Price 1417; ADM II Series XIII Condition: Good very fine Weight: 4.26 g Diameter: 18.02 m Antigonos I Monophthalmus (382 - 301 BC) was a Macedonian Greek general and successor of Alexander the Great. A prominent military leader in Alexander's army, he went on to control large parts of Alexander's former empire. He assumed the title of basileus (king) in 306 BC and reigned until his death. He was the founder of the Antigonid dynasty, which ruled over Macedonia until its conquest by the Roman Republic in 168 BC. Antigonos likely served under Philip II of Macedon. He took part in Alexander's invasion of Achaemenid Persia and was named satrap of Phrygia. After Alexander's death in 323 BC, he also received Pamphylia and Lycia in accordance with the Partition of Babylon. However, he later incurred the enmity of Perdiccas, the regent of Alexander's empire, and was driven from Phrygia. He fled to Greece and formed an alliance with Antipater, later joined by Ptolemy, against Perdiccas. Perdiccas was murdered by his own officers in 320 BC, and Antipater was elected the new regent. During a series of wars between Alexander's successors, Antigonos briefly emerged as the most powerful of the Diadochi, ruling over Greece, Asia Minor, Syria, Phoenicia and northern Mesopotamia. Cassander, Seleucus, Ptolemy and Lysimachus formed a coalition against him, which culminated in his decisive defeat and death at the Battle of Ipsus in 301 BC. His kingdom was divided up by Lysimachus and Seleucus, but his son Demetrius survived and went on to seize control of Macedonia in 294 BC. His kingdom was divided up by Lysimachus and Seleucus

Rev: FIDEI - EXE-RCITVI (sic) Three military standards, each with vexilla; the central one also bears a medallion inscribed VIC / AVC. BMC, p.76. Cohen 20. RIC 19 An extremely rare issue of Niger from the Imperial mint at Caesarea. Condition: Good very fine Weight: 2.66 g Diameter: 17.43 m Gaius Pescennius Niger (c. 135 - 194) was a Roman usurper from 193 to 194 during the Year of the Five Emperors. He claimed the imperial throne in response to the murder of Pertinax and the elevation of Didius Julianus, but was defeated by a rival claimant, Septimius Severus, and killed while attempting to flee from Antioch. Niger issued denarii from both Antioch in Syria and Caesarea in Cappadocia, the coins from Antioch being far more plentiful than those from Caesarea. There are many hundreds of varieties of Niger's denarii - and many, like our coin, with grammatical errors: the reverse here reads FIDEI EXERCITVI instead of FIDEI EXERCITVS, i.e., "To the Loyalty to the Army" instead of "To the Loyalty of the Army" - which indicates that the output was absolutely enormous, yet his coins are quite scarce today. This suggests after Pescennius's defeat Septimius Severus ordered a total recall of all of his opponent's coins; subsequently they were all melted down and the bullion used to strike aurei and denarii in his own name.

Eudokia Makrembolitissa was the daughter of John Makrembolites and a niece of Michael I Cerularius, the patriarch of Constantinople, whose sister had married Makrembolites (Garland 2002). John, who belonged to the aristocracy of Constantinople, allied with Cerularius in 1040 to conspire against Emperor Michael IV, but their plan was stopped soon after (Alexander, 1991). The birth date of Eudokia is unknown, but scholars often place it c. 1030 (Treadgold 1997). In 1059 she married the newly crowned emperor Constantine X, an elderly civil servant ill-suited to the succession of military crises that soon plagued the Empire. When Constantine died in May 1067, Eudocia assumed the regency for her two sons, Michael VII and Constantius. The mounting crises soon forced her to marry a distinguished general, Romanus Diogenes, who ascended the throne as Romanus IV on 1 January 1068. The coinage of Eudocia as senior ruler is quite limited.
