VORWORT

Sehr geehrte Damen und Herren

Mit grosser Freude präsentieren wir Ihnen die Saalauktion 18 – unsere erste Auktion, die sich ganz dem Mittelalter sowie der Neuzeit widmet und ausschliesslich Münzen und Medaillen dieser spannenden Epochen umfasst. Diese Auktion markiert einen bedeutenden Meilenstein in der Entwicklung unseres Hauses und stellt einen weiteren Schritt in der konsequenten Erweiterung unseres numismatischen Angebots dar. Unser Anspruch bleibt dabei unverändert: Wir wenden dieselben hohen Qualitätsstandards an, wie Sie sie seit jeher von unseren Auktionen antiker Münzen kennen.

Die wissenschaftliche Bearbeitung dieser Auktion sowie die Erstellung des vorliegenden Katalogs lagen in den Händen von Herrn Til Horna, der seit Oktober 2024 nicht nur unsere umfangreichen Webauktionen mit grossem Engagement vorbereitet, sondern auch die Leitung unserer neu geschaffenen Abteilung für mittelalterliche und moderne Numismatik übernommen hat. Für seinen herausragenden Einsatz danken wir ihm herzlich und freuen uns auf eine erfolgreiche Auktion.

Ziel unserer künftig halbjährlich stattfindenden Saalauktionen für mittelalterliche und moderne Münzen und Medaillen ist es, die faszinierende Vielfalt der Numismatik dieser Epochen in all ihren Facetten abzubilden. Wie bei unseren Antikenauktionen legen wir auch hier besonderen Wert auf die Qualität, Seltenheit, historische Bedeutung und Provenienz der angebotenen Stücke. Unser Alleinstellungsmerkmal ist nicht allein die Schönheit der angebotenen Münzen, sondern die Art und Weise, wie wir sie präsentieren: mit ausführlichen Beschreibungen, präzise wiedergegebenen Legenden und Darstellungen, fundierten historischen Kommentaren, gewissenhafter Provenienzrecherche und grossformatigen Fotografien – ergänzt durch unsere weltweit geschätzten Still-Life-Aufnahmen, die ganz besondere Stücke ins rechte Licht rücken.

Zu den besonderen Höhepunkten dieser Auktion zählen mehrere Reihen seltener und hervorragend erhaltener Münzen aus der Schweiz, aus Deutschland mit Schwerpunkt Sachsen, aus Frankreich und Flandern sowie aus Italien und den Vereinigten Staaten.

Das Titelstück der Auktion ist eine äusserst seltene Schweizer Medaille zu 20 Dukaten von Jean Warin aus Neuchâtel anlässlich der Vermählung von Henri II d'Orléans-Longueville mit Anne-Geneviève de Bourbon-Condé (Los 1257) – ein nur in zwei Exemplaren in Gold bekanntes Stück und somit von grösster Bedeutung. Es ist uns eine besondere Ehre, dieses herausragende Zeugnis numismatischer Kunst in unserer ersten Mittelalter- und Neuzeitauktion anbieten zu dürfen. Dem künftigen Besitzer gratulieren wir bereits jetzt zu dieser aussergewöhnlichen Rarität! Ein weiteres Glanzstück der Auktion ist eine arabo-sasanidische Drachme von Abd al-Malik ibn Marwan (Los 1015), die sowohl aus ikonographischer als auch historischer Perspektive als zentrales Stück der frühislamischen Numismatik gilt. Und «last but not least» möchten wir auf ein einzigartiges, bisher unpubliziertes Exemplar eines Medio Maravedi von Sancho IV el Bravo aus Sevilla hinweisen (Los 1216). Diese Münze war der Fachwelt bisher unbekannt und besitzt daher eine herausragende historische und kunstgeschichtliche Bedeutung für die mittelalterliche Geldgeschichte Spaniens.

Diese drei Beispiele verdeutlichen die enorme Bandbreite und Tiefe der mittelalterlichen und neuzeitlichen Numismatik – und welche faszinierende Geschichten sich hinter den Prägungen verbergen. Es ist unser erklärtes Ziel, diese Geschichten durch unsere Auktionen lebendig werden zu lassen und Sie mit auf diese spannende Reise durch die Vergangenheit zu nehmen.

Wir wünschen Ihnen nun viel Freude bei der Lektüre unseres Katalogs und hoffen, Sie am 31. Mai und 2. Juni 2025 persönlich im Zunfthaus zur Saffran in Zürich, virtuell über Internet oder Telefon begrüßen zu dürfen. Viel Erfolg beim Bieten!

FOREWORD

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,

It is with great pleasure that we present Auction 18 – our inaugural floor sale devoted exclusively to the coins and medals of the Middle Ages and the modern era. This event represents a significant milestone in the evolution of our firm and a further step in the ongoing expansion of our numismatic program. Our commitment to excellence remains unchanged: the same rigorous standards of quality that have long defined our auctions of ancient coins apply equally here.

The scholarly curation of this sale and the compilation of the present catalogue were entrusted to Til Horna, who, since October 2024, has not only overseen our extensive web auctions with great dedication but also assumed the leadership of our newly established department for medieval and modern numismatics. We are deeply grateful for his outstanding contribution and look forward to a successful auction.

With these newly established biannual floor sales, we aim to showcase the rich diversity and cultural depth of numismatics beyond antiquity. As always, our focus lies on quality, rarity, historical resonance, and provenance. What truly distinguishes us is not only the beauty of the objects we present, but the way in which we present them: with detailed descriptions, faithfully rendered legends and iconography, insightful historical commentary, meticulous provenance research, and high-resolution photography – including our internationally acclaimed still-life photographs, which highlight particularly special pieces in a striking visual context.

Among the many highlights of this auction are several rare and superbly preserved series from Switzerland, Germany (with a focus on Saxony), France and Flanders, as well as Italy and the United States.

The cover piece is an exceptional rarity: a 20-ducat Swiss medal by Jean Warin from Neuchâtel, struck to commemorate the marriage of Henri II d'Orléans-Longueville and Anne-Geneviève de Bourbon-Condé (lot 1257). Known in only two gold specimens, it is a work of the utmost importance and a true masterpiece of numismatic art. We are honored to include such a distinguished piece in our very first medieval and modern sale – and we extend our congratulations in advance to its future custodian. Equally remarkable is an Arab-Sasanian drachm of Abd al-Malik ibn Marwan (lot 1015) – a key issue in early Islamic coinage, rich in both iconographic and historical significance. And last but not least, we would like to draw your attention to a unique and previously unpublished Medio Maravedi of Sancho IV el Bravo, struck in Seville (lot 1216). Unknown until now, this coin represents a major discovery in the context of Spain's medieval monetary history, and its numismatic and art-historical relevance cannot be overstated.

These examples illustrate the extraordinary breadth and depth of medieval and modern numismatics – and the compelling narratives that lie behind so many of these coins. It is our mission to bring these stories to life and to take you with us on a journey through the centuries.

We hope you enjoy exploring the pages of this catalogue and warmly invite you to join us – either in person at the Zunfthaus zur Saffran in Zurich on 31 May and 2 June 2025, or virtually via internet or phone. We wish you the best of success in your bidding.

With our warmest numismatic regards from beautiful Winterthur

MEROVINGIANS

Lemovicum (Limoges) emerged during the Migration Period on the Puy Saint-Étienne as a fortified refuge for the city of Augustoritum. Its name derives from the Celtic tribe of the Lemovici, who once inhabited the region. In Merovingian times, Lemovicum became an important minting center. As our Triens shows, gold coins were struck here, possibly during one of the many Merovingian civil wars. Around 573, the Neustrian king Chilperic tried to reclaim the city he had once given to his bride Galswintha, following her murder at his command in 567/8. However, our coin was not minted by the civitas of Lemovicum, but rather on behalf of the Church, which had maintained a bishopric here since Late Antiquity.

Rev. ✠ NONNITVS M[O] Cross on globe between C / V - ç / II. Belfort 1616. Depeyrot IV, p. 54, 3. Prou 2428. Extremely rare and of great historical interest. Tiny marks, otherwise, good extremely fine. 3 500

 From the Childeric Collection of Merovingian Coinage, Obolos 32, 30 June 2024, 111 (with collector's ticket).

The ancient settlement of Lugdunum Convenarum, the predecessor of today's Saint-Bertrand-de-Comminges, was founded by Pompey 'the Great' in 72 BC. At its peak, it had around 10,000 inhabitants, though today fewer than 300 remain. Dominating the village, located at the foot of the Pyrenees, is the imposing Cathédrale Notre-Dame de Saint-Bertrand-de-Comminges, built in the 12th century.

During the Merovingian period, the settlement became significant in 585 when Guntram I, King of Orléans, captured and executed the rebel Gundovald there. This event is of particular historical importance because Gundovald had spent the years leading up to 582/83 in Byzantine exile in Constantinople. Amid internal strife in the Frankish realm, a group of nobles had requested the dispatch of Gundovald by Emperor Tiberius II (578-582), shortly before his death. His successor, Emperor Maurice (582-602), provided Gundovald with both funds and troops. After arriving in Gaul, Gundovald managed to capture several cities, but, lacking support, he withdrew to Saint-Bertrand-de-Comminges, where he was eventually captured and executed.

This episode represents the last documented attempt by the Byzantine Empire to exert direct influence on events in Gaul. Of particular interest to our coin is that its reverse copies a Byzantine semissis introduced by Emperor Maurice. The terminus post quem for our piece is thus 578, and it seems highly likely that the coin reflects Byzantine issues brought to Gaul by Gundovald in 582/83. It is possible that Gundovald himself was the issuer of this remarkable coin, but this cannot be proven.

Loir-et-Cher. Pierrefitte. 600-675. Triens (Gold, 13 mm, 1.21 g, 12 h), Hildebodus, moneyer. PETRA FICT Diademed and draped male bust to right . Rev. HILDEBODVS M Cross on pedestal; below, pellet. Belfort 3650 var. (with HILDEBODVS M). Depeyrot III, p.125, 2. Extremely rare and beautifully preserved. Extremely fine. 3 500

 From the Childeric Collection of Merovingian Coinage, Obolos 32, 30 June 2024, 74.

The Merovingian coinage is notable for the sheer number of mints, with several hundred already documented. These coins serve as evidence of the so-called 'itinerant kingship', a phenomenon that shaped both the early Middle Ages in general and the Merovingian period in particular. The king and his court were perpetually on the move, minting coins in various locations. This served not only practical needs but also played a key role in the representation of royal authority. In a world that was increasingly fragmented and smaller in scale, it was the king's constant presence that granted him power and legitimacy, as he had to continually assert his rule.

This stands in stark contrast to the broader and more stable structures of the Roman Empire. While, from the 3rd century AD onward, there was a growing demand for a stronger imperial presence in the provinces, the Roman Empire still retained its larger, centralized administrative systems for much longer. In contrast, Merovingian rulers were forced to maintain their authority by traveling and being present in local regions. Furthermore, the small-scale nature of early medieval society made it impossible to sustain royal courts in one place for extended periods, forcing them to stay in constant motion for more practical reasons.

For scholars, this itinerant activity is a fortunate boon. The coins minted at these various sites have preserved the names of many smaller settlements that would otherwise have been lost to history. One such example is the small settlement of Pierrefitte, which appears under the name 'PETRA FICT' on this coin - a fascinating testament to the nature of the traveling kingdoms.

Charlemagne (Charles the Great), as Charles I, king of the Franks, 768-814. Denier (Silver, 21 mm, 1.57 g, 2 h), Pavia. Class III, 783-812. ✠ CARLVS REX FR Cross pattée. Rev. ✠ PAPIA around CAROLVS monogram. Depeyrot 780 E. M&G 207. MEC 1, 1026. MIR 811. Rare. Lightly toned and struck on wonderful metal. Extremely fine. 1 500

This Denier falls into a historically and numismatically fascinating period within the Carolingian era. After Charlemagne conquered Pavia in 774, bringing an end to the Lombard Kingdom, he had coins minted in Pavia following the Frankish typology, but with a distinctive and unmistakable style.

Our piece originates from the time when a second, profound coinage reform took place within the Carolingian Empire. From this point onward, the so-called denarii novi were minted with a cross on the obverse and a CAROLVS monogram on the reverse. Additionally, the stylistic quality of Carolingian coins reached a new, very high level, as can be easily seen in our well-preserved piece.

Light marks and minor edge scuffs, otherwise, very fine. 3 500

The highly interesting reverse of this important early Carolingian portrait issue shows the coining implements with which coins were produced: an obverse and a reverse die, and two mallets. As such, the type is reminiscent of the Roman Republican denarius of T. Carisius from 46 BC (Crawford 464/2), depicting the dies, a mallet, and tongs on the reverse.

A key rarity in the early Islamic series with intricate iconography. Pierced and with minor traces of mounting, otherwise, very fine. 25 000

This coin is undoubtedly one of the most important issues of the early Islamic period. With its rich symbolism and extreme rarity, it quickly attracted the attention of scholars of religion and numismatics alike. While it draws inspiration from Sasanian prototypes - as is typical of early Islamic coinage - it diverges in several remarkable ways from the standard Arab-Sasanian types.

The obverse bust, for instance, displays a number of highly distinctive features: unlike the images of Khosrau II with his winged crown, the figure here wears a conical helmet and a coat of mail. He also holds a sword in both hands - a striking motif that recalls the 'Standing Caliph' found on contemporary fulus. These elements suggest that the figure is not, as the Pahlavi legend implies, Khosrau himself, but rather 'Abd al-Malik ibn Marwān, the Caliph.

This interpretation is further supported by the reverse, which breaks even more decisively with Sasanian models. Instead of the familiar Zoroastrian fire altar, it depicts a spear adorned with pennants blowing to the right - the so-called 'Anāza (عَنْزَة) - positioned within an arch. According to George Miles, this is almost certainly the Prophet's spear, possibly shown within a Mihrāb (مِحْرَاب), the prayer niche in a mosque oriented toward Mecca. Interestingly, the cataloguer of Morton & Eden Auction 107 (2020), lot 3 - a note later reappearing in CNG's Islamic Auction 3 (2023), 13 - offered a more imaginative reading: he perceived a stylized face formed by the arch, legends, spear, and surrounding dot motifs. While this interpretation may be speculative, it does not detract from the coin's iconographic significance.

The type marks a pivotal moment in the transition from Sasanian to Islamic coinage - a period in which inherited imagery was being reinterpreted, transformed, and gradually replaced. The likely depiction of the Caliph is a revolutionary innovation and underscores the extent to which early Islamic art remained rooted in the visual language of Late Antiquity, especially its imperial portraiture. One of the most striking features is the substitution of the Zoroastrian fire altar with the Prophet's spear - an act of symbolic appropriation and religious transformation. A direct depiction of the Prophet was already inconceivable at this time, even though the Islamic prohibition of images had not yet been universally or rigidly applied. All the more remarkable, then, is this visual gesture that draws so close.

The precise historical context of this extraordinary issue remains unknown. Its extreme rarity suggests that it may have been an experimental series. The coins name neither a mint nor a date. Although long attributed to Damascus, both their unusual iconography and the presence of a Hunnic countermark on at least one specimen suggest an origin further east.

The considerable stylistic differences among the known dies may suggest a mobile mint - perhaps one operating in the context of a military campaign. This interpretation is supported by the coin's martial imagery: the Caliph appears in arms, while the Prophet's weapon evokes both spear-won territory - a concept deeply rooted in Hellenistic and Roman imperial ideology - and religious legitimacy.

Also notable is the stark imbalance between the number of known dies and the very limited number of surviving coins. The most plausible explanation is that the struck pieces were later withdrawn and melted down, whether for religious or political reasons. The iconography may ultimately have been deemed too provocative. As a result, only a handful of examples have endured - making them among the most compelling and enigmatic numismatic testimonies of early Islam.

Uncertain Kings. 9th-10th centuries. 'Runic Dirham' (Silver, 25 mm, 2.63 g, 5 h), uncertain mint in eastern Europe, circa 813/4-944/5. Exceedingly rare and of great historical and linguistic interest. Light doubling, otherwise, good very fine. 5 000

The runic inscriptions on this highly significant issue represent a previously undeciphered script, believed to be of Avaric or Khazaric origin. I. L. Kyzlasov identified it as an Eastern European Turkic script from the Kuban region, positing its use either within the ancient Volga-Bulgar Empire or by the Khazars sometime between the 8th and 12th centuries. Based on the distribution of hoards, however, the evidence clearly favors an Avar or Khazar context - especially given their known practice of minting dirhams modeled after Abbasid coinage (cf. I. L. Kyzlasov: Writings of Eurasian Steppes, Russian Academy of Sciences, Eastern Literature, Moscow 1994).

Comprising 48 characters, the script was first published by C. M. J. Fraehn in 1832 (cf. C. M. J. Fraehn: Die Münzen der Chane vom Ulus Dschutschis oder von der Goldenen Horde, St. Petersburg 1832), and was subsequently studied by R. Göbl and A. Róna-Tas. Comparable inscriptions appear on various objects from the famous Treasure of Nagyszentmiklós - an assemblage linked to the Avar Khaganate - including four Runic Dirhams of this very type (R. Göbl / A. Róna-Tas: Die Inschriften des Schatzes von Nagy-Szentmiklós, Vienna 1995, pl. XIV, type A). Particularly striking is the heart-shaped tamgha at 12 o'clock on the obverse, which closely resembles a tamgha found on the Sedyarsky jug discovered in Perm in 1884.

A related variant discussed by A. Róna-Tas (pl. XV, type B), featuring a similar runic inscription, allows for more precise dating: the Kufic legend in the obverse's inner field cites 'Dhu'l Riyasatayn' (Holder of the Two Ministries), referring to al-Fadl ibn Sahl al-Sarakhsi (c. AD 770-818), vizier to Caliph al-Ma'mun. This reference establishes a terminus post quem of AH 198 = AD 813/4 for type B. A terminus ante quem is provided by the Kozyankovsko hoard, unearthed near Polotsk in Belarus, which included an example of type A and was deposited after AH 333 = AD 944/5, coinciding with the latest dated Abbasid dirham found within the hoard.

Most recently, J. Oravisjärvi has turned his attention to these enigmatic coins. His conclusion is telling: although their provenance and chronology are now largely established, the meaning of the runic inscriptions continues to elude decipherment - even after nearly two centuries of scholarly inquiry (J. Oravisjärvi: Runic Dirhams from Karelia, Kalmistopiiri Archaeological Online Publications, 2022).

Beyond their numismatic rarity, these coins hold profound historical and linguistic significance. They testify to a complex web of cultural exchange at the crossroads of the Islamic world and the steppe civilizations of Inner Eurasia. The coexistence of Kufic legends and runic scripts on the same coins exemplifies a remarkable synthesis of traditions: on the one hand, the administrative and religious authority of the Abbasid Caliphate; on the other, the indigenous scripts, symbols, and political structures of nomadic polities. Our example, in particular, embodies this confluence in striking clarity - its hybrid iconography and epigraphy offering rare insight into how Islamic monetary forms were adopted, localized, and reinterpreted by the Khazars or Avars. As such, it is not only a material witness to the diffusion of Islam beyond its core territories but also a linguistic relic from a largely vanished tradition of steppe literacy.

Cilician Armenia. Royal. Levon I, 1198-1219. Denier (Billon, 17 mm, 0.51 g, 6 h), coronation issue. Moeller: Eine neue Bewertung der Deniers von König Levon I. von Kilikisch-Armenien, in: NNB 65/1 (2016), pp. 93-94, and idem: Neue Überlegungen zur Münzreform König Levons I. (1187-1219) von Armenien, in: GN 304 (2019), pp. 208-213. Very rare and in exceptional condition for this difficult issue. Light areas of weakness, otherwise, good very fine. 500

 From an American collection, acquired before 2021.

This coin is Levon's only denier bearing Latin legends and titles, and as such, it is of particular interest. Though struck in Sis, Bedoukian has suggested that it was intended for circulation in Antioch, had the great Crusader city been captured by the king. However, S. Moeller has recently challenged this theory, arguing that a permanent incorporation of Antioch into the Armenian realm would have led to an unsustainable break with the Pope and the Crusader states, and was therefore beyond Levon's ambitions. Instead, Moeller links the issue to Levon's coronation as king in 1198 - an epochal event in Armenian history - celebrated in Sis in the presence of the papal legate, Archbishop Conrad of Mainz. He proposes that these exceptionally rare Latin deniers may have been distributed to Levon's Western supporters on the occasion of the coronation, while the more common coins bearing Armenian inscriptions were intended for his local subjects.

The China trade began as a distinctly one-sided affair, driven by a strong Western demand for Chinese goods but little interest in Western products within China. This imbalance shifted in the early 19th century when the British discovered a highly desired commodity: Indian opium. They began trading it to the Chinese in exchange for silver, reversing the flow of specie. Previously, silver from the New World and Europe had poured into China to pay for tea and porcelain, enriching the Qing dynasty's coffers. Now, Chinese silver flowed westward to pay for the addictive drug.

Opium not only debilitated the population but also drained the state treasury. In 1839, China responded by banning the opium trade and seizing all stocks. Great Britain, unwilling to accept the prohibition of such a profitable enterprise, escalated the dispute into war. The Royal Navy's steamships and modern rifles easily overpowered the antiquated Qing forces. The conflict concluded in 1842, marking the start of what is often called China's 'Century of Humiliation'.

The Treaty of Nanking, signed in 1842, forced China to cede Hong Kong to the British and pay an indemnity of 21 million silver dollars. So much silver was transferred to Britain that, when melted down at the Royal Mint, trace amounts of gold were extracted. This gold was used to produce a series of small commemorative medals, to which this piece belongs to.

During the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648), Christian IV unsuccessfully attempted to transform his kingdom into a European great power. His military defeats were also reflected in the state of his monetary system. High-quality silver coins were scarce during the war. The 'R F P' on our coin officially stood for regnat firmit pietas ('Piety strengthens the monarchy' in Latin). However, the impoverished rural population, who rarely encountered coins as valuable as these Kroner, interpreted 'R F P' in Danish as riget fattes penge, meaning: The state is out of money!

The Anglo-British Saluts d'Or rank among the most splendid coins from the final phase of the Hundred Years' War (1337-1453). After the French kings Charles VI (1368-1422) and Charles VII (1403-1461) introduced these coins in 1421, modeled after the Neapolitan Salut d'Or of Charles I of Anjou (1227-1285), the English King Henry V (1386-1422) and his son Henry VI also adopted this popular coin, minting it in their continental mints in present-day France.

In the first issue of this type, ordered on 6 February 1423, the coin was valued at 25 Sous Tournois (with a weight of approximately 3.9 grams). However, barely seven months later, to address the numerous monetary manipulations by his adversary Charles VII, Henry VI had to lower the value of the Salut d'Or to 22 Sols and 6 Deniers, which corresponded to a reduced weight of approximately 3.5 grams per coin.

The striking obverse, depicting the armed François II on horseback, reflects the role that war played during his reign. Throughout his life, François II sought to keep Brittany independent from the Kingdom of France. After initial successes, however, he was forced to acknowledge the authority of the French king following his defeat at Saint-Aubin-du-Cormier on 28 July 1488 - a turning point that marked the permanent loss of Brittany's independence.

The coveted Augsburg Ratsmedaillen ('Council medals' in German) are impressive symbols of the proud self-image held by the Free Imperial City of Augsburg - especially during the turbulent times of the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648), when the city had to stand its ground against a rotating cast of occupying forces. Just beneath the imperial eagle and the Pyr, Augsburg's official city emblem, appear the portraits and coats of arms of the two Stadtpfleger (mayors), Bernhard Rechlinger and David Welser on the obverse. David Welser (1570-1654) hailed from a prominent merchant dynasty that, alongside the Fuggers, played a dominant role in long-distance trade out of Augsburg and Nuremberg. The reverse of the medal features the coats of arms of the other eight members of the city council.

These medals were commissioned by the city council as prestigious gifts and are distinguished by their exceptional artistic quality, the result of work by highly trained die engravers. This particular piece is often attributed to a certain David Stadler - though no trace of him appears in Augsburg's historical records. However, the city archives do reference a die cutter named Daniel Sailer (1571-1645), who signed his work with the initials 'DS' and was most likely responsible for the dies used to strike this medal (cf. L. Forrer, Biographical Dictionary of Medals, Vol. V, London 1909, p. 297).

Under the rule of Maximilian I, the Electorate of Bavaria began its transformation into a model absolutist state. Maximilian I introduced a more efficient system of government, built a formidable army, reformed the judiciary, and actively supported the arts and culture as a patron. This impressive Multiple Ducat stands as a testament to the Bavarian elector's strategic foresight during the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648), in which he played a pivotal role as the founder of the Catholic League.

With the looming threat of a Swedish invasion, Maximilian I ordered the fortifications of Munich to be reinforced starting in 1637. The reverse of this five-ducat coin commemorates the temporary completion of the city's new defenses in 1640 - fortifications that, in September 1646, successfully withstood a Swedish assault.

The striking obverse, depicting Maximilian I in full armor, later served as the model for the renowned painting 'Elector Maximilian I of Bavaria' (1648) by Munich court painter Nikolaus Prugger (1620-1694). W. Hahn suggests that this type may also have been minted in anticipation of Emperor Ferdinand III's (1608-1657) visit in May 1641, intended as prestigious gifts for high-ranking members of the imperial entourage (cf. W. Hahn / A. Hahn-Zelleke: Die Münzen der baierischen Herzoge und Kurfürsten 1506-1806, Vienna 2007, p. 57).

Very minor marks and edge nicks, otherwise, nearly extremely fine. 500

Maximilian II Emanuel's reign was marked by constant warfare. As a military commander in the Great Turkish War and the Nine Years' War, he played a key role in European conflicts. But it was during the War of the Spanish Succession (1701-1714), while serving as Governor-General of the Spanish Netherlands, that he made his most ambitious bid for power.

This rare medal commemorates his capture of several cities, including Augsburg, Biberach, Dillingen, Ehingen, Füssen, Hohenschwangau, Kempten, Kufstein, Lauingen, Memmingen, Munderkingen, Neuburg, Passau, Regensburg, Reutlingen, and Ulm. It was meant to cement his image as a victorious commander and a legitimate contender for the Spanish Habsburg throne.

However, Maximilian II Emanuel's grand ambitions came crashing down with his devastating defeat at the Battle of Blenheim in 1704. Ironically, this very medal later served as the basis for a satirical counterpart (see Lot 1072 below), mocking his humiliating downfall.

Bayern. Kurfürstentum. Maximilian II Emanuel, 1679-1726. Medal 1704 (Silver, 43 mm, 29.46 g, 12 h), on his defeat and flight after the Battle of Blenheim. PUDORE TERRORRE / HINC ET INDE / FUGATUS Maximilian II Emanuel fleeing to the right on pedestal with coat of arms of Ulm and Augsburg, holding shield in his left hand; behind, falling flags and standards; to his left, threatening Bavaria; to his right, river god Danubius threatening with his trident in both hands. Bavarica 1000, 23h. Beierlein 1557. München Inv. 6-05103. Extremely rare and lightly toned. Some marks, otherwise, very fine. 500

This highly sought after medal combines the biting irony of political propaganda with numismatics in a particularly striking way. The inspiration for its obverse and reverse motifs comes from a medal by P. H. Müller (1654-1719), commemorating the victories of Maximilian II Emanuel in the War of the Spanish Succession up until 1703 (see Lot 1071 above). The following year, however, he suffered a crushing defeat at Blenheim, forcing him to flee Bavaria.

Instead of a loyal Ulma paying homage, this medal depicts an enraged Bavaria driving Maximilian II Emanuel away. Likewise, the once-submissive Danubius has been transformed into a menacing river god. The reverse no longer features the coats of arms of conquered cities but rather the names of lost ones: Amberg, Cham, Donauwörth, Filzhofen, Freystadt, Friedberg, Memmingen, Neuburg, Neumarkt, Passau, Rain, Regensburg, Rothenberg, Stadtamhof and Straubing.

And last but not least, Victoria has been replaced by Justitia, delivering judgment. The commissioner and engraver of this medal remain unknown, but it seems highly likely that the cities of Ulm and Augsburg - previously conquered by Maximilian II Emanuel - were behind this satirical piece.

The magnificent 'Flussgolddukat' ('River gold ducats' in German) had a long-standing tradition in Bavaria, dating back to 1756, when Elector Maximilian II (1811-1864) ordered the first Bavarian 'Flussgolddukat' to be minted. This tradition continued until 1862. However, by the 19th century, the amount of gold extracted from the rivers had dwindled to just a few grams per year (cf. D. O. A. Klose / F. Jungmann-Stadler: Royal Bavarian Currency. Means of Payment and Finances in the Kingdom of Bavaria 1806-1918, p. 13). This explains the rarity of these small treasures of Bavarian monetary history.

Bernard of Saxe-Weimar (1604-1639) was a typical condottiere of the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648). Serving first under Swedish, and later under French command, he captured the city of Breisach - a key fortress in the Habsburg defensive line along the Rhine - after a brutal eight-month siege from May to December 1638. The human cost was staggering: only 400 of the 4,000 defenders and a mere 150 of the 4,000 inhabitants survived. It is even reported that Bernard ordered his troops to guard the cemeteries to prevent rampant cannibalism among the survivors. Altogether, an estimated 24,000 people perished, making the siege one of the deadliest episodes of the war. Yet Bernard would not enjoy his victory for long: he died under suspicious circumstances just half a year later, on 18 July 1639, at the age of thirty-five.

Berstett assigned this type to a mint in Further Austria, interpreting the letters 'F - R' as a reference to the Habsburg Dukes Friedrich III (1347-1362) and Rudolph IV (1339-1365), though he later questioned his own attribution (A. Berstett: Münzgeschichte des Zähringen-Badischen Fürstenhauses. Freiburg 1846, p. 200). In contrast, A. Meyer attributed this fascinating coin to Freiburg (A. Meyer: Die Bracteaten der Schweiz. Zurich 1845, p. 95 f.). He believed that 'F - R' referred to the city of Freiburg.

The Winterthur Hoard suggests that this type was minted in the name of Count Eginio II, who ruled between 1271 and 1316, as his seal features a similar helmet. However, M. Matzke attributes this type to Count Konrad II, who ruled between 1316 and 1350, dating it between 1317 and 1320 (M. Matzke: Dirhem und Rappenpfennig 2, Bonn 2004, pl. 7, 161).

Meyer's assumption that these pieces originated from Freiburg is now widely accepted, but their exact dating remains uncertain. The recently discovered hoard from Glottertal, which has yet to be published, contained a small number of coins of this type. It may provide further insight into their precise dating in the future.

The French fortress of Landau in the Palatinate was repeatedly besieged during the War of the Spanish Succession owing to its strategic importance, and consequently changed hands several times. Captured by Imperial forces in 1702, it reverted to French control in 1703, only to fall once again to the Imperials in 1704. Our Klippe was struck during the final French siege of the city in 1713. On 20 August, Landau capitulated and would remain under French rule until 1815.

 From the collection of Dr. J. P. van Erp, Corinthila 247, 2 October 2020, 5101.

This medal represents one of the great mysteries in German Renaissance medallic art. The inscription 'DML' on the reverse is interpreted as standing for D(oc)tor M(artin) L(uther), which led scholars to identify the obverse portrait as a likeness of Martin Luther himself. However, in 1929, G. Habich pointed out several inconsistencies in his seminal work on the subject. While the portrait may indeed depict a preacher, it bears little resemblance to known features of Luther. Additionally, the reverse inscription does not match the original design and appears to have been added a few years later (cf. G. Habich: Die Deutschen Schaumünzen des XVI. Jahrhunderts, Vol. I, p. 93).

Despite these alterations, there is little doubt - based on stylistic elements and known pieces - that the medal dated to the 16th century. In fact, the portrait is unmistakably the work of the gifted medallist F. Hagenauer (1499-1546).

The person who likely came closest to uncovering the medal's true background is M. Ohm. He interprets it as a piece of Reformation propaganda dating from the late 16th century. The idea was to present the portrait of an unknown figure - someone who could plausibly be passed off to the public as Luther - alongside the initials DML and the signature of the already hugely popular A. Dürer (1471-1528). The intended message of this medal, then, was that the renowned artist Dürer sought to spread Luther's teachings through his art (cf. Landesmuseum Württemberg, inv. no. MK 18496.).

Remarkably, this piece of propaganda succeeded for more than 300 years. As late as 1901, it was still widely accepted that the medal portrayed Luther (cf. Blätter für Münzfreunde, 1901, p. 163.).

This imposing coin is a testament to a brief but prosperous period in the history of the Hanseatic city of Rostock, a time marked by dizzying wealth. The intense conflicts with the Dukes of Mecklenburg were settled in 1584. From then on, the city's merchants were free to flourish, helping an autonomous Rostock achieve a level of prosperity that even overshadowed the city's medieval heyday. However, the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648) brought an end to this period of strong prosperity.

This lavish Baroque prestige 10 Dukaten commemorates the grand wedding of the Saxon heir to the throne, Johann Georg II (1613-1680), and Magdalena Sibylle (1612-1687), daughter of Margrave Christian of Brandenburg-Kulmbach/Bayreuth (1581-1655).

Held in Dresden in 1638, this extravagant wedding served as a dazzling distraction from the horrors of the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648), which had devastated vast parts of Germany including Saxony. Despite two decades of relentless conflict, the wedding festivities stretched over an entire week, from 13-23 November. The celebration featured extravagant banquets, a breathtaking three-hour fireworks display, and the distribution of commemorative coins of this type to distinguished guests.

Johann Georg II, son of the renowned Johann Georg I - under whose reign this coin was minted - would later face the challenge of rebuilding his war-ravaged electorate after the devastation of the Thirty Years' War. He successfully restored the economy, with his efforts culminating in the transformation of Dresden into a thriving center of art and culture. However, at the time this Multiple Ducat was issued, such a future was far from certain, as only a year after the wedding, the weakened electorate faced near destruction once again when Swedish forces under General Johan Banér (1596-1641) launched a brutal invasion, pushing Saxony to the brink of collapse.

Sachsen-Albertinische Linie. Kurfürstentum. Friedrich August III, 1763-1806. Taler 1804 (Silver, 40 mm, 28.00 g, 12 h), engravers error with 'EEINE' instead of 'FEINE'. Dresden SGH (mint master S. G. This exceptional engraver's error (EINE instead of FEINE) likely occurred during a die revision associated with a change in personnel at the Dresden mint. Until 1804, Johann Ernst Croll served as the mint master in Dresden, a position he assumed in 1779. He signed his coins with 'IEC', 'IC', or simply 'C'. His successor was Samuel Gottlieb Helbig, who held the position until 1813 and used the signatures 'SGH' or 'H'.

Exactly how this striking error came about remains unclear, but it appears to have been discovered and corrected rather quickly. After all, the mistake involves the critical coin standard inscription - 'ZEHN EINE FEINE MARK' (meaning ten thalers struck from one mark of fine silver (233,855 g), which corresponded to the Convention standard). As such, only an extremely limited number of these error coins are likely to have entered circulation. In any case, ours is the first recorded example.

The artist behind this rare Renaissance medal is likely the renowned Annaberg goldsmith and die cutter Hieronymus Magdeburger, a contemporary of Albrecht Dürer. These legendary so-called 'Pesttalers' were minted during the Reformation as a bold expression of a new understanding of money. Unlike traditional coins, they bear no portraits of rulers, let alone of Catholic emperors or their titles. Instead, the whole space is devoted entirely to biblical scenes from both the Old and New Testaments.

The obverse features the Crucifixion, accompanied by a reference to John 3:14-16. This passage draws a striking parallel between the serpent Nehustan that Moses raised in the desert and the Son of God on the cross - both offering salvation to those who look upon them in faith.

The reverse places Nehustan ('serpent' or 'brass' in Hebrew) at its center, illustrating the account from Numbers 21:6-9. In this dramatic scene, the Israelites, having strayed from their faith, are punished by God with fiery flying serpents. To save his people, Moses erects Nehustan, which grants protection to all who gaze upon it.

Originally intended as trade coins, these pieces soon gained a reputation for their supposed protective powers due to their deeply religious imagery. This belief led to their widespread use as amulets, earning them the name 'Pesttaler' ('plague talers' in German). People wore them as charms, trusting they would ward off misfortune - including the dreaded plague itself. Because of their function as protective talismans, most surviving specimens show signs of wear, tooling, or piercings for suspension. Untouched examples, free of such alterations, are exceptionally rare. Moreover, later cast copies are common, while well-preserved original strikes - like our piece - are among the true rarities of Saxon numismatic history, offering a glimpse into a profoundly religious era.

The exact origin of these coins remains uncertain. While they were likely first struck in Joachimsthal (Jáchymov), production expanded in the 1540s to mints in Hameln (Hamelin) and Hannover (Hanover).

Johann Friedrich II took over the administration of the Ernestine lands together with his brother, Johann Wilhelm (1530-1573), after the Battle of Mühlberg in 1547, during which their father, Elector Johann Friedrich the Magnanimous (1503-1554), was captured. Initially, he continued his father's struggle against Emperor Charles V (1500-1558) but ultimately submitted to him. However, in 1566, he was outlawed by Emperor Maximilian II (1527-1576) and, after the capture of his residence city, Gotha, by the Albertine Elector August (1526-1586), was taken prisoner. He died in 1595 after 28 years of captivity.

Johann Friedrich II supported the French King Henry II (1519-1559) during his military campaigns in France. It is possible that he commissioned Schautaler, such as our specimen, in various sizes to honor distinguished military leaders during these campaigns. These remarkable pieces of Saxon numismatic history still raises many questions. To this day, it remains unclear who was responsible for the artistically refined design and where exactly these impressive coins were minted. The large number of later aftercasts of this type contrasts sharply with the extremely limited number of original struck examples, such as our piece.

Carl August governed as an enlightened absolutist and was the first German ruler to introduce a constitutional charter that guaranteed freedom of the press and the right to free speech. He also went down in history primarily as a friend and patron of Goethe. His reign laid the foundation for the so-called Weimar Classicism. In addition to Goethe, writers and philosophers such as Schiller, Herder, Fichte, Hegel, and Schelling also lived and worked in Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach.

Kaiserreich. Deutsch-Ostafrika (German East Africa) Wilhelm II, 1888-1918. Pattern Medal (Bronze, 38 mm, 24.46 g, 12 h), pattern of the First-Class Warrior Merit Medal for German Protectorates. By E. Heyden - Nimmergut - OEK -. Apparently unpublished and of great interest. Tiny marks and edge nicks, otherwise, extremely fine. 1 000

In 1892, Kaiser Wilhelm II established the 'Kriegerverdienstmedaille I. Klasse für deutsche Schutzgebiete' ('First-Class Warrior Merit Medal for German Protectorates' in German) as a decoration for acts of bravery awarded to indigenous soldiers (Askari) serving in the notorious Schutztruppe of German East Africa. Starting in 1893, the medal was also awarded to members of the Schutztruppe in German New Guinea, Tientsin, Kiautschou, and other colonial territories.

They were issued in two classes, made from gilt and plain silver. The second class corresponded to the Warrior Merit Medal introduced in 1873, featuring a monogram on the obverse (OEK 1894). The obverse design of the first-class was created by the renowned Berlin-based medalist Emil Weigand (1837-1907) and depicted Wilhelm II wearing a Pickelhaube and the cuirass of the Garde du Corps regiment. Wilhelm II was so pleased with this portrait that it was later used on the Rupees of the German East Africa Company (Jaeger 711-714). The reverse of both classes bore the inscription 'KRIEGER / VERDIENST' ('Warrior Merit' in German).

This particular piece is exceptional in multiple ways, shedding light on the otherwise obscure origins of this rare decoration. The reverse inscription 'KRIEGS / VERDIENST' ('War Merit' in German) was borrowed from Prussian awards dating back to the mid-19th century (OEK 1892). However, the final version of the Warrior Merit Medal replaced this inscription with 'KRIEGER / VERDIENST'. A. Heyden documented a silver second-class pattern featuring a reverse identical to our piece (A. Heyden: Ehren-Zeichen der erloschenen und blühenden Staaten Deutschlands und Österreich-Ungarns, Frankfurt a. M. 1897, p. 49). No published records exist of a first-class pattern, and its precise background remains unresolved. However, our piece suggests that an additional first-class version in bronze may have originally been planned. Beyond being a numismatic and phaleristic rarity, this pattern sheds light on Germany's colonial past and the award practices of the Schutztruppe.

This beautiful coin reflects the European power struggles fought on Italian soil in the first half of the 16th century. Charles V appears on the obverse of the coin as the undisputed ruler of the Duchy of Milan, which, in turn, is represented on the reverse by Milan's patron saint, St. Ambrose. In reality, Charles' power in Milan was far from uncontested. The French King Francis I (1494-1547) also laid claim to the duchy, considering himself the successor of the Visconti family, which had ruled Milan for a time.

The 32 Soldi imperiali, first minted in early 1539 with a fineness of approximately 94%, entered numismatic history under the name Burigozzo. This designation traces back to Giovan Marco Burigozzo, who first mentioned and described the coin in his mid-19th-century chronicle, recounting events in Milan between 1500 and 1544. In the late 19th century, the Gnechchi brothers were the first to officially establish Burigozzo as the coin's denomination in his honor, a term later adopted into the CNI (Corpus Nummorum Italicorum).

Pope Formosus died on 4 April 896 amidst power struggles involving the Papacy, the Patriarchate of Constantinople, the Kingdom of West Francia, and the Holy Roman Empire. What followed was a period of bitter infighting, with his successor, Boniface VI, dying after just two weeks in office. The next pope, Stephen VI, conducted the infamous Cadaver Synod, during which the decayed corpse of Formosus was indicted, convicted, mutilated, and cast into the Tiber. This outrageous act would soon come back to haunt Stephen, however, as he was imprisoned and strangled in the summer of 897. The following pope, Romanus, was deposed after only three months, and was succeeded by Theodore II, who had Formosus' body exhumed from its secret burial at Portus harbor. Yet Theodore, too, died in office after a reign that lasted only twelve or twenty days - depending on the source - in December 897.

In January 898, John IX was elected as Theodore's successor. A native of Tivoli near Rome, John sought to reconcile the warring factions within the Papacy. In foreign affairs, he sided with Lambert of Italy against Arnulf of Carinthia in the struggle for control of the Holy Roman Empire, striking coins featuring Lambert's name alongside his own monogram. However, Lambert died on 15 October 898, and John himself followed just fifteen months later, plunging Rome into further turmoil. It would take several decades before the Papacy regained stability. Between 872 and 965, two dozen popes ruled the Holy See, and in the most turbulent years between 896 and 904, a new pope was elected on average every year.

Ferdinando di Borbone, Infante of Spain and Duke of Parma, Piacenza, and Guastalla, stands as a poignant figure marking the twilight of the Age of Absolutism. Profoundly religious and an advocate of absolutist rule, his reign was deeply intertwined with the dynastic politics of 18th-century Europe - especially through his marriage to Maria Amalia of Austria (1746-1804), daughter of Empress Maria Theresa (1717-1780). Despite these powerful alliances, Ferdinando di Borbone was ultimately unable to preserve his duchies in the face of the sweeping changes brought by the French Revolution (1789). Following the French occupation led by Napoléon Bonaparte (1769-1821) in 1796, the Duchy of Parma was formally annexed into the French Republic in 1801. A man drawn to religious life from an early age, particularly the Dominican order, Ferdinando spent his final days at the Abbey of Fontevivo, where he died in 1802.

Among the most remarkable artifacts of his rule is the 8 Doppie, designed by Giuseppe Siliprandi. Striking in both its size and rarity, the coin was never intended for widespread circulation. Instead, it served a ceremonial and symbolic role, primarily as a prestigious gift and a display of sovereign power. As such, it embodies the representational logic of absolutism - demonstrating authority not through utility, but through grandeur. Today, the coin stands as a rare and valuable witness to the decline of absolutist monarchies across Europe.

Emanuele Filiberto inherited a war-torn duchy, caught between French and Spanish forces. A fearless fighter and brilliant strategist, he earned the nickname 'Testa di Ferro' ('Ironhead' in Italian) and joined Emperor Charles V's (1500-1558) service in 1543. The list of major battles he fought in is long - Ingolstadt (1546), Mühlberg (1547), Renty (1554), Saint-Quentin (1557), and many more.

Beyond the battlefield, he proved a capable ruler, curbing noble privileges, centralizing power, and boosting trade. However, his legendary love of wine led to his downfall - he died of liver cirrhosis in 1580, leaving behind a prosperous Savoy with full coffers and a well-trained standing army.

Federico I of Sicily is perhaps better known as Frederick II, or Friedrich II von Hohenstaufen. A grandson of the legendary Frederick Barbarossa (1122-1190), he would go on to be crowned King of Sicily, King of Germany, Holy Roman Emperor, and King of Jerusalem. Though he technically ruled over a vast domain stretching from Central Europe to Sicily and even the Holy Land, his primary focus remained on his Italian holdings - often bringing him into conflict with the Papacy. Indeed, he was excommunicated no less than three times.

Despite his turbulent relationship with the Church, Frederick proved to be a shrewd diplomat, famously recovering Jerusalem and its surrounding territories from the Ayyubids in 1229 without resorting to war. He was also a passionate patron of the arts, fostering the development of Sicilian poetry and even authoring a treatise on falconry. As a legal reformer, he worked to professionalize Sicily's judiciary and bureaucracy.

His complex and commanding personality left a lasting mark on history, earning him the title stupor mundi - 'wonder of the world' - a testament to his ability to shape his era through sheer force of will.

The Mouton d'or, also known as the Agnel or Aignel ('lamb' in French), gets its name from its iconic obverse depicting the Agnus Dei - Latin for 'Lamb of God'. Shown as the Paschal Lamb bearing the banner of victory, it symbolizes the resurrection of Jesus Christ and traces its origins back to the Old Testament, where the lamb played a central role as a sacrificial offering.

This popular gold coin was introduced around 1311 by Philip IV, King of France (1268-1314), and quickly gained wide circulation, inspiring many imitations. Among those who issued their own types of this coin were King Henry V of England (1386-1422), the Archbishopric of Cambrai, and Lodewijk II.

With a relatively large diameter and thin flan, this coin type is prone to damage. Well-preserved examples with sharp detail and no significant flaws - like the one shown here - are very rare.

With the confirmation of the sovereignty of the Republiek der Zeven Verenigde Nederlanden (Dutch Republic) through the Peace of Westphalia in 1648, the country began its rise to one of Europe's leading maritime and trading powers, gaining global significance. At the heart of this economic power was the Amsterdam patricianship. Their strong position led to intense conflicts with the Stadtholders, which found support among the nobility and rural populations. The peak of these tensions came with the siege of Amsterdam by Stadtholder William II, Prince of Orange (1626-1650).

This wonderful medal commemorates the lifting of the siege on 4 August 1650 and the subsequent death of William II from pox on 6 November of the same year.

The Dutch naval hero Maarten Harpertszoon Tromp dedicated most of his life to naval service. Beloved by his crews, he earned the nickname 'Bestevaër' ('grandfather') and is said to have won no fewer than thirty-three naval battles. On 10 August 1653, during the Battle of Scheveningen, an English sniper shot Tromp dead. Although the battle ended in a tactical defeat for the Dutch, it resulted in a strategic victory, as it forced the English to lift their blockade of the Low Countries.

Tromp's death was a heavy blow to Dutch morale. The loss of their greatest naval commander was widely mourned and commemorated with fine medals such as this one. Notably, the naval scene on the reverse was clearly based on Jan Abrahamsz Beerstraaten's painting 'The Battle of Scheveningen, 10 August 1653'.

 Ex Künker 331, 30 January 2020, 898.

Arguably the greatest of the many Dutch naval heroes, Michiel de Ruyter spent his life at sea, serving the Dutch Republic in battles across the globe. As admiral, he led the Dutch fleet in numerous engagements during the Second and Third Anglo-Dutch Wars of the 1660s, securing his most brilliant victory in the famous Raid on the Medway (19-24 June 1667). In a daring maneuver, the Dutch fleet sailed up the River Medway to the English naval base at Chatham, where they burned three capital ships and ten ships of the line, and captured the English flagship, HMS Royal Charles, towing it away as a prize. It was one of the worst defeats in the Royal Navy's history and arguably the most humiliating it ever suffered in home waters.

De Ruyter died ten years later from wounds sustained at the Battle of Augusta near Sicily, where he commanded a Dutch-Spanish fleet in an indecisive engagement against a superior French force. Revered by his sailors and respected by his enemies, he was so widely admired that even the French fleet reportedly fired a salute when his embalmed body was carried aboard his flagship past their line on its journey back to the Netherlands. De Ruyter was laid to rest in the Nieuwe Kerk in Amsterdam in a lavish tomb designed by the Flemish sculptor Rombout Verhulst.

This fascinating coin is proof that even modern numismatics can still hold unexpected and intriguing discoveries. In 1982, the Principality of Monaco issued a 10 Franc coin to commemorate the tragic death of Grace Kelly – the American film star, Academy Award winner, and, after marrying Prince Rainier III, Princess of Monaco (Princesse Grace de Monaco).

Until now, six known versions of this coin have been documented:

- The standard circulation coin struck in copper-aluminum-nickel (KM 160)
- An Essai in the same base metal (KM E72)
- A silver Essai (KM E73)
- A gold Essai (KM E74 — see lot 1192 above)
- And Piedfort Essais of the silver and gold strikes, respectively (KM PE20 and KM PE20A)

The Essai versions are marked with the word 'ESSAI' above the date on the reverse. The Piedfort Essai versions do not carry this marking. At this point, our coin presents an especially noteworthy anomaly: The piece presented here matches the specifications of the gold Essai (KM E74) - same weight, same diameter - yet it lacks the 'ESSAI' inscription. The origin of this anomaly remains uncertain. The most plausible explanation appears to be a planchet mix-up. However, X-ray fluorescence spectroscopy has revealed that the alloy of this specimen consists of 90% gold, as opposed to the 92% gold content identified in the officially documented Essai. This compositional difference strongly suggests that the present piece is most likely a prototype of the known Essai. Regardless of its precise genesis, this coin represents an exceptional numismatic rarity - a heretofore undocumented variety absent from all major Monaco and Grace Kelly collections.

These impressive Talers, featuring a detailed portrait of the last Duke of Pomerania, Bogislaw XIV, were minted during the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648) to pay the substantial contributions demanded by various military leaders. After Generalissimus Wallenstein (1625-1634) and his imperial troops occupied Pomerania in 1627, the Swedish King Gustav II Adolf (1611-1632) landed in Pomerania in 1630 and forced Bogislaw XIV into an alliance. Bogislaw XIV attempted to remain neutral, but this came at the cost of enormous protection payments to both warring parties.

The dies for this coin were crafted by the talented goldsmith and engraver Gottfried Tabbert († 1664) from Szczecin. To this day, there is considerable debate about which of these highly varied Taler issues originated in Koszalin and which in Szczecin. Previously, it was assumed that all talers featuring a bishop's title in the legend and a cross at the center of the coat of arms - such as the reverse of our piece - were struck in Koszalin. However, due to the lack of reliable sources, this assumption cannot be confirmed. Regardless of its exact origin, this Taler is not only an important historical artifact of the devastating Thirty Years' War but also a work of remarkable artistic quality.

Alvarez Burgos -. Bautista -. Cayon -. MEC 6, -. Unpublished and unique, an issue of tremendous historical importance, and a magnificent piece of Spanish medieval art. Traces of overstriking and with minor deposits and a flan crack, otherwise, nearly extremely fine. 25 000

The well-preserved legend on this fascinating coin unmistakably identifies it as belonging to Sancho IV, the successor of Alfonso X (1221-1284). Sancho IV was a bold and determined ruler who refused to accept the disinheritance imposed by his father. In 1284, he ascended to the throne, igniting a series of prolonged civil wars. His opponents even sought the assistance of the Marinids from Morocco, but Sancho IV successfully repelled them. Toward the end of his reign, his kingdom strengthened its ties with the Crown of Aragon, a strategic alliance that would ultimately reinforce the Reconquista, the centuries-long campaign by Christian kingdoms in the Iberian Peninsula to reclaim territory from Muslim rule.

One of the most striking features of this coin is the masterfully executed reverse. The depiction of the lion is particularly dynamic, with sharp, well-defined proportions that distinguish it from the already impressive lions found on the rare Medio Maravedís of Alfonso X (Álvarez Burgos 222, Cayon 1110), which served as a prototype for our coin. While the latter remained stylistically rooted in the 13th century, the lion on this coin exhibits a more refined and evolved aesthetic. Symmetrically positioned within the decorative border, its muscular limbs are rendered with remarkable depth, and its ribs are subtly visible beneath its fur. This artistic refinement marks a transition into the delicate Gothic coinage style, foreshadowing the aesthetic achievements seen during the Hundred Years' War (1337-1453).

It is evident that Sancho IV commissioned a new die engraver for this particular coin type. Despite its artistic appeal, this coin type clearly did not see widespread circulation and must have been minted in very limited quantities. In this regard, it is reminiscent of Sancho IV's Sesen or Maravedi, of which only one specimen is known to exist in the Museum of Santa Cruz in Toledo. That coin features a portrait of Sancho IV similar to his other issues, but its weight is exactly double that of our piece, suggesting that our coin should be classified as either a Medio Maravedi or a half Sesen.

The most plausible explanation for this coin's rarity lies in the silver shortage during Sancho IV's reign. The lack of access to silver, coupled with the immense financial demands of ongoing civil wars, made the planned issue of high-purity Maravedis and Medio Maravedis impossible. Instead, the monetary system under Sancho IV relied primarily on billon coinage (cf. M. Crusafont / A. Balaguer / P. Grierson: Medieval European Coinage, Vol. VI, Cambridge 2013, p. 317). This makes the coin not only a numismatic rarity and an object of significant artistic interest but also a valuable historical artifact that offers insight into the economic struggles of a war-torn 13th-century Spain.

Just as this coin was inspired by the Medio Maravedis of Alfonso X, it, in turn, served as a model for future issues. Alfonso XI (1311-1350) later minted impressive Doblas, featuring the same finely crafted crowned lion, a direct homage to this earlier design (cf. Cayon 1231 and Friedberg 102).

In 1600 and 1601, Bern issued gold coins that featured its old patron saint, St. Vincent, more than 70 years after the Reformation. This curious revival might have been driven by a desire to make the coins more recognizable for international transactions. At the time, the image of a standing figure was a well-established feature on ducats, making the design more familiar and accepted abroad.

It was applied after Napoléon was appointed as First Consul on 24 December 1799 and reflects French control of Switzerland following the 1798 invasion and the establishment of the short-lived Helvetic Republic (1798-1803).

According to the alliance treaty of 1584, Geneva, Zurich, and Bern were obligated to assist each other in times of war. Such an alliance case occurred in 1692 when Victor-Amadeus II (1666-1732), the Duke of Savoy, joined the Habsburgs in the Nine Years' War (1688-1697) against Louis XIV (1638-1715) in 1690. In response, Louis XIV's forces invaded Savoy and Lorraine. At the same time, the French troops also entered the Geneva region for strategic reasons, attempting to occupy the city. In turn, Bern and Zurich fulfilled their obligations by sending reinforcements to the Geneva garrison. The French attack was successfully repelled, and the allied Swiss troops remained stationed in Geneva until 1697.

Officers of this coalition were awarded these impressive medals by the city council. This medal thus represents not only the broader struggles of the Nine Years' War but also the Swiss loyalty to their alliance, serving as a magnificent testament to the art of medal engraving.

Henri II d'Orléans-Longueville (1595-1663) was the son of Henri I d'Orléans-Longueville (1568-1595) and Catarina Gonzaga (1568-1629). As a high-ranking French noble, he played a crucial role in European diplomacy during the Thirty Years' War. He led the French delegation in the negotiations that resulted in the Peace of Westphalia (1648), which effectively ended the war and reshaped the political landscape of Europe. In his personal capacity as Prince of Neuchâtel, Henri II successfully secured the formal exclusion of the Old Swiss Confederacy from the Holy Roman Empire, a significant step in Switzerland's journey toward full independence. He also sought the official admission of Neuchâtel and Valangin into the Swiss Confederation. Henri II was thus a precursor to Switzerland's long-term independence and of great importance to the country.

Beyond diplomacy, Henri II was a key figure in the Fronde (1648-1653), a series of civil wars in France that saw rebellious nobles clash with the monarchy. As a leading Frondeur, he opposed Cardinal Mazarin's (1602-1661) centralization of power, but ultimately failed to curb royal authority.

His wife, Anne-Geneviève de Bourbon-Condé (1619-1679), was a charismatic and politically astute noblewoman. A member of the powerful House of Bourbon-Condé, she was admired for her beauty in her youth and became embroiled in courtly intrigues from an early age. In 1642, she married Henri II. Two years later, she was rumored to have had an affair with François de La Rochefoucauld (1613-1680), who would later be remembered as a distinguished writer and a leading figure in French moralist literature.

Like her husband, Anne-Geneviève became deeply involved in the Fronde, a role that ultimately led to her fall from favor and exile. She outlived Henri II and, in her later years, turned increasingly toward Jansenism, a controversial theological movement often regarded as heretical by the Catholic Church.

Following the death of his first wife, Mademoiselle de Soissons (1603-1637), Henri II's marriage to Anne Geneviève de Bourbon-Condé was arranged to strengthen the ties between the House of Orléans-Longueville and the powerful Bourbon-Condé family. This alliance pulled Henri II into the Fronde alongside his brother-in-law, Louis II de Bourbon, Prince de Condé (1621-1686), one of the most formidable military commanders of the 17th century. Condé's rebellion against Cardinal Mazarin - and by extension, against the young King Louis XIV (1638-1715) - placed the Orléans-Longueville family in a precarious position at court. Henri II's marriage to Anne-Geneviève was far from harmonious. She was widely known for her affair with the Duke of La Rochefoucauld, and her son, Charles Paris (1649-1672), was almost certainly the product of that relationship. Nevertheless, Henri II chose to recognize him as his legitimate heir, despite the scandal it caused.

Our very impressive gold medal in the weight of 20 Ducats is the work of the renowned French medalist Jean Warin (died 1672). As Graveur Général of the French Mint and a favored protégé of Cardinal Richelieu (1585-1642), Warin played a pivotal role in the introduction of the Louis d'or and the Écu blanc into the French monetary system between 1640 and 1641.

Warin was highly selective in accepting medal commissions, and when he did, he produced large-scale dies of exceptional artistic quality, featuring strikingly detailed portraits, such as the one on our medal. J. Forrer described him as 'one of the foremost medallists of France and the best French engraver of coin dies of the seventeenth century' (L. Forrer: Biographical Dictionary of Medals, Vol. VI, London 1916, p. 361).

Our medal was most likely designed in 1642 at the Louvre Mint as part of a parallel project during the production of dies for the new Écus. While bronze cast copies of this medal occasionally appear on the market, an original gold medal - like the piece presented here - has, to the best of our knowledge, never before been available for sale and is absent from all major medal collections and publications. In fact, the only known reference to such a gold medal comes from G. E. von Haller, who noted in 1781 that Monsieur Merveilleux of Neuchâtel once owned an 'exceedingly beautiful' gold medal, reportedly weighing 26 to 27 ducats (G. E. von Haller: Schweizerisches Münz- und Medaillenkabinet, Zweyter Theil, Bern 1781, p. 279). This makes our piece only the second known example, uniquely combining historical significance to both Swiss and French history with the masterful engraving of a distinguished medalist.

The highly sought after Doppeltaler of Zurich were minted between 1556 and 1695 and are consistently rare. During the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648), these coins became a prized 'safe-haven currency,' especially in German-speaking regions, which were heavily affected by severe inflation at the start of the war. Zurich, however, largely escaped the chaos of the conflict, although it eventually succumbed to inflation as well. But large silver coins like our piece remained unaffected by the devaluation. The devaluation of currency primarily impacted the smaller denominations (cf. Hürlimann, p. 98 ff.).

This impressive example of late 19th-century medal art commemorates Hans Waldmann (1435-1489), a prominent military leader of the Old Swiss Confederacy who also served as mayor of the city of Zurich from 1483 to 1489. The flag on the reverse refers to the battles of Grandson (2 March 1476), Murten (22 June 1476), and Nancy (5 January 1477), in which Waldmann, as the leader of the main contingents of the Swiss Confederation, played a decisive role in the victory over Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy (1433-1477).

First minted in 1925, the Swiss 100 Franken 'Vreneli' is a true classic and highly popular piece within Swiss coinage. Only 5,000 pieces were struck under the standards of the Latin Monetary Union, and roughly 1,250 of them were later melted down.

The name 'Vreneli' is a diminutive form of Verena, a traditional Swiss name. It refers to the female figure designed by Fritz Ulisse Landry (1842-1927), whose youthful appearance sparked controversy at the time. Critics argued she was 'too young and unworthy' to symbolize Switzerland.

This year marks the 100th anniversary of this legendary coin – a century-old symbol of Swiss heritage and numismatic artistry. To celebrate this milestone, Swiss Mint is releasing a new edition of the 100 Franken 'Vreneli' in July, honoring the legacy of this iconic piece.

Gabriel Bethlen, the famous - and notorious - Prince of Transylvania, remains a polarizing figure among historians to this day. In Hungary, he is celebrated as a national hero and a champion of early Enlightenment ideals, known for skillfully navigating between the Habsburgs and the Ottoman Empire. In contrast, German, Austrian, and Slovak historians often still portray him as a ruthless tyrant.

His Talers minted in Košice, with their unmistakably martial design, are among the most popular pieces in Transylvanian numismatics - especially when preserved as beautifully as the one we're offering here.

The 1799 Draped Bust Dollar is one of the most iconic early American silver coins, valued for its classic design and historical importance. Struck during a time when the young U.S. Mint was still developing its coinage systems, the pieces were produced with multiple die varieties.

Despite the relatively high mintage for the era, most surviving examples show significant wear, with well-preserved coins being exceptionally rare. Uncirculated specimens are especially scarce and command strong interest among collectors. Admired for its detailed artistry and connection to the formative years of the United States, the 1799 Draped Bust Dollar remains a cornerstone of early American numismatics.

Later, he was honored with the Thanks of Congress and a Congressional Gold Medal for his courageous actions during the Battle of Lake Champlain on 11 September 1814. This battle, also known as the Battle of Plattsburgh, marked the end of the final British invasion of the northern United States during the War of 1812.

5. GEBOTE

Gebote können mündlich, schriftlich oder elektronisch abgegeben werden. Mündliche Gebote erfolgen an der Auktion vor Ort oder per Telefon. Schriftliche Gebote, welche während der Auktion vom Versteigerer interessenswährend ausgeführt werden, haben Vorrang gegenüber Geboten im Saal. Schriftliche und telefonische Aufträge werden vom Versteigerer sorgfältig ausgeführt; es besteht jedoch keine Gewährleistungspflicht des Versteigerers. Schriftliche sowie elektronische Gebote müssen bis spätestens 24 Stunden vor Auktionsbeginn eingegeben. Wird das Gebot über eine Internetplattform abgegeben, muss das Gebot bis spätestens 12 Stunden vor Auktionsbeginn beim Versteigerer eintreffen. Telefonische Gebote müssen bis spätestens 48 Stunden vor Auktionsbeginn vorangemeldet werden und sind nur möglich für Stücke mit einem Schätzwert von über CHF 1'000. Der Versteigerer übernimmt keine Gewährleistung für das Zustandekommen einer Telefonverbindung.

Gebote über «Live Bidding»-Plattformen sind zulässig. Es obliegt dem Bieter, sich rechtzeitig über die technischen Voraussetzungen und Anforderungen der Plattformen zu informieren und die gegebenenfalls notwendigen Installationen und Anpassungen vorzunehmen. Jede Haftung des Versteigerers für Schäden infolge von Unterbrüchen oder Verzögerungen wegen technischer Mängel wird wegbedungen.

Jede Abgabe eines Gebots ist eine verbindliche Offerte, die nicht zurückgenommen werden kann; der Bieter bleibt an sein Gebot gebunden, bis dieses entweder überboten oder vom Versteigerer abgelehnt wird.

Der Versteigerer behält sich das Recht vor, selbst bzw. namens eines Dritten in Auktionen mitzubieten.

6. ZUSCHLAG

Der Zuschlag erfolgt nach dem ortsüblichen Ausruf auf das höchste Gebot und verpflichtet den Höchstbietenden zur Abnahme des Loses. Bei gleich hohen schriftlichen Geboten hat das früher eingegangene Gebot Vorrang. Gebote, welche 80% des Schätzwertes unterschreiten, können nicht berücksichtigt werden. «Entweder/oder»-Aufträge sowie Auftragslimiten können nur bedingt ausgeführt respektive berücksichtigt werden. Der Versteigerer ist berechtigt, ohne Angabe von Gründen ein Gebot abzulehnen; für die Ablehnung eines Gebots kann der Versteigerer nicht haftbar gemacht werden.

Mit dem Zuschlag geht die Gefahr der Sache auf den Käufer über. Der Käufer ist für die Leistung des Zuschlagspreises persönlich haftbar und kann nicht geltend machen, auf die Rechnung eines Dritten gekauft zu haben.

7. ZUSCHLAGSPREIS / MEHRWERTSTEUER

Auf den Zuschlagspreis ist vom Käufer ein Aufgeld in der Höhe von 22,5% zu entrichten. Bei der Teilnahme an der Auktion über eine der zur Verfügung stehenden «Live Bidding»-Plattformen fällt ein zusätzliches Aufgeld von 2,0% (maximal CHF 1'000 pro Los) an. Die Forderung aus der Auktionsrechnung ist nach erfolgtem Zuschlag sofort fällig und in Schweizer Franken (CHF) zu bezahlen.

Beim Verkauf von Silber- und Kupfermünzen sowie Medaillen wird auf das Total der Auktionsrechnung (d. h. Zuschlagspreis plus Aufgeld und allfällige Versandkosten und Versicherungsprämien) die gesetzliche Mehrwertsteuer in der Höhe von 8,1% erhoben. Beim Verkauf von staatlich geprägten Goldmünzen wird keine Mehrwertsteuer erhoben.

Keine Mehrwertsteuer wird erhoben, wenn der Käufer Wohnsitz im Ausland hat und die Auktionslose durch den Versteigerer ins Ausland speditiert werden. Werden die Auktionslose einem Käufer mit Wohnsitz im Ausland in der Schweiz ausgehändigt, wird die Mehrwertsteuer in Rechnung gestellt, jedoch vom Versteigerer nach Vorliegen der definitiven Veranlagungsverfügung des Schweizer Zolls zurückerstattet.

Im Ausland anfallende Abgaben wie z. B. Zollgebühren und Steuern sowie die bei einem Versand anfallenden Versandkosten und Versicherungsprämien gehen vollständig zu Lasten des Käufers.

8. BEZAHLUNG / AUSLIEFERUNG

Die Auktionsrechnung ist innert 10 Tage nach Erhalt zu bezahlen. Erfolgt die Begleichung der Auktionsrechnung nicht innerhalb dieser Frist, fällt der Käufer automatisch in Zahlungsverzug und hat Verzugszinsen in der Höhe von 15% p.a. zu leisten. Bei Zahlungsverzug des Käufers oder bei Verweigerung der Abnahme durch den Käufer behält sich der Versteigerer das Recht vor, vom Vertrag zurückzutreten oder gegen den Käufer auf Erfüllung des Vertrags oder aber auf Ersatz des aus der Nichterfüllung entstandenen Schadens zu klagen.

Die Auktionslose werden grundsätzlich erst nach vollständiger Bezahlung der Auktionsrechnung übergeben oder versandt. Es liegt allein im Ermessen des Versteigerers, Lose gegen Rechnung auszuhändigen.

Der Versand von Auktionslosen in die Islamische Republik Iran erfolgt ausdrücklich auf eigenes Risiko des Empfängers.

Leu Numismatik AG kann keine Bestellungen von Kunden mit Rechnungs- und/oder Lieferadresse in der Russischen Föderation annehmen.

9. EIGENTUMSÜBERGANG

Das Eigentum des Einlieferers am versteigerten Auktionsgut bleibt bis zur vollständigen Begleichung der Auktionsrechnung vorbehalten.

10. GEWÄHRLEISTUNG

Die Beschreibungen der Lose erfolgen nach bestem Wissen und Gewissen und entsprechen dem Wissensstand im Zeitpunkt der Abfassung des Katalogtextes. Den Bietern steht es offen, sich über den Zustand der Lose persönlich oder durch einen Vertreter während der im Katalog angegebenen Besichtigungstage zu informieren.

Die Echtheit der Auktionsgüter wird gewährleistet.

Der Gewährleistungsanspruch wird ausschliesslich dem Käufer eingeräumt und darf nicht an Dritte abgetreten werden. Bei Münzen in sogenannte «slabs» erlischt jegliche Gewährleistung, sobald diese geöffnet werden.

Mängelrügen müssen beim Versteigerer unverzüglich mit eingeschriebenem Brief geltend gemacht werden. Beanstandungen wegen Meinungsverschiedenheiten über den Erhaltungsgrad eines Loses sind nicht zulässig. Lose, welche mehr als ein Stück beinhalten, sind von jeglicher Reklamation ausgeschlossen. Wird mit der Mängelrüge eine Fälschung des Auktionsguts geltend gemacht, ist das gefälschte Auktionsgut im gleichen Zustand, wie es dem Käufer übergeben wurde und unbelastet von Ansprüchen Dritter dem Versteigerer unverzüglich zurückzugeben. Der Käufer hat auf eigene Kosten den Nachweis zu erbringen, dass es sich beim Auktionsgut um eine Fälschung handelt. Der Versteigerer kann vom Käufer verlangen, dass dieser auf eigene Kosten Gutachten von zwei unabhängigen und in diesem Bereich anerkannten Experten erstellen lässt. An diese Gutachten ist der Versteigerer aber nicht gebunden und kann auf eigene Kosten zusätzlichen Rat eines Fachexperten einholen.

Bei berechtigten Mängelrügen beschränken sich die Ansprüche des Käufers auf die Rückerstattung des vom Käufer bezahlten Kaufpreises und Aufgeldes gegen Aushändigung des Auktionsguts an den Versteigerer. Andere oder weitergehende Ansprüche des Käufers gegen den Versteigerer sind ausgeschlossen. Die Beachtung ausländischer Zoll- und Devisenvorschriften etc. ist Sache des Käufers. Der Versteigerer lehnt die Verantwortung für einen allfälligen Schaden, welcher aus der Zuwiderhandlung gegen derartige Bestimmungen entsteht, ausdrücklich ab.

11. ERFÜLLUNGORT / GERICHTSSTAND / ANWENDBARES RECHT

12. SPRACHE

13. MITWIRKUNG STADTAMMANNAMT ZÜRICH 1 / HAFTUNGS AUSSCHLUSS

Die Auktion findet unter Mitwirkung des Stadtammannesamt Zürich 1 statt. Jede Haftung der mitwirkenden Behörde, des Stadtammanns, der Gemeinde oder des Staates für Handlungen des Auktionators entfällt.

FLOOR AUCTION TERMS AND CONDITIONS LEU NUMISMATIK AG

1. GENERAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS

The following Floor Auction Terms and Conditions apply to the floor auctions of Leu Numismatik AG. The auction is voluntary and public. The floor auctions take place in the name of Leu Numismatik AG (hereinafter "auctioneer") and for the account of the consignors. These Floor Auction Terms and Conditions are acknowledged on submission a verbal, written or electronic bid and by registering on the website of Leu Numismatik AG (www.leunumismatik.com).

The auctioneer is authorised to assert all rights of the consignor in his own name against the buyer.

2. PROOF OF IDENTITY / PARTICIPATION IN FLOOR AUCTION

The auctioneer generally does not give the names of the consignors and buyers. Bidders that are unknown to the auctioneer have to prove their identity to the auction management before the auction by presenting an official identity card. Bidders who want to submit their bids via a "Live Bidding" platform must register on the platform at least 12 hours before the start of the auction and be approved by the auctioneer. The auctioneer reserves the right to refuse access to persons to the auction rooms at its discretion and without stating the reasons, or to exclude them from participating in the auction via "Live Bidding" platforms.

3. AUCTION CATALOGUE

The auction is exclusively based on the descriptions for the respective lot number in the printed auction catalogue. The illustrations as well as the auction catalogue published in the Internet are merely informative.

4. SEQUENCE OF THE AUCTION

In general, the auction takes place according to the programme provided in the auction catalogue. With the consent of the auction supervisor, the auctioneer may deviate from the sequence in the catalogue and combine the numbers. No provision is made for the distribution of lots. In case of differences of opinion, a lot can be called out again by the auctioneer. The auction takes place in English and partly in German.

5. BIDS

Bids can be submitted in verbal, written or electronic form. Verbal bids are made at the auction site or by telephone. Written bids, which are executed in a discretionary manner by the auctioneer during the auction, are given priority over bids in the gallery. Written and telephone orders are carefully executed by the auctioneer; however, the auctioneer is not under a guarantee obligation. Written and electronic bids must be received 24 hours before the start of the auction. If the bid is made via an Internet platform, the bid must arrive at the auctioneer no later than 12 hours before the start of the auction. Telephone bids must be notified in advance, 48 hours before the start of the auction and are only possible for items with an estimated value of more than CHF 1,000. The auctioneer does not warrant for a telephone connection.

Bids on "Live Bidding" platforms are allowed. It is up to the tenderer to inform himself in good time about the technical requirements and requirements of the platforms and to make any necessary installations and adjustments. Any liability of the auctioneer for damage caused by interruptions or delays due to technical defects shall be excluded.

Each bid is binding and cannot be reversed; the bidder remains bound by his bid, until this is either outbid or rejected by the auctioneer.

The auctioneer reserves the right to bid in auctions itself or on behalf of a third party.

6. ACCEPTANCE OF A BID

The contract will be awarded to the highest bid according to the usual exclamation and the highest bidder is obliged to accept the lot. In case of equal written bids, the earlier bid has priority. Bids that are less than 80% of the estimated price cannot be considered. "Either/or" orders as well as orders with a total bid limit can only be carried out to a limited extent. The auctioneer may reject a bid without stating reasons; the auctioneer cannot be held liable for the rejection of a bid.

The risk passes to the buyer with the fall of the hammer. The buyer is personally liable for the provision of the hammer price and cannot claim to have bought for the account of a third party.

7. HAMMERPRICE / VAT

The buyer has to pay a premium of 22.5% on the hammer price. When participating in the auction via one of the available "Live Bidding" platforms, an additional premium of 2.0% (max. CHF 1,000 per lot) applies. After the fall of the hammer, the payment claim from the auction invoice is due and payable immediately in Swiss Francs (CHF).

In the case of a sale of silver and copper coins as well as medals, statutory value-added tax of 8.1% will be levied on the total of the auction invoice (i.e. the hammer price plus the premium and any shipping costs and insurance premiums). There is no VAT on sales of state-stamped gold coins.

No VAT will be charged if the buyer has his/her place of residence abroad and the auction lots are shipped abroad by the auctioneer. If the auction lots are handed over in Switzerland to a buyer domiciled abroad, VAT will be charged, but will be refunded by the auctioneer after the definitive tax assessment decision of Swiss customs has been provided.

Taxes levied abroad, e.g. customs fees and taxes, as well as shipping costs and insurance premiums incurred due to shipment, shall be borne in full by the buyer.

8. PAYMENT / DELIVERY

The auction invoice must be paid within 10 days of receipt. If the auction invoice is not settled within this period, the buyer will automatically default on payment and must pay interest on arrears in the amount of 15% p. a. In case of default of payment by the buyer or in case of refusal of acceptance by the buyer, the auctioneer reserves the right to rescind the contract or to sue the buyer for non-performance or claim compensation for the damage resulting from non-performance. In principle, the auction lots will be handed over or shipped only after full payment of the auction invoice. It is solely at the discretion of the auctioneer to hand over lots against invoice.

The sending of auction lots to the Islamic Republic of Iran is expressly at the own risk of the recipient.

Leu Numismatik AG cannot accept any orders from customers with billing and/or shipping address in the Russian Federation.

9. TRANSFER OF TITLE

The title of the consignor to the auctioned item is reserved pending full settlement of the auction invoice.

10. WARRANTY

The descriptions of the lots are given to the best of our knowledge and belief, and correspond to the knowledge at the time of the drafting of the catalogue text. It is up to bidders to inform themselves of the condition of the lots personally or through proxies during the inspection days specified in the catalogue.

The authenticity of the auction goods is guaranteed. The warranty claim is granted exclusively to the buyer and may not be assigned to a third party. In the case of coins in so-called "slabs", any guarantee expires as soon as these are opened.

The auctioneer must notify defects immediately by registered letter. Complaints regarding differences of opinion about the level of conservation of a lot are not permissible. Lots, which contain more than one piece, are excluded from any complaint. If a counterfeiting of the auction item is claimed in the notification of defects, the counterfeited auction item shall be returned to the auctioneer immediately in the same condition as it was given to the buyer and unencumbered by third party claims. The buyer shall prove at his own expense that the auction item is a counterfeit. The auctioneer may require the buyer to have his own expert report prepared by two independent experts in his field. However, the auctioneer is not bound to these expert opinions and may obtain additional advice from a specialist at his own expense.

In case of legitimate complaints, the claims of the buyer are limited to the refund of the purchase price and premiums paid by the buyer on delivery of the auction item to the auctioneer. Any other or further claims of the buyer against the auctioneer are excluded.

The observance of foreign customs and foreign currency regulations etc. is the responsibility of the buyer. The auctioneer expressly rejects responsibility for any damage resulting from infringement against such provisions.

11. PLACE OF PERFORMANCE / VENUE / APPLICABLE LAW

Place of performance as well as sole venue is Zurich I (Switzerland). The auction and all related legal transactions are subject to Swiss law.

12. LANGUAGE

The German original text is authoritative for the interpretation of the Floor Auction Terms and Conditions drafted in German, French, English and Italian.

13. SUPERVISION OF STADTAMMANNAMT ZÜRICH 1 / WAIVER

The auction takes place under the supervision of officials of the city of Zurich (Stadtammannamt Zurich 1). Any liability of the cooperating authority, the municipality or the state for acts of the auctioneer is waived.

CONDITIONS DE VENTES AUX ENCHÈRES DE LEU NUMISMATIK AG

1. PRINCIPES GÉNÉRAUX

Les conditions de ventes aux enchères ci-après sont applicables aux ventes aux enchères en salles de la société Leu Numismatik AG. Les enchères sont des ventes aux enchères volontaires et publiques. Les enchères sont effectuées au nom de Leu Numismatik AG (ci-après désignée par le Commissaire-priseur) et pour le compte du fournisseur. Les présentes conditions de ventes aux enchères sont reconnues par la soumission d'une offre verbale, écrite ou électronique.

Le Commissaire-priseur est habilité pour faire valoir tous les droits du fournisseur en son nom vis-à-vis de l'acheteur.

2. LÉGITIMATION / PARTICIPATION AUX ENCHÈRES

En principe, le Commissaire-priseur ne divulgue pas les noms des fournisseurs et des acheteurs. Les soumissionnaires inconnus du Commissaire-priseur doivent prouver leur légitimité préalablement à la vente aux enchères auprès de la direction des enchères en présentant une pièce d'identité officielle. Les soumissionnaires qui veulent soumettre leurs offres via une plate-forme d'enchères en ligne «Live Bidding» doivent s'inscrire auprès de la plate-forme au moins 12 heures avant le début des enchères et obtenir l'autorisation du Commissaire-priseur. Le Commissaire-priseur se réserve le droit d'interdire à des personnes, à son entière discrétion et sans indication de motifs, l'accès aux locaux de la vente aux enchères, de les expulser des locaux de la vente aux enchères ou de les exclure de la participation aux enchères via les plates-formes d'enchères en ligne «Live Bidding».

3. CATALOGUE DE VENTE AUX ENCHÈRES

Seules les descriptions relatives au numéro du lot respectif dans le catalogue de vente aux enchères sont décisives pour la vente aux enchères. Les illustrations ainsi que le catalogue de vente aux enchères publiés sur Internet sont uniquement à titre indicatif.

4. DÉROULEMENT DES ENCHÈRES

Les enchères ont lieu en principe conformément au programme prévu dans le catalogue de vente aux enchères. Avec l'accord de la surveillance des enchères, le Commissaire-priseur a le droit de déroger à l'ordre prévu dans le catalogue et d'associer des numéros. La répartition des lots n'est pas prévue. En cas de différends, un lot peut de nouveau être annoncé par le Commissaire-priseur. Les enchères se déroulent en partie en anglais et en partie en allemand.

5. OFFRES

Les offres peuvent être soumises verbalement, par écrit ou de manière électronique. Les offres verbales peuvent être effectuées à l'égard des enchères sur place ou par téléphone. Les offres écrites qui sont réalisées pendant les enchères par le Commissaire-priseur sont prioritaires par rapport aux offres en salle aux fins de préservation des intérêts. Les ordres écrits et téléphoniques sont soigneusement exécutés par le Commissaire-priseur; toutefois il n'existe aucune obligation de garantie du Commissaire-priseur. Les offres écrites et électroniques doivent être réceptionnées au plus tard 24 heures avant le début des enchères. Si l'offre est soumise via une plate-forme Internet, l'offre doit parvenir au Commissaire-priseur au plus tard 12 heures avant le début des enchères. Les offres téléphoniques doivent être annoncées au préalable, au plus tard 48 heures avant le début des enchères et ne sont possibles que pour des objets d'une valeur estimative supérieure à CHF 1'000. Le Commissaire-priseur n'assume aucune garantie quant à l'établissement d'une liaison téléphonique.

Les offres via les plates-formes d'enchères en ligne «Live-Bidding» sont autorisées. Il incombe au soumissionnaire de s'informer en temps utile des conditions et exigences techniques des plates-formes et d'entreprendre les installations et les adaptations requises le cas échéant. Toute responsabilité du Commissaire-priseur pour dommages suite à des interruptions ou des retards dus à des défaillances techniques est exclue.

Toute soumission d'une offre est une offre ferme qui ne peut être retirée; le soumissionnaire demeure lié par son offre jusqu'à ce que celle-ci soit renchérie ou refusée par le Commissaire-priseur.

Le commissaire-priseur se réserve le droit d'enchérir lui-même ou au nom d'un tiers.

6. ADJUDICATION

L'adjudication a lieu après la proclamation pratiquée localement sur l'offre la plus élevée et oblige le plus offrant à accepter le lot. En cas d'offres écrites d'un montant identique, l'offre reçue en premier l'emporte. Les offres inférieures à hauteur de 80% du prix estimé, ne peuvent être prises en considération. Les ordres «ou/ou» ainsi que les limites d'ordres ne peuvent être réalisés ou pris en compte que sous condition. Le Commissaire-priseur a le droit, sans indication de motifs, de refuser une offre; le Commissaire-priseur ne peut être tenu responsable du refus d'une offre.

Le risque de la chose est transféré à l'acheteur lors de l'adjudication. L'acheteur est personnellement responsable du versement du prix de l'adjudication et ne peut faire valoir qu'il a acheté pour le compte d'un tiers.

7. PRIX DE L'ADJUDICATION / TAXE SUR LA VALEUR AJOUTÉE

L'acheteur doit s'acquitter d'une prime de 2,5% sur le prix de l'adjudication. Lors de la participation aux enchères via des plates-formes d'enchères en ligne «Live Bidding» existantes, une prime supplémentaire de 2,0% (max. CHF 1'000 par lot) est exigible. La créance résultant de la facture de la vente aux enchères est immédiatement exigible après l'adjudication et doit être réglée en francs suisses (CHF).

En cas de vente de pièces de monnaie en argent, en cuivre et de médailles, une TVA légale de 8,1% est prélevée sur le total de la facture de la vente aux enchères (c'est-à-dire le prix de l'adjudication majoré de la prime et de tous les frais d'expédition et primes d'assurances éventuels). Aucune TVA n'est prélevée en cas de vente de pièces d'or frappées sur le territoire national. Aucune TVA n'est prélevée lorsque l'acheteur est domicilié à l'étranger et que les lots des enchères sont expédiés à l'étranger par le Commissaire-priseur. Si les lots des enchères sont remis en Suisse à un acheteur domicilié à l'étranger, la TVA est facturée, elle est toutefois remboursée par le Commissaire-priseur sur présentation de la décision de taxation définitive de la douane suisse.

Les prélèvements exigibles à l'étranger, comme par exemple les taxes douanières et les impôts, ainsi que les frais de port dus en cas d'expédition et les primes d'assurances sont exclusivement à la charge de l'acheteur.

8. PAIEMENT / LIVRAISON

La facture de la vente aux enchères doit être payée dans les 10 jours suivant la réception. Si le règlement de la facture de la vente aux enchères n'est pas effectué dans ce délai, l'acheteur est automatiquement en demeure et doit s'acquitter d'intérêts moratoires de 15% par an. En cas de demeure de l'acheteur ou en cas de refus de prendre livraison de la part de l'acheteur, le Commissaire-priseur se réserve le droit de résilier le contrat ou de faire valoir un préjudice à l'encontre de l'acheteur, de réclamer l'exécution du contrat ou la réparation du préjudice causé par la non-exécution. Les lots des enchères sont en principe remis ou expédiés uniquement après paiement intégral de la facture de la vente aux enchères. Le Commissaire-priseur remet les lots contre facture à son entière discrétion.

L'expédition des lots d'enchères à destination de la République islamique d'Iran est faite aux risques et périls exclusifs du destinataire.

Leu Numismatik AG ne peut accepter aucune commande de clients dont l'adresse de facturation et/ou de livraison se trouve dans la Fédération de Russie.

9. TRANSFERT DE PROPRIÉTÉ

La propriété du fournisseur sur le bien mis en vente et adjugé demeure réservée jusqu'au règlement complet de la facture de la vente aux enchères.

10. GARANTIE

Les descriptions des lots sont effectuées en toute connaissance de cause et correspondent au niveau des connaissances à la date de la rédaction du texte du catalogue. Les soumissionnaires peuvent s'informer de l'état des lots personnellement ou par le biais d'un représentant pendant les jours de visite indiqués dans le catalogue.

L'authenticité des biens mis aux enchères est garantie. Le droit à une garantie est conféré exclusivement à l'acheteur et ne peut être cédé à un tiers. Concernant les pièces dans les coques de protection et d'authentification de la monnaie dites «slabs», toute garantie s'éteint dès qu'elles sont ouvertes.

Les réclamations à propos d'un défaut doivent être immédiatement adressées par lettre recommandée au Commissaire-priseur. Les réclamations dues à des différends sur le niveau de conservation d'un lot ne sont pas autorisées. Les lots qui contiennent plus d'une pièce sont exclus de toute réclamation. Si une réclamation à propos d'un défaut fait état d'une contrefaçon du bien mis aux enchères, le bien mis aux enchères contrefait dans le même état que celui qui a été remis à l'acheteur, et non grevé de droits de tiers doit être restitué au Commissaire-priseur sans délai. Il incombe à l'acheteur d'apporter la preuve, à ses frais, que le bien mis aux enchères est une contrefaçon. Le Commissaire-priseur peut exiger de l'acheteur qu'il fasse une expertise, à ses frais, par deux experts indépendants, reconnus dans ce domaine. Toutefois, le Commissaire n'est pas lié par ces expertises et il peut demander, à ses frais, un conseil supplémentaire auprès d'un expert.

En cas de réclamations légitimes à propos d'un défaut, les droits de l'acheteur se limitent au remboursement du prix d'achat et de la prime payés par l'acheteur contre remise du bien mis aux enchères au Commissaire-priseur. Toute autre prétention de l'acheteur à l'encontre du Commissaire-priseur est exclue.

Il incombe à l'acheteur de respecter les prescriptions étrangères en matière de douanes et de devises etc. Le Commissaire-priseur décline expressément toute responsabilité en cas de dommage éventuel, né de la violation de dispositions de cette nature.

11. LIEU D'EXÉCUTION / JURIDICTION COMPÉTENTE / DROIT APPLICABLE

Le lieu d'exécution ainsi que la juridiction compétente exclusive est Zurich (Suisse). La vente aux enchères ainsi que tous les actes juridiques y afférents sont régis de manière exclusive par le droit suisse.

12. LANGUE

Le texte original en allemand est décisif pour interpréter les présentes conditions de ventes aux enchères en allemand, en français, en anglais et en italien.

13. SUPERVISION DU STADTAMMANNAMT ZÜRICH 1 / EXCLUSION DE RESPONSABILITÉ

La vente aux enchères se déroule avec la participation de l'autorité municipale de Zurich 1. Toute responsabilité de l'autorité participante, du maire, de la commune ou de l'état pour les actes du commissaire-priseur est exclue.

CONDIZIONI DI PARTECIPAZIONE ALL'ASTA LEU NUMISMATIK AG

1. PRINCIPI GENERALI

Le seguenti condizioni di partecipazione all'asta valgono per le aste in sala della Leu Numismatik AG. L'asta costituisce una vendita all'asta volontaria e pubblica. L'asta viene effettuata a nome della Leu Numismatik AG (di seguito denominata mediatrice d'asta) e per conto del depositante. Facendo un'offerta orale, scritta o elettronica si riconoscono le seguenti condizioni di partecipazione all'asta.

La mediatrice d'asta è autorizzata a far valere tutti i diritti del depositante su proprio nome verso l'acquirente.

2. LEGITTIMAZIONE / PARTECIPAZIONE ALL'ASTA

In genere la mediatrice non rende noti i nomi dei depositanti e degli acquirenti. Gli offerenti che non sono noti alla mediatrice sono tenuti a legittimarsi prima dell'asta con un documento d'identità ufficiale. Gli offerenti che intendono effettuare le loro offerte tramite una piattaforma live bidding, sono tenuti a farsi registrare almeno 1 ore prima dell'inizio dell'asta ed essere ammessi dalla mediatrice. La mediatrice si riserva il diritto di vietare alle persone a discrezione e senza indicazione dei motivi l'accesso ai locali d'asta, di espellere le persone dai locali pertinenti o di escluderle dalla partecipazione all'asta tramite « live bidding ».

3. CATALOGO D'ASTA

Determinanti per la vendita all'asta sono esclusivamente le descrizioni relative ai pertinenti numeri di sorteggio nel catalogo d'asta stampato. Le illustrazioni e il catalogo d'asta pubblicato sul web hanno soltanto carattere informativo.

4. SVOLGIMENTO ASTA

L'asta si svolge in linea di massima secondo il programma previsto nel catalogo in questione. Con il consenso del sorvegliante d'asta la mediatrice è autorizzata a derogare all'ordine contemplato nel catalogo e a riunire i numeri. La suddivisione dei buoni non è prevista. In caso di controversie la mediatrice può nuovamente chiamare un buono. L'asta si svolge in inglese e in parte in tedesco.

5. OFFERTE

Le offerte possono essere fatte oralmente, per iscritto o elettronicamente. Le offerte orali avvengono all'asta in loco o per telefono. Le offerte scritte che vengono effettuate dalla mediatrice d'asta nel rispetto degli interessi, hanno la precedenza sulle offerte fatte in sala.

I mandati scritti e telefonici vengono svolti con cura dalla mediatrice; non sussiste tuttavia un obbligo di garanzia della medesima. Le offerte scritte ed elettroniche devono pervenire entro al più tardi 24 ore prima dell'inizio dell'asta. Se l'offerta viene fatta tramite una piattaforma di internet, essa deve pervenire alla mediatrice entro al più tardi 12 ore prima dell'inizio dell'asta in questione. Le offerte telefoniche devono essere annunciate al più tardi 48 ore prima dell'inizio dell'asta e sono soltanto possibili per pezzi con un valore stimato di oltre CHF 1'000. La mediatrice non assume alcuna garanzia per la costituzione di un collegamento telefonico.

Le offerte tramite le piattaforme « live bidding » sono consentite. Compete all'offerente di informarsi tempestivamente sulle condizioni e i requisiti tecnici delle piattaforme e di effettuare le eventuali installazioni e gli adeguamenti necessari. Qualsiasi responsabilità della mediatrice per danni subentrati a seguito di interruzioni o ritardi per difetti tecnici è esclusa.

Ogni offerta effettuata è vincolante e non può essere revocata. L'offerente è vincolato alla sua offerta sino a quando quest'ultima non viene superata da un'altra offerta o respinta dalla mediatrice d'asta.

La mediatrice si riserva il diritto di fare offerte nelle aste personalmente o per conto di terzi.

6. AGGIUDICAZIONE

L'aggiudicazione avviene secondo la chiamata usuale all'offerta più alta e obbliga l'offerente in questione a ritirare il buono. In caso di offerte scritte di pari entità, l'offerta giunta per prima ha la precedenza. Le offerte che sono inferiori all'80% del prezzo di stima non possono essere considerate. I mandati « o/o » e i limiti ai mandati possono essere effettuati e presi in considerazione solo sotto condizione. La mediatrice è autorizzata a respingere un'offerta senza indicarne i motivi; la mediatrice non risponde in caso di respingimento di un'offerta.

Con l'aggiudicazione il pericolo dell'oggetto passa all'acquirente. L'acquirente risponde personalmente per il pagamento del prezzo di aggiudicazione e non può far valere di aver comprato su conto di un terzo.

7. PREZZO DI AGGIUDICAZIONE / IMPOSTA SUL VALORE AGGIUNTO

Sul prezzo di aggiudicazione l'acquirente è tenuto a versare un sovrapprezzo pari al 22,5%. In caso di una partecipazione all'asta tramite una piattaforma « live bidding » messa a disposizione occorre versare un ulteriore sovrapprezzo del 2,0% (massimale CHF 1'000 per buono). Il credito risultante dalla fattura della vendita d'asta è immediatamente esigibile dopo l'aggiudicazione e deve essere saldato in franchi svizzeri (CHF).

In caso di vendita di monete d'argento e di rame e di medaglie sul totale della fattura della vendita d'asta (vale a dire il prezzo d'aggiudicazione + sovrapprezzo ed eventuali costi di spedizione e premi d'assicurazione) viene riscossa l'imposta sul valore aggiunto pari all'8,1%. In caso di vendita di monete d'oro statali non viene riscossa l'imposta sul valore aggiunto. Non viene riscossa l'imposta sul valore aggiunto, quando l'acquirente è domiciliato all'estero e i buoni d'asta vengono spediti all'estero dalla mediatrice. Se i buoni d'asta vengono consegnati a un acquirente domiciliato all'estero in Svizzera, l'imposta sul valore aggiunto viene fatturata, ma rimborsata dalla mediatrice dietro presentazione della decisione di tassazione della dogana svizzera.

Le tasse da versare all'estero come per esempio le tasse doganali e le imposte e le spese di spedizione e i premi assicurativi da sostenere in caso di spedizione non sono pienamente a carico dell'acquirente.

8. PAGAMENTO / CONSEGNA

La fattura deve essere pagata entro 10 giorni dalla sua ricezione. Se la fattura non viene saldata entro la scadenza, l'acquirente è messo automaticamente in mora ed è tenuto a versare interessi di mora pari al 15 % p.a.
