An able administrator, loved by the soldiery but reviled by the Senate as a tyrant, Domitian's death greatly divided opinion. The army mourned him deeply, calling on him to be deified and demanding that his assassins be brought to justice. The plebs reacted with indifference while the Senate celebrated with sheer delight. The memory sanctions the Senate launched against Domitian in September 96 AD were particularly severe. It wasn't just in Rome that Domitian's memory faced all-out erasure. Domitian's memory practice was also seen in many cities in Asia Minor, including Ephesus and Cibyra.
