouring water) that can be seen by the sea close to the harbour (for the nymph type, L. Lazzarini, Assos Troadis: the beginning of coinage and its later silver emissions in the V and IV century BC, p. 37).

Ref: Boston MFA 1626; BMC 1; Traité II 2298, pl. CLXIII, 25; SNG von Aulock -; SNG Copenhagen -. VF/EF, Very rare The most common examples of Assos are the griffin and the lion head group. In this group, instances where the lion's head and the griffin look in opposite directions are extremely rare. The coins of Assos with these types are mostly obol. This example is extremely rare in that the types look in different directions. It is also one of the lesser known drachmi examples of Assos. lightly loved toned, the lines are clearly processed.

Rev.: Eagle flying left; all within border of pellets within incuse square. Ref.: Nollé & Wenninger A 2a var. (differing arrangement of monograms). An extremely rare variety. Fine. The Greek general Themistokles was perhaps the most important, and certainly one of the most powerful, political figures in early fifth century Athens. He is settled in Magnesia in collaboration with the Persians, lived and ruled here and also died here, as we learn from Pausanias, in 459 BC in Magnesia. During his dominion here, he minted many coins in his name, including the Persian satraps. After his death, his son Archepolis continued to mint coins. These coins are part of the primary evidence of his otherwise little-known reign. The fact that Archepolis continued to mint coins after the death of Themistokles is an indication that the Persian regime allowed the children of the families that dominated the cities to continue to rule the cities in return for their loyalty. Although they owed all their power to the favor of the Persian king, these rulers were free to mint their own currency.

The legend ΑΒΥΔΟC on the obverse of the coin clearly indicates Ktistes Abydos, as it is not used as an ethnicon. Coins featuring the young head of the city founder with his name inscribed around it are mostly found on the coins of Kyzikos. In this respect, the coins of the two cities share a significant resemblance. This magnificent example, depicting the young head of Abydos, holds great importance in terms of the city's mythology and history.

Ganymedes, naked, wearing Phrygian cap, walking left, looking right, holding pedum, an eagle (Zeus in disguise) with wings spread behind him, giving him the appearance of being winged. Ref: BMC 28; Mionnet II, 183. Very Fine. Ganymedes is the most beautiful of mortals. He is of the Dardanian lineage, a member of the royal family of Troy. Zeus sent his eagle to abduct Ganymedes. The abducted Ganymedes serves as the cupbearer at the table of the gods. On the reverse side of the coin, Ganymedes is seen being abducted by the eagle's claws.

Helmeted Hector standing in galloping biga, right, head, right or left, holding transverse spear and shield. Ref: Bellinger T 179; von Fritze, Ilium 79. Very Fine. Very Rare! Hector is the eldest son of Priam, the king of Troy, and Hekabe. Homer describes him in his epic as the 'equal of Ares'. Hector and Achilles were the two most important figures of the Trojan War. Perhaps the most impressive and dramatic scene of the war is the fight between Hector and Achilles, which ends with Hector's death. In a sense, Hector became the symbol of Troy, and Achilles the symbol of the Achaeans. Hector is a calm, measured, virtuous hero who defends his homeland in Ilias. His people saw him as the protector of their city and were very saddened by his death.

Ref: RPC unassigned; ID 20274; Matern 78. Very Fine. Very Rare! Second known example. One of Heracles' labors was to bring back some of the cattle guarded by Geryones, a giant with three heads and six arms, who stood at the end of the world. However, reaching Geryones was more difficult than dealing with the giant himself. First, Herakles had to cross the Libyan Desert. During this time, he was so overwhelmed by the heat that he shot an arrow at the sun; this action somehow moved the sun god Helios, who gave Herakles a boat. When Herakles reached Geryones' island, he fought the giant and successfully took the cattle from him. On the reverse side of the coin, the moment when Herakles confronts Geryones in this mythological story is depicted. It is a very rare scene and is seldom seen on coins.

1088 Axum. Time of Ezanas. Anonymous, C. 359-380. AE, Lepton. 1.44 g. 14.87 mm. Obv: BACI - ΛEYC. Draped bust to right, wearing headcloth; within several circle borders. Rev: TOYTOAPCCHTHXΩPA. Cross within circle. Ref: Vaccaro 28; BMC Axum 83-244. Very Fine. The most significant development in religious imagery and legends following Ezana's conversion to Christianity in the mid-4th century was undoubtedly seen in the Axumite bronze coinage. This coinage, initially issued during Ezana's reign and continued by his successors, stands out for incorporating the cross as a central design feature. The cross, representing Christ as the divine King of Kings, contrasts with the king's portrait on the front of the coin, who serves as Christ's earthly representative. The inscription on the reverse, 'TOYTO APECH TH XΩPA', means 'May this please the country', clearly indicating the state's commitment to promoting the new religion among the Axumite people, likely accompanied by a rise in the use of currency.

1269 PB Greek sling bullet. Thrace (c. 4th–1st centuries BC) Sling bullet is with an image of a scorpion on one side and with an inscription ΚΑΛΑ (Κάλα, Kala) on the other, which may be a name. Cf. M. Manov – N. Torbov 2016, ‘Inscribed Lead Sling Bullets with the Name of Alexander the Great and with Other Names and Symbols Found in Thrace’, Archaeologia Bulgarica 20, no. 23. Well known are other similar lead sling bullets – practically with alternating symbols – scorpion and bee, as on them invariably is written Κάλα, which is believed to originate from the island of Rhodes. On these sling bullets Κάλα can both be a name – Kalas, probably a military commander, so can not be a name, but a word neuter plural – καλά, which should be translated as ‘nice things’. Of course, the irony here would be obvious. These ‘nice things’ are designed to destroy enemies and to sting like a scorpion or bee, and the message of those with the image of a scorpion can be understood as: “nice things sting like a scorpion.” See, M. Manov – N. Torbov 2016, ‘Inscribed Lead Sling Bullets with the Name of Alexander the Great and with Other Names and Symbols Found in Thrace’, Archaeologia Bulgarica 20, 32. Weight: 29.64 g.
