71 KINGS OF MACEDON. Alexander III 'the Great' (336-323 BC). GOLD Stater. Amphipolis. Possibly lifetime issue. Obv: Head of Athena right, wearing Corinthian helmet decorated with serpent. Rev: ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ. Nike standing left, holding wreath and stylis. Control: Kantharos in left field. Price 168. Already with Philip II the occupation of the Mount Pangaion region with its rich gold mines had made possible the abundant emission of gold coins, something that until then had been throughout Greece rather rare and linked to extraordinary circumstances or moments of crisis. Alexander, who imposed a single coinage throughout his vast empire, was able to issue Staters and their fractions in gold, using the Attic weight as the unit of measure. On the Staters the head of the goddess Athena with Corinthian helmet was depicted on the obverse, while a winged Nike was reproduced on the reverse. On silver tetradrachms, on the other hand, the head of Herakles with lion skin was depicted on the obverse and Zeus seated on a throne on the reverse (Phidian model). Toward the end of his reign there is an assimilation of the ruler with Herakles. The practice, derived from the Eastern world of reproducing the portrait of the ruler on the coin, represents a change with Alexander's coinage. But as if the human figure did not dare to suddenly replace that of the gods, the image is clothed with religious content, through its deification or identification with the deity. Even after his death for a long time Tetradrachms with the effigy of Alexander continued to be issued by his successors. The Macedonian king had the possibility to exploit for his coinage a large amount of precious metal from the vast empire he had conquered. The extremely rich mines scattered throughout this territory also made his successors self-sufficient. The coin from that time became a symbol of the ruler's power and absolute authority; no longer protected by the image of deities, it became an instrument of propaganda and power. Condition: Near mint state. Weight: 8.62 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

120 KINGS OF MACEDON. Alexander III 'the Great' (336-323 BC). GOLD Stater. Sidon. Obv: Head of Athena right, wearing crested Corinthian helmet decorated with griffin. Rev: ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ. Nike standing left, holding wreath and stylis. Control: Club below left wing. Price 3460. Already with Philip II the occupation of the Mount Pangaion region with its rich gold mines had made possible the abundant emission of gold coins, something that until then had been throughout Greece rather rare and linked to extraordinary circumstances or moments of crisis. Alexander, who imposed a single coinage throughout his vast empire, was able to issue Staters and their fractions in gold, using the Attic weight as the unit of measure. On the Staters the head of the goddess Athena with Corinthian helmet was depicted on the obverse, while a winged Nike was reproduced on the reverse. On silver tetradrachms, on the other hand, the head of Herakles with lion skin was depicted on the obverse and Zeus seated on a throne on the reverse (Phidian model). Toward the end of his reign there is an assimilation of the ruler with Herakles. The practice, derived from the Eastern world of reproducing the portrait of the ruler on the coin, represents a change with Alexander's coinage. But as if the human figure did not dare to suddenly replace that of the gods, the image is clothed with religious content, through its deification or identification with the deity. Even after his death for a long time Tetradrachms with the effigy of Alexander continued to be issued by his successors. The Macedonian king had the possibility to exploit for his coinage a large amount of precious metal from the vast empire he had conquered. The extremely rich mines scattered throughout this territory also made his successors self-sufficient. The coin from that time became a symbol of the ruler's power and absolute authority; no longer protected by the image of deities, it became an instrument of propaganda and power. Condition: Near mint state. Weight: 8.62 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

Among the Greek poleis, Athens is undoubtedly the city that denotes the greatest monetary development. The earliest coinage followed the reforms attributed to Solon on the introduction of Attic weights to replace the Eginetic ones. These early coins, called "Wappenmünzen," were replaced by the "owls" at the end of the 6th century: tetradrachms marked with the head of Athena and the owl, next to which is now the ethnic of the Athenians. These types will last, with variations in style, until the end of silver production (c. mid-1st century). The most noticeable change occurs with the so-called "new style," established from the beginning of the 2nd century BC. In these issues the owl is surrounded by an olive wreath, which is why the tetradrachms are referred to in the inscriptions as "stephanephoroi" (= wreath bearers). Coins of new style also bear inscriptions with the names of magistrates. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 16.65 g. Diameter: 28 mm.

212 ACHAEMENID EMPIRE. Time of Darios I to Xerxes II (Circa 485-420 BC). GOLD Daric. Sardes. Obv: Persian king in kneeling-running stance right, holding spear and bow, with quiver over shoulder. Rev: Rectangular incuse punch. Carradice Type IIIb; GRPC G61; SNG Copenhagen 274-5; Sunrise 24; BMC Arabia 40-3. Although it is believed that the earliest Staters in Lydia are really to be attributed to Kroisos, the most recent series should be dated to the time of Persia's conquest of the region. From the end of the 6th century BC, gold Darics and silver Sigloi appear, marked by the type of the archer king and struck for decades in the mint of Sardis. The name 'Daric' assigned to the Persian gold stater is already found in Herodotus and is mentioned in an Athenian document from 429 BC. These were well known coins in Greek environments, intended to circulate in a huge empire and therefore struck in large quantities. Gold was used by Persian kings as prestige currency, for donations and for large payments, for example to pay Greek mercenaries in their service. This is why many specimens of these staters have been found in Greece and Sicily. The Golden Daric was worth 20 silver Sigloi and corresponded as weight to the value of 1/60th of the Persian mina. The king, connoted as a warrior and hunter, is depicted first with a bow and arrows, then while shooting a bow, and finally with a bow and sword. The date of the beginning of the coinage of the Darics and Sigloi is provided by a clay tablet from Persepolis, dated to about 500 BC, on which the image of the ruler while shooting with a bow is imprinted. This type continued to be reproduced until the end of the dynasty, when Darios III was defeated by Alexander the Great in 330 BC. Condition: Good fine. Weight: 8.38 g. Diameter: 15 mm.

Theos Magas is a deity honored in some Greek cities of Pontus and especially in Odessos, appearing on many of its coins. The numismatic record presents the earliest iconographic evidence of this god (from the 2nd century BC), usually represented standing, bearded, wrapped in himation, while holding a patera and cornucopia. The rarer epithet 'Derzelas' or 'Darzelas' appears later, beginning with the coins of Gordian III, in connection with the 'Darzaleia' festivals celebrated in honor of the deity and commemorated on the reverse of this piece. Rev: TI CAESAR DIVI AVG F AVGVST P M TR POT XXIII. Legend around large S • C. RIC² 48. In AD 17, a powerful earthquake struck Asia Minor, wiping out twelve cities. Faced with this tragedy and deeply shocked, Tiberius took immediate action for aid and reconstruction. According to Tacitus, the emperor promised 10 million sestertii to the inhabitants of Sardis and exempted them from payments due to the treasury and the taxes. Similar measures were taken for Magnesia on Sipylum, Temnos, Philadelphia, Aegae, Apollonia, Mostene, Hierocaesarea, Mirina, Cyme, and Tmolus. Titus Flavius Vespasianus, was one of the most highly appreciated figures of ancient Rome, known for his brief but significant reign between AD 79 and 81. He came to the throne upon the death of his father Vespasian, at the height of the 'Pax Romana', and was able to distinguish himself by a leadership style marked by benevolence, compassion, and a sense of responsibility to the people. His commitment to the welfare of the citizens was evident early on: he reduced taxes, forgave some debts, and was actively involved in the reconstruction of Rome after the eruption of Vesuvius, which had destroyed Pompeii and Herculaneum in the very year of his ascension. His administrative and economic reforms sought not only to stabilize the empire but also to improve its quality of life. Titus also showed great concern for cities in economic distress, to which he provided concrete aid. In addition to his social policy, Titus championed major public works, most notably the construction of the Colosseum, the most famous Roman amphitheater. Its inauguration in AD 80 was celebrated with shows and games that lasted 100 days, including gladiators, hunts and naval battles, demonstrating his desire to provide entertainment and strengthen the sense of unity among the peoples of the Empire. From a military point of view, Titus was an experienced commander. He led the successful siege of Jerusalem in AD 70, during the Jewish War, and also intervened in Britain, consolidating the stability of the imperial borders. These victories contributed to his reputation as a capable leader, both in battle and in domestic politics. However, his reign was not without difficulties. He faced natural disasters and occasional tensions with the Senate, which struggled to accept the increasing centralization of imperial power. Some criticism also came to him for the pomp of the festivities at the Colosseum, at a time when many citizens were still dealing with the aftermath of the eruption. On a personal level, Titus was loved for his affable character. Raised in a family of military tradition, he received a thorough cultural education and developed a cultured and refined personality. He was briefly married to Marcia Furnilla, by whom he had a daughter, Julia Flavia, and had a relationship with Queen Berenice of Judea, which, however, never resulted in marriage. He loved art, culture and sumptuous living, elements that humanized his figure even in his imperial guise. He died

Trajan and Hadrian standing facing each other, clasping right hands. RIC² 3. Hadrian's father died when he was only ten years old, so the future emperor Trajan was appointed his tutor. In 100, Hadrian married Vibia Sabina, the emperor's grandniece. He then followed the cursus honorum and became governor of Syria in 117, when Trajan died. At the time of the emperor's death, Hadrian was not only one of his closest and most eligible relatives, but he was also not far away. It was Plotina, Trajan's wife, who wanted to adopt Hadrian. It is unclear what happened when Trajan died, having fallen ill in Cilicia during the campaign against the Parthians. Hadrian's adoption, according to the historian Cassius Dio, was announced to the Roman Senate with a false letter from Trajan, actually written by Plotina. Hadrian however kept both women close and allowed Matidia to assist him until she died in 119 AD. At her death the emperor granted her a touching eulogy and organised spectacular gladiatorial games, and finally deified her by having a temple built in Rome. The reverse of this Denarius celebrates Hadrian's accession to the throne, showing the handover from Trajan, who is clasping his hand and implying that the former emperor himself had approved this succession. RIC² 586; Calicó 1314. Hadrian was born in Italica or Rome in 76 AD to an influential family; his grandfather had been a member of the senate. Having soon been orphaned, Hadrian was entrusted to his cousin Trajan, who acted as his tutor and granted him in marriage one of his great-granddaughters, Sabina, in 100 AD. It was therefore quite natural that on Trajan's death Hadrian should succeed him, although he had never adopted him. In fact at the prince's death the senate received letters from Trajan mentioning Hadrian's adoption, but according to Cassius Dio they were signed by his widow Plotina. Probably Lucius Licinius Sura, his future and greatest general, also made great efforts for Trajan to consider Hadrian's candidacy. Hadrian is remembered as a literate monarch, a lover of Greek letters and neosophistic philosophy. The new emperor had a very different political conception from that of his predecessor, beginning with the renouncing of the expansionism so much desired by Trajan in order to focus more on the defense of imperial borders, as evidenced by the construction of Hadrian's Wall. His reign was also marked by the travels he embarked on between 121 and 132, a way of learning about and expressing respect for every corner of the empire. Indeed, he visited numerous regions and garrisons, reserving special interest for the armies and the discipline of the soldiers. Despite his efforts to avoid any armed conflict, Hadrian had to deal with a Jewish revolt that erupted because he had renamed Jerusalem as the Colonia Aelia Capitolina, after his family name, for having a temple dedicated to Jupiter Capitolinus erected there and for forbidding circumcision, a custom he perceived as barbaric, despite not being hostile to Judaism. The revolt was very bloody and led by Simon bar Kochba, who lost his life in the last battle. In internal politics Hadrian gave his best, eliminating unnecessary expenses and undertaking magnificent public works, not only in Rome. He also asked his jurists to collect all edicts that would ensure greater justice for the weaker, but went to the disadvantage of the Senate, which responded with conspiracies. Hadrian managed to escape these attempts and sent all the conspirators to death, earning himself a very bad reputation. For this he publicly apologized and engaged in a series of food concessions to the people, forgave a huge amount of debt, and promised not to use any more violence against the senators. Promise that he did not Hadrian celebrated the anniversary of the founding of Rome on April 21, AD 121. That day commemorated Romulus' demarcation of the city's sacred enclosure: the pomerium. For the occasion, the emperor ordered the signs and 'cippi' that delimited it to be restored. According to Roman tradition, the area of the city of Rome could only be increased by rulers who added new provinces to the empire. But this was not the case with Hadrian, who merely reinforced the established boundaries and considered the time for expansion to be over. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 2.96 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

Indeed, he visited numerous regions and garrisons, reserving special interest for the armies and the discipline of the soldiers. He treated the provinces not as lands to be exploited but to be enriched with cities, monuments and defenses on the frontiers, improving the road system and administration. In Egypt Hadrian built Antinoopolis, with a magnificent temple and a new cult dedicated to Antinous. Condition: Good fine. Weight: 3.20 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

Fides standing left, holding signum and transverse sceptre. RIC 7; Calicò 3196. Rare Born to a daughter of Gordian I, sister of Gordian II, because of the young age at which he came to occupy the throne (13), Gordian did not rule directly, but the Senate did so for him. Gordian had become prince because the Senate needed to placate an uprising of the traditionalist urban plebs, bound to the dynastic ideal, and in order to take advantage of his family's wealth. Moreover, the praetorians had acclaimed him emperor just to show the Senate that they were the ones who decided who to put on the throne. Among the first moves was the dismissal of the legion in Africa because it had supported Capellianus and led to the deaths of Gordian I and II, who were deified. During his relatively long tenure there were several problems to deal with. In 240 Sabinianus, elected caesar in Carthage, prepared to make war on him, but was stopped by the governor of Mauretania. In the north the barbarians were making constant raids and sacking villages and towns. Gordian was too young to face these problems, but fortunately for him he could count on the diplomatic and military skill of Timesitheus, who had become prefect of the praetorium and granted him his daughter, Tranquillina, in marriage in 241. Rome succeeded in repelling the Persians of Shapur I in 243 thanks to Timesitheus, but on his death he was replaced as prefect of the praetorium by Marcus Julius Philip known as 'the Arab'. The latter, however, was not satisfied with this title but aimed at the throne, and he convinced the army that they needed an adult prince and not a boy. Gordian showed maturity and offered to cede the throne to Philip and become his caesar, but he was killed in 244. The Senate was informed that he had died of wounds sustained in a battle against the Persians. His body was sent to Rome where he was deified. Condition: Near mint state. Weight: 5.19 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

Hands Upside Down - Engraver's Error Marius was emperor in Gaul for a short period in AD 269. He is listed among the Thirty Tyrants in the Historia Augusta. It seems that Marius was elected by the soldiers who had killed his predecessor Postumus, because he had not allowed them to sack the newly conquered city of Mogontiacum (Mainz). Marius allowed the soldiers to loot in Mogontiacum, then moved the capital to Augusta Treverorum (Trier) as evidence of mints active there, such as the one in Mogontiacum which was probably moved to Colonia. After a few months of reign he was assassinated, the reason is not known. According to a late tradition, he was a blacksmith who made a rapid career in the Roman army, becoming an officer. After the death of Postumus, he held power for perhaps two or three days before being killed by a sword of his own making. But the story is unreliable because from the number of coins he minted, he must have reigned for at least twelve months. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 2.15 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

Valens standing facing, head right, holding labarum with cross and victoriola. RIC 2d.xxix; Depeyrot 27/3. Flavius Julius Valens was the younger brother of Valentinian I. After serving as protector domesticus (personal guard) of Julian II and Jovian, he immediately became emperor of the East in 364 thanks to his brother who was already Augustus of the West, although the two differed in faith. Valens in fact was an Arian, while Valentinian was a Nicene Christian. The first problem was presented by the usurper Procopius, comes of Antioch, who proclaimed himself Augustus of the East in 365. Valens defeated him, sentenced him to death and struck with damnatio memoriae. He later faced the Visigoths and a second conspiracy, hatched by Theodore of Antioch. In 374 Valens celebrated the decennalia and became Maximus Augustus in 375 on the death of his brother, after which he organized an expedition against the Persians that proved unsuccessful, forcing him to sign an unfavorable peace. Another problem was the confluence of Ostrogoths and Visigoths into Roman territory across the Danube because of the advance of the Huns. The Romans were forced to accept them, but this integration was not easy; the Visigoths felt oppressed and exploited as a labor-power, resulting in an insurrection. Valens, considered a general of little ability by his contemporaries, was thus induced to recruit Goth mercenaries, with the risk that they would end up allied with his enemies. In fact, a large contingent of Visigoths, Ostrogoths, Huns, and Alamanni joined forces to fight the Romans and achieved a decisive victory at Hadrianopolis (Thrace) in 378. The tremendous defeat was caused by Gratian, who was meanwhile on the Western throne and did not arrive in time with his troops. Valens died in the battle but the Goths failed to conquer Constantinople. According to Ambrose, bishop of Mediolanum, the defeat at Hadrianopolis heralded the fall of the empire and the end of the world. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.41 g. Diameter: 22 mm.

729 TIBERIUS III (APSIMAR) (698-705). GOLD Solidus. Constantinople. Obv: D TIBERIVS PE AV. Crowned and cuirassed bust facing, holding spear and shield decorated with horseman motif. Rev: VICTORIA AVGVSTI / CONOB. Cross potent set upon three steps. MIB 1; DOC 1f; Sear 1360. Tiberius III, called Apsimar, was a late Roman usurper of probably Germanic origin who rose to power with the support of the mutinous army against Emperor Leontius. Similar to Phocas, his rise was a classic military enthronement, with the support of the Green faction of Constantinople, enemies of the Blue and critics of Leontius' rule. Despite limited documentation, it is known that Tiberius III maintained a continuity line policy with the Heraclian dynasty, although he did not belong to it, and showed military efficiency. He initiated a counteroffensive in Syria and Asia Minor, achieving moderate successes against the Arabs and initiating a new offensive strategy. In Africa, he adopted a pragmatic strategy: contacts with the Berbers and consolidation of the remaining Byzantine positions, delaying the Arab advance toward Spain for years. The fall of Carthage led to the creation of new "themes" (military provinces): Sicily, Sardinia and probably Calabria, inspired by the eastern administrative model. Sicily became a strategic center, while Sardinia, too isolated, remained vulnerable. In 701 Tiberius III appointed Theophylact as the new exarch of Italy. His arrival was marked by instability: local armies mutinied and besieged Rome, fearing new imperial interference. Pope John VI managed to calm the situation, but Byzantine rule in Italy was evidently fragile. The Lombards of Benevento took advantage of this and in 702 conquered Sora, Arpino and Arce, threatening Rome. Justinian II, the deposed emperor, fled from confinement and found refuge with the Kazari, marrying the Khan's sister (baptized Theodora). After a failed extradition attempt by Tiberius III, he took refuge with the Bulgarians, promising the Khan Tervel entry to Constantinople and the title "Caesar of the Romans." In 705, Justinian II returned with a Bulgarian-Slavic army. With the help of loyalists, he managed to enter the city via an abandoned aqueduct as Tiberius fled. Tiberius III was captured in Bithynia. Taken to Constantinople, he was executed at the hippodrome together with Leontius in front of the crowd. The episode marked the beginning of a harsh purge by Justinian II, who returned to power. The reign of Tiberius III, although born of usurpation, was distinguished by military and administrative competence. He was able to continue the Heraclian legacy in a very difficult context, but was overwhelmed

811 AUSTRIA. Vienna. 6 Kreuzer (1529). Siege coinage. Obv: TVRK BELEGR WIEN 1529. Legend in four lines; leaves in corners. Rev: Four arms of Austria, Castilla, Hungary and Bohemia, around cross. Markl 298. At the beginning of the sixteenth century, the Ottoman Empire was already very vast, but in the West it was not considered a threat. Commercial and military relations with the Turks were intense and peaceful. Sultan Suleiman the Magnificent, ruler of a vast but internally unstable empire due to political and religious tensions, sought to strengthen his position through military campaigns, choosing Hungary as his first target. In 1526, Hungary was easily defeated by the Turks, but they did not immediately occupy it. The West did not intervene: the Pope was more concerned with Luther and Charles V, while Luther himself justified not opposing the Turks. Austria took advantage of the power vacuum in Hungary and installed Ferdinand of Habsburg as king, but the use of violent troops generated hostility. The Turks then supported the deposed King Zapolya to oppose Ferdinand, initiating a long conflict. In 1529, Suleiman besieged Vienna, not to conquer Europe, but to obtain recognition of Zapolya's rule over Hungary. The siege failed due to logistical problems and the onset of winter, but the Turks consolidated their presence in Hungary. A period of intermittent warfare followed, lasting until a provisional peace was signed in 1562. Meanwhile, Austria was abandoned by the Christian West: France allied with Suleiman, while the other European powers were too absorbed in internal religious conflicts to concern themselves with the Hungarian issue, which had by then come to be seen as an internal matter of the Habsburg Empire. Condition: Good very fine. Weight: 3.21 g. Diameter: 22 mm.
