Ref: SNG Arikantürk 713-6 Ophryinion is stated as the burial place of Hector in ancient literature; it is said that a hero cult for him was established there. The depiction of the head of Hector on Ophryinion coins has three variations: In this glamorous variation, his helmet resembles the helmet of Athena shown in three-quarter view with a triple-feathered crest and raised cheek pieces as seen on the coins of the neighboring city of Sigeion. The image of Hector, helps explaining the epithet of korythaiolos in Iliad, the meaning of which is arguable. The head on Ophryinion coins represents "(quick moving like) the stormy (wind) helmeted Hector (κορυθαίολος Ἑκτωρ)" who is likened to the galloping horses with their manes flying. S. Ref: CAESAR Aeneas, left, carrying palladium in right hand and Anchises on left shoulder, border of dots. Extremely Fine. Aeneas, son of the goddess Aphrodite and the Trojan prince Anchises... During the Trojan War, his mother Aphrodite was his tutelary goddess. Spending his childhood on the slopes of Mount Ida, the Trojan hero settled in Italy after the Trojan War and founded a kingdom, which will be the basis of Rome. On the coin we can see the old father of Aeneas. On his shoulders and in his other hand we see Palladium, the symbol of the city. In connection with a number of mysterious myths and the myth of the founding of the city of Ilion, Palladion was sent to Italy by Aeneas. Remus and Romulus, who founded afterwards the city Rome, are descended from Aeneas, i.e. from the Trojan family tree. Julius Caesar also traces his descent back to Aeneas and used this coin to refer to his own descent. Described by Pactus Numismatic Academy (PNA).
