3 ANCIENT GREECE. KINGDOM OF LYDIA. Kroisos. Silver 1/16 Stater, circa 561-546 BC. Sardes. Obv: confronted foreparts of lion right and bull left. Rev: incuse square. About Extremely Fine; a fine example of the type. The coinage of Kroisos, also known as Croesus, the wealthy King of Lydia (reigned c. 595-546 BC), is notable for being among the first bimetallic coinages, featuring both gold and silver coins. These coins, introduced around 550, are significant for their innovative standardisation and high purity, setting a precedent for future coinage systems. The silver coins typically featured a lion and a bull, symbolising strength and power. Kroisos' coinage facilitated trade and economic stability in the region, influencing monetary practices across the ancient world and laying the groundwork for the widespread adoption of coinage in Greece and beyond. 4 Greek Kings of Lydia. Sardeis. Kroisos 560-546 BC. 1/12 Siglos AR Confronted foreparts of lion right, with extended right foreleg, and bull left / Incuse square. Nearly Very Fine Berk 26-7; Traité I 413; SNG von Aulock 2880. Kroisos, also known as Croesus in Greek mythology and history, was the king of Lydia, an ancient kingdom located in western Anatolia (modern-day Turkey). Kroisos is renowned for his wealth and power, making him a prominent figure in both Greek history and mythology. He ruled Lydia during the 6th century BCE, overseeing a prosperous kingdom known for its advancements in commerce and minting the first standardized coins made of electrum, a natural alloy of gold and silver. One of Kroisos' notable achievements was expanding Lydia's influence and wealth through strategic alliances and trade routes that extended across Asia Minor and into Greece. His wealth became legendary, earning him the reputation of being the richest man of his time. Kroisos' reign is also marked by his interactions with neighboring powers, including the Greek city-states and the rising Persian Empire under Cyrus the Great. His alliance with the Oracle of Delphi, seeking advice on potential conflict with Persia, famously led to a misinterpretation that ultimately resulted in his defeat by Cyrus. Despite his defeat, Kroisos remained a symbol of wealth and prosperity in Greek and later Western traditions. His story serves as a cautionary tale about the unpredictability of fate and the transient nature of material wealth. In summary, Kroisos, or Croesus, was a pivotal figure whose reign symbolized Lydia's prosperity and strategic importance in ancient Anatolia. His legacy endures through historical accounts, myths, and philosophical reflections on the nature of wealth and power in human societies. Weight:0,8 gr Diameter:7,5 mm

8 KINGS OF LYDIA. Alyattes, circa 610-560 BC. 1/96 Stater (Electrum). Lion's paw with five toes, one with a claw. Rev. Irregular square punch. GRPCL G45. Karwiese Type 3, 27. Very rare, one of the smallest coins ever issued. Toned. Minor marks, otherwise, good very fine. This coin is a perfect example of how a good idea, in this case, the provision of very low value coins for payment purposes, proves highly impractical. This coin was intended for small purchases - since it was made of electrum it did have a real worth - but it was so tiny as to be massively difficult to use. And, of course, it would be very easy to lose. In Athens, and probably everywhere else, few people had purses to store small change, and so they tended to keep such coins in their mouths(!). In fact, Aristophanes made a joke about that: he had one of his characters walking around rather aimlessly when, suddenly, someone came up behind him, slapped him on the back, and, caused him to swallow his obols! This was, apparently, a real laugh riot in late 5th century BC Athens. Weight:0,5 gr Diameter:6 mm

ÎPI AGWNOQ-Î-T-OU ARTÎ MA/G / APAMÎWN Athena, wearing long chiton and peplos, seated l. on rock, shield at her side, helmeted head turned r., playing double aulos and checking her image reflected in the water; she is watched by Marsyas, nude, hidden behind rock in upper l. field. SNG von Aulock 3497 (this specimen). Very rare and interesting mythological representation. Very fine , EXTREMELY RARE. Athena was believed to have invented the aulos (double pipe). Hera and Aphrodite laughed when Athena played her pipes because her puffed cheeks distorted her face. Suspicious Athena decided to see for herself by observing her reflexion in a river as she played. Upon seeing the unflattering result, she discarded the pipes, which were then picked up by Marsyas; Marsyas later challenged Apollo to a contest, matching his pipes with Apollo's lyre. 332 Anonymous. 4th-3rd century B.C. Æ cast aes formatum . Cast bronze in the form of a cockle shell. Thurlow & Vecchi p. 20; Burgos P.28. Fifth century Rome saw the official valuation of bronze at equivalents of oxen and sheep, when in c. 450 the decemvirs codified the Roman Law in the famous 'Twelve Tablets' which recognized the bronze currency in use in central Italy (i.e., 1000 Asserae= 1 ox, 100 lbs of bronze = 1 ox, 10 Asserae= 1 sheep, etc). A system of barter with copper objects had long existed in central Italy where copper was plentiful and valued while silver was rare and gold nearly non-existent. The Italic population had produced Aes Rude from very early times and they are often found in hoards of votive deposits to divinities of fountains and rivers from the first half of the 1st millennium B.C. down to the end of the 4th century B.C. Called aes formatum by Haeblerlin, this very rare bronze currency was a precursor to the issues of aes grave but later than aes rude. Weight:3,5 gr Diameter:25,1 mm
