Ref.: SC 955; HGC 9, 435. Fine. Achaëus was a general and kinsman of Antiochus III of Seleucid Asia Minor. Married Laodice, daughter of Mithridates II of Pontus. Appointed commander of all Asia west of Mount Taurus in 223 BC and then recovered Seleucid territories from Attalus I of Pergamum. The fourth Syrian war and the preoccupation of Antiochus and his army with Ptolemy IV and Molon provided Achaëus the opportunity to declare himself king in Phrygia in the autumn of 220, thus finally severing the ties with Antiochus III. In 218 BC Attalus regained control over the Greek cities of northern Ionia, Aeolis and Troas and the Mysian lands as far east as the Megistos river, which occupied Achaëus during the fourth Syrian war. He held power only until Antiochus had reached a peace with Ptolemy, and issued bronze coinage in his name; Antiochus then allied with Attalus to retake the territory Achaëus had claimed. Achaëus withstood a siege in the citadel of Sardis for two years. After sustaining a siege of two years, the citadel at last fell into the hands of Antiochus in 213 BC, through the treachery of Bolis (who had been employed by Sosibius, minister to Ptolemy). Bolis pledged to deliver Achaëus to safety, but turned him over to Antiochus, who immediately put him to death.

Ref: SNG Arikantürk 713-6 Ophryinion is stated as the burial place of Hector in ancient literature; it is said that a hero cult for him was established there. The depiction of the head of Hector on Ophryinion coins has three variations: In this glamorous variation, his helmet resembles the helmet of Athena shown in three-quarter view with a triple-feathered crest and raised cheek pieces as seen on the coins of the neighboring city of Sigeion. The image of Hector, helps explaining the epithet of korythaiolos in Iliad, the meaning of which is arguable. The head on Ophryinion coins represents "(quick moving like) the stormy (wind) helmeted Hector (κορυθαίολος Ἑκτωρ)" who is likened to the galloping horses with their manes flying. S. Leu Numismatik, Auction 12 (2022), lot 1313, (1'600 CHF). VF. Julia Cornelia Paula was a Roman noblewoman. She married Elagabalus soon after he became emperor in 218 AD. Upon marriage, she was given the prestigious title of Augusta, signifying her status as empress. Coins were minted with her image, often featuring the goddess Concordia, symbolizing harmony in marriage. The obverse depicts the bride and gives her the title of Augusta, which is known to have been granted to Julia Paula upon her marriage to Elagabalus, while the reverse features Concordia-a wish for a happy relationship between imperial husband and wife. Alas, there was little concord between Paula and Elagabalus once the wedding was over and the marriage started. Their marriage was short-lived, as Elagabalus divorced her in 220 AD. Julia Paula was one of the few Roman empresses who voluntarily left imperial life rather than being executed or exiled.

By presenting Heracles as the city's founder, Perinthus draws on a common Roman motif of associating cities with divine heroes. The inscription emphasizes its Ionian origins, reinforcing the city's identity and pride. This dual approach blends the mythological figure of Heracles with the historical Ionian connection, showcasing how Perinthus used coinage to celebrate its past and strengthen its civic identity in the Roman world.

Hector, the eldest son of Troy's King Priam and Queen Hecuba, is the first national hero of Anatolia. It is a symbol not only of the city of Ilium, also for all of the people of Anatolia. Homer compares Hector with Ares in terms of his fighting skills. Because Hector's role in the war is quite big and important. He had to lead the armies and inspire trust. The decision, responsibility and obligation are in his responsibility. During the war, he was killed by Achilles outside the walls of the city of Ilium in front of his wife and family. Athena, on the other hand, has been of great importance to the city of Ilium since its founding and is associated with the city's founding mythology. His depiction of these two important figures of the city in the Roman Empire must be a sign of Romans respect and devotion to his roots.

The invasion was prompted by the shipwreck of one of Richard's vessels, which carried his fiancée, Berengaria of Navarre, along with some troops. Isaac's harsh treatment of the ship's crew and passengers led to Richard's swift action. After overthrowing and capturing Isaac, Richard sold Cyprus to the Knights Templar, who later transferred it to Guy of Lusignan, the founder of the Lusignan dynasty on the island.

That the scene refers to theories of redemption or the migration of the soul before (again) birth is also underlined by the lion image, since according to several secret teachings the sign of the lion represents the starting point for the soul's formation before birth in the world. Both the figure with the hand on the mouth and the lion often appear on the gnostic gems the lion in connection with the motif of striding over a figure lying on the ground. Cf.
