21 SICILY. Akragas. Didrachm (Circa 485-480/78 BC). Obv: AKRA - CAS. Sea eagle standing left. Rev: Crab, with carapace in the form of a human face, within incuse circle. Westermark 164 (O68/R111); SNG Copenhagen 28 (same dies); SNG Lockett 703 (same dies); HGC 2, 94. Historical sources give the date of Akragas' founding as the 50th Olympiad (585-580 BC), placing it among the last Greek colonies established in Sicily. The settlers probably came from Rhodes and Gela, under the command of the ecists Aristonoo and Pistilos, who located a site not far from the sea on the Akragas River, after which the city was named. During the tyranny of Phalaris (570-555 BC) the city built walls and began an expansionist campaign, later continued by Theron (488-473), who won an important battle victory over the Carthaginians at Himera, gaining a vast territory. From that time Akragas experienced enormous political, economic and cultural development, culminating in the period of democratic rule, which was established after the death of Theron. In 406 BC the city was besieged by the Carthaginians, who finally sacked and burned it several times, without however, favoring the establishment of a Punic colony. With Timoleon's victory over Carthage in 339, the city was rebuilt on the same site, then taken back by the Carthaginians and remained under their influence until 210, when it passed into Roman hands at the end of the Second Punic War. The eagle depicted on the obverse of this coin, and on most of the issues of Akragas, is surely to be related to Zeus, to whom the inhabitants dedicated the most important temple in the city. The crab, on the other hand, which appears on all the reverses, is associated with Poseidon, demonstrating the city's great connection with the sea from the time of its founding, which was important for its economy related to maritime trade. On some silver coins, such as this one, a human face appears on the carapace of the crab, most likely depicting the river god Akragas in an original way Condition: Very fine. Weight: 8.83 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

26 SICILY. Lilybaion (as 'Cape of Melkart'). Tetradrachm (Circa 330-305 BC). Obv: Charioteer driving quadriga right, holding kentron and reins; Nike flying left above, crowning charioteer. Rev: Head of Arethusa right, wearing triple-pendant earring and necklace; surrounded by three dolphins. Jenkins, Punic 51; CNP 310; HGC 2, 741. Lilybaion was located at the site of today's Marsala on the western tip of Sicily. The name, literally 'facing Libya' is a direct reference to the geographical location. The city was founded in 397 BC by refugees who survived the destruction of Motya by Dionysius I, who created an important centre thanks to its strategic position and impregnable stronghold, which was later reinforced by the Carthaginians. The fortress was able to resist Pyrrhus in 276 BC and the almost ten-year siege by the Romans during the First Punic War. Following the Roman victory against the Carthaginians and the Treaty of Eryx, the city passed to the Romans and took the name Lilybaeum, continuing to play an important military and commercial role in the Republican period. Its naval base was used by Scipio to finally destroy Carthage. It was also an important base for Julius Caesar during his civil war against Pompey. The abundance, style and coin types minted by Lilybaion testify to the wealth and importance achieved by the city in the Punic period. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 17.40 g. Diameter: 26 mm.

Aegina's coinage was very important in the Greek world. According to Ephorus, historian from Cyme, it was the first city to mint silver coinage to facilitate the mercantile practices of its inhabitants, who engaged in trade to make up for the poverty of the agricultural soil. Aegina's coinage is certainly among the oldest and played a leading role among the Aegean islands, which adopted its weight for their own coinage. Very widespread is the diffusion of early Staters from the mid-6th century BC, with the sea turtle type remaining a constant throughout production. The only variation is the change to land tortoise that occurred after the defeat suffered against the Athenians in 431, at the beginning of the Peloponnesian War Condition: Very fine. Among the Greek poleis, Athens is undoubtedly the city that denotes the greatest monetary development. The earliest coinage followed the reforms attributed to Solon on the introduction of Attic weights to replace the Eginetic ones. These early coins, called "Wappenmünzen," were replaced by the "owls" at the end of the 6th century: tetradrachms marked with the head of Athena and the owl, next to which is now the ethnic of the Athenians. These types will last, with variations in style, until the end of silver production (c. mid-1st century). The most noticeable change occurs with the so-called "new style," established from the beginning of the 2nd century BC. In these issues the owl is surrounded by an olive wreath, which is why the tetradrachms are referred to in the inscriptions as "stephanephoroi" (= wreath bearers). Coins of new style also bear inscriptions with the names of magistrates Condition: Very fine. Weight: 16.67 g. Diameter: 29 mm.

The Dioscuri standing facing each other, each holding spear; [ΘΑΡ (date) in exergue]. SNG BN -; SNG Levante 1546; SNG von Aulock 5562. The name 'Dioscuri', sons of Zeus, is used to represent the Thebans Amphion and Zethus, but especially the Spartan twins Castor and Pollux. In actually only Pollux was Zeus' son, as was his sister Helen, while Castor and Clytemnestra were generated by Leda with her husband Tyndareus, who raised all four of them anyway. The Dioscuri took part in several heroic ventures of antiquity and were opponents of Theseus who, with Pirithous, had kidnapped their sister Helen; in fact, they went to rescue her while Theseus was a prisoner in the Underworld and also took his mother with them, making her Helen's slave. They also duelled with the brothers Ida and Lynceus, after kidnapping their women Phoebe and Ilaira. Only Pollux survived the duel, who chose to share with Castor the fate of spending alternately a day among the dead and a day among the immortals. The Dioscuri were also worshipped by the Romans and the constellation Gemini refers to them. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 10.07 g. Diameter: 26 mm.

The Dioscuri standing facing one another, each holding spear and grape bunch; ΘΚΦ (date) in exergue. Rouvier 1746; BMC 108. The name 'Dioscuri', sons of Zeus, is used to represent the Thebans Amphion and Zethus, but especially the Spartan twins Castor and Pollux. In actually only Pollux was Zeus' son, as was his sister Helen, while Castor and Clytemnestra were generated by Leda with her husband Tyndareus, who raised all four of them anyway. The Dioscuri took part in several heroic ventures of antiquity and were opponents of Theseus who, with Pirithous, had kidnapped their sister Helen; in fact, they went to rescue her while Theseus was a prisoner in the Underworld and also took his mother with them, making her Helen's slave. They also duelled with the brothers Ida and Lynceus, after kidnapping their women Phoebe and Ilaira. Only Pollux survived the duel, who chose to share with Castor the fate of spending alternately a day among the dead and a day among the immortals. The Dioscuri were also worshipped by the Romans and the constellation Gemini refers to them. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 12.09 g. Diameter: 25 mm.

RPC VI online 8654; Rouvier 2395-6; BMC 416. Aquilia Severa, high priestess of Vesta, was Elagabalus' second wife. The marriage, celebrated in AD 220, was not well accepted by the Roman people, as the vestal vow of chastity was considered sacred. In the mind of the emperor, who identified himself with the Sun God, the marriage was meant to symbolise the union of two different religions, the Syriac and the Roman. The two however had no heirs and Elagabalus divorced Aquilia in 221 to marry Annia Faustina. Condition: Fine. Weight: 11.67 g. Diameter: 28 mm.

Hadrian was born in Italica or Rome in 76 AD to an influential family; his grandfather had been a member of the senate. Having soon been orphaned, Hadrian was entrusted to his cousin Trajan, who acted as his tutor and granted him in marriage one of his great-granddaughters, Sabina, in 100 AD. It was therefore quite natural that on Trajan's death Hadrian should succeed him, although he had never adopted him. In fact at the prince's death the senate received letters from Trajan mentioning Hadrian's adoption, but according to Cassius Dio they were signed by his widow Plotina. Probably Lucius Licinius Sura, his future and greatest general, also made great efforts for Trajan to consider Hadrian's candidacy. Hadrian is remembered as a literate monarch, a lover of Greek letters and neosophistic philosophy. The new emperor had a very different political conception from that of his predecessor, beginning with the renouncing of the expansionism so much desired by Trajan in order to focus more on the defense of imperial borders, as evidenced by the construction of Hadrian's Wall. His reign was also marked by the travels he embarked on between 121 and 132, a way of learning about and expressing respect for every corner of the empire. Indeed, he visited numerous regions and garrisons, reserving special interest for the armies and the discipline of the soldiers. Despite his efforts to avoid any armed conflict, Hadrian had to deal with a Jewish revolt that erupted because he had renamed Jerusalem as the Colonia Aelia Capitolina, after his family name, for having a temple dedicated to Jupiter Capitolinus erected there and for forbidding circumcision, a custom he perceived as barbaric, despite not being hostile to Judaism. The revolt was very bloody and led by Simon bar Kochba, who lost his life in the last battle. In internal politics Hadrian gave his best, eliminating unnecessary expenses and undertaking magnificent public works, not only in Rome. He also asked his jurists to collect all edicts that would ensure greater justice for the weaker, but went to the disadvantage of the Senate, which responded with conspiracies. Hadrian managed to escape these attempts and sent all the conspirators to death, earning himself a very bad reputation. For this he publicly apologized and engaged in a series of food concessions to the people, forgave a huge amount of debt, and promised not to use

697 GORDIAN III (238-244). Aureus. Rome. Obv: IMP CAES M ANTONINVS AVG GORDIANVS. Laureate, draped and cuirassed bust right. Rev: P M TR P II COS P P. Providentia standing facing, head left, holding sceptre and globe. RIC 23; Calicó 3213. Born to a daughter of Gordian I, sister of Gordian II, because of the young age at which he came to occupy the throne (13), Gordian did not rule directly, but the Senate did so for him. Gordian had become prince because the Senate needed to placate an uprising of the traditionalist urban plebs, bound to the dynastic ideal, and in order to take advantage of his family's wealth. Moreover, the praetorians had acclaimed him emperor just to show the Senate that they were the ones who decided who to put on the throne. Among the first moves was the dismissal of the legion in Africa because it had supported Capellianus and led to the deaths of Gordian I and II, who were deified. During his relatively long tenure there were several problems to deal with. In 240 Sabinianus, elected caesar in Carthage, prepared to make war on him, but was stopped by the governor of Mauretania. In the north the barbarians were making constant raids and sacking villages and towns. Gordian was too young to face these problems, but fortunately for him he could count on the diplomatic and military skill of Timesitheus, who had become prefect of the praetorium and granted him his daughter, Tranquillina, in marriage in 241. Rome succeeded in repelling the Persians of Shapur I in 243 thanks to Timesitheus, but on his death he was replaced as prefect of the praetorium by Marcus Julius Philip known as 'the Arab'. The latter, however, was not satisfied with this title but aimed at the throne, and he convinced the army that they needed an adult prince and not a boy. Gordian showed maturity and offered to cede the throne to Philip and become his caesar, but he was killed in 244. The Senate was informed that he had died of wounds sustained in a battle against the Persians. His body was sent to Rome where he was deified Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 5.15 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

Given his young age, however, he was assisted by the valiant general Stilicho, who was half Vandal in origin and unlikely to have been aiming for the throne. The East, on the other hand, was entrusted to Honorius's brother Arcadius, and this was home to unrest because the two brothers did not like each other and were both assisted by cunning and manipulative advisers. By now there was no longer talk of a western and eastern part of the empire, but of two separate empires. Theodosius' project of a united empire in solidarity with the barbarian peoples, integrated into the Roman army, had failed. According to some historians Arcadius was the first Byzantine emperor. Stilicho faced great difficulties on the eastern front, mainly due to Alaric's Goths and other tribes crossing into Gaul. The situation precipitated and the Senate refused to pay a large sum of money to Alaric, further accusing Stilicho of conspiring with the enemy and condemning him to death in 408. It was the beginning of the end for the West, because the most valuable politician and general was lost. Honorius resided in Ravenna, where he treacherously attempted to murder Alaric, who was there to renew the 'foedus' with the emperor. In 390 she received the title 'nobilissima,' which gave her dignity on a level with her brothers (Arcadius, Honorius, and Gratianus). After the sack of Rome in 410, Alaric's Visigoths left the city and took with them Galla Placidia, then 18 years old, as a hostage to force Honorius to concede to their demands for tribute and land. Upon Alaric's death, Ataulf led the Visigoths and Galla Placidia to Gaul, whom he took in marriage by Roman rite in 414 at Narbo, naming her queen of the Visigoths, hoping for Honorius' recognition. But the marriage was not recognized by the court in Ravenna, and Ataulf elected Priscus Attalus emperor, who was defeated by the Roman army, captured and sent to Honorius. Ataulf and Galla Placidia then traveled to Spain (early 415), where the king died shortly thereafter. The successor Walha, in exchange for a large amount of grain, agreed to fight for the Romans against the Vandals and Suebi in Spain, and to give back Galla Placidia, who returned to Ravenna with Constantius, who became her husband and was rewarded by Honorius with the consulship (417). Roma seated facing on throne, holding crowning Victory on globe and sceptre. Cf. RIC 1404 (for prototype). Extremely rare. Priscus Attalus was an influential senator of Greek origin and a skilled orator, a friend of Symmachus. After the siege of Rome by the Visigoth Alaric in 408, in which an agreement was also reached thanks to him, Attalus was placed at the head of a delegation to the imperial court in Ravenna during the empire of Honorius, to continue the diplomatic work with Alaric. Back in Rome, he was charged with confiscating the property of Stilicho's supporters, then obtained the important post of 'praefectus urbi' of the city of Rome. He first usurped the throne in 409 when, in agreement with Alaric, he besieged Ravenna where Honorius had taken refuge. The emperor offered him to share power, but Attalus refused and was forced to return to Rome to deal with the grain shortage caused by the blockade of African ports, ordered by Heraclianus who was loyal to Honorius. Following his refusal to place a Goth at the head of an expedition against Heraclianus, Alaric deposed Attalus in 410, imprisoned him and sacked Rome. When Alaric died, Attalus remained in the Visigoths' entourage, following them to Gaul, and delivered the marriage panegyric for the new king Athaulf and Galla Placidia in 414. In the same year Constantius III, Honorius' general, began a military operation against the Goths, and Athaulf appointed Priscus Attalus emperor for the second time. Almost nothing is known about Johannes Primicerius except that he died in Aquileia in 425 and was the chief of the congregation of notaries, the civil officials of the Western Empire. When Emperor Honorius died in 423, Theodosius' nephew, Theodosius II, delayed choosing a successor, perhaps thinking of reuniting the two empires under his own command. Castinus, an esteemed victorious general against the Visigoths, obtained from the Senate the proclamation of Johannes and the appointment of consul for himself. With this gesture, however, Castinus made himself an enemy of Theodosius and of Galla Placidia, who probably wanted to have Valentinian, who was then four years old, elected and become his mentor. Johannes' brief reign was marked by tolerance for all non-Christian confessions, unlike the previous emperors of the lineage of Theodosius. Praised by Procopius of Caesarea for his temperance and intelligence. But rebellions were not long in coming: the military garrison of Arles rose up and assassinated the prefect of the praetorium, while Bonifatius rebelled in Africa, blocking grain supplies directed to Rome. Johannes then attempted to make peace with Theodosius, who instead confirmed the appointment of Valentinian III and Galla Placidia and began the conflict. Johannes in 424 sent his collaborator Flavius Aetius to seek military support from the Huns, and closed in on Ravenna. The Eastern army, however, easily descended into Italy and besieged the city, which fell thanks to the corruption of the garrison. Johannes was captured and deposed, then sent to Aquileia where he was beheaded. A few days later Aetius arrived with a large Hunnic contingent, but he came to an agreement with Galla Placidia: the Huns were paid off and sent back home, while Aetius became magister militum. Castinus instead ended up in exile Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 1.46 g. Diameter: 14 mm.

Valentinian standing facing, with foot set upon serpentine human head, holding long cross and crowning Victory on globus. RIC 2018; Ranieri 96; Depeyrot 17/1. Flavius Placidius Valentinianus was born in 419 to Constantius III and Galla Placidia, placed very young on the throne after the death of Honorius, who had left no heir, while the court of Ravenna had chosen Johannes as augustus in an attempt to free itself from the control of the Eastern Empire. Appointed caesar in 424, he was crowned augustus of the West in Rome the following year, but his mother Galla ruled in his stead for more than a decade. Despite her diplomatic prowess Galla Placidia was in trouble when she faced the valiant general Flavius Aetius, who had sided with Johannes and for him gained the support of the Huns. After the defeat of the usurper Galla could not put the general to death, but she put him back to work in the Gauls, where he displayed great military experience and earned the title of 'magister militum'. Flavius Aetius, in fact, found himself in charge of a power greater even than that of the young emperor and his mother, and did his best to contain barbarian pressure on the Rhine and Danube fronts, while he could do nothing against Genseric's Vandals who conquered Carthage. Another serious threat was posed by the Huns who, having renounced tribute from the Eastern Empire under Marcian control, turned to the West: the sister of Valentinian III, Justa Grata Honoria, unwilling to marry the man for whom her family had destined her, sent a plea for help to Attila, in some ways legitimizing his coming to the West. This started a war in Gaul. Aetius prevailed in the battle near the Catalaunian Fields (451) but Attila, although defeated, managed to sack Mediolanum. Here occurred the famous and mysterious meeting with pope Leo I the Great, who succeeded in getting him to desist from an invasion of Italy (453). Attila died shortly afterward, however. The end of Valentinian III's reign came, however, at the hands of his most trusted advisers. Jealous of the power Aetius was gaining, the eunuch Heraclius and the prefect of the praetorium in Rome, Petronius Maximus, persuaded the emperor to get rid of him (454). Without Aetius Valentinian had deprived himself of his own power and was murdered the following year by two assassins sent by Maximus Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.46 g. Diameter: 22 mm.

After the defeat of the usurper Galla could not put the general to death, but she put him back to work in the Gauls, where he displayed great military experience and earned the title of 'magister militum'. Flavius Aetius, in fact, found himself in charge of a power greater even than that of the young emperor and his mother, and did his best to contain barbarian pressure on the Rhine and Danube fronts, while he could do nothing against Genseric's Vandals who conquered Carthage. Another serious threat was posed by the Huns who, having renounced tribute from the Eastern Empire under Marcian control, turned to the West: the sister of Valentinian III, Justa Grata Honoria, unwilling to marry the man for whom her family had destined her, sent a plea for help to Attila, in some ways legitimizing his coming to the West. This started a war in Gaul. Aetius prevailed in the battle near the Catalaunian Fields (451) but Attila, although defeated, managed to sack Mediolanum. Here occurred the famous and mysterious meeting with pope Leo I the Great, who succeeded in getting him to desist from an invasion of Italy (453). Attila died shortly afterward, however. The end of Valentinian III's reign came, however, at the hands of his most trusted advisers. Jealous of the power Aetius was gaining, the eunuch Heraclius and the prefect of the praetorium in Rome, Petronius Maximus, persuaded the emperor to get rid of him (454). Justa Grata Honoria was the first daughter of Galla Placidia and Flavius Constantius, elder sister of Valentinian III, and was given the title of Augusta probably in 426. In 449, with her husband Eugenius, she attempted to overthrow her brother but the plot was unraveled and Eugenius was put to death. Honoria then offered herself in marriage to Attila. The king of the Huns accepted the marriage proposal and demanded half of the Western Empire as dowry, but Valentinian refused, although Theodosius II was in favor. Honoria had her life saved through the intercession of Galla Placidia, but she was forced to go into exile and marry the senator Bassus Herculanus. Unusually almost complete obverse. Of Armenian origin and son of the patrician Nicephorus, Bardanes was an official of Justinian II. He was exiled in 703 by Tiberius II. When Justinian II returned to the throne of Constantinople in 711, he decided to punish Cherson, the place of his exile. The city reacted with a revolt headed by Bardanes, who was acclaimed basileus under the name of Philippicus. He marched to Constantinople and deposed the emperor. However, his empire was not very successful and was short-lived. Philippicus was an ardent monothelite and immediately declared monothelism to be the only orthodox doctrine. He also had paintings of the Sixth Ecumenical Council destroyed, replacing them with his own effigy and that of Patriarch Sergius, the father of monothelism. Pope Constantine I reacted harshly and proclaimed a sort of 'damnatio memoriae' of the emperor, forbidding the use of his name in official acts. Philippicus was in effect the first iconoclast in Byzantine history, although this was not yet a true condemnation of icons. The biggest problem, however, was the Bulgarians pressing in from the north and the Arabs from the south. At that point the Opsikion 'thema,' a military district in Anatolia, rebelled against him and had him captured, also because of the emperor's faith. Philippicus was blinded and died in prison. His successor was Anastasius II

(globe surmounted by cross); MIB 27 var. (same); DOC -. Extremely rare. Artemius was an imperial secretary during the reign of Philippicus before overthrowing him in 713, ascending the throne as Anastasius II. He immediately took an oath of orthodoxy to move away from the religious views of his predecessor, of monothete faith, in order to realign with tradition. Foreign policy posed a greater danger, as the Arabs were expanding into Asia Minor in the absence of a solid Byzantine dynasty. Anastasius thus organised a great naval expedition to Rhodes, but an internal betrayal led to his defeat and the rebels appointed a new emperor, a tax collector named Theodosius. Anastasius then faced a civil war, which ended after six months when the rebels prevailed with the help of the Ostrogoths. The emperor was forced to become a monk, but continued to plot to regain his throne, trying to gain the help of the Bulgarian Khan.
