Cross within circle. Ref: Vaccaro 28; BMC Axum 83-244. Very Fine. in good condition. The most significant development in religious imagery and legends following Ezana's conversion to Christianity in the mid-4th century was undoubtedly seen in the Axumite bronze coinage. This coinage, initially issued during Ezana's reign and continued by his successors, stands out for incorporating the cross as a central design feature. The cross, representing Christ as the divine King of Kings, contrasts with the king's portrait on the front of the coin, who serves as Christ's earthly representative. The inscription on the reverse, 'TOYTO APECH TH XΩPA', means 'May this please the country', clearly indicating the state's commitment to promoting the new religion among the Axumite people, likely accompanied by a rise in the use of currency.
