27 SICILY. Entella. Punic Issues. Tetradrachm (Circa 320/15-300 BC). Obv: Head of Arethousa left, wearing grain-ear wreath, triple-pendant earring and pearl necklace; four dolphins around. Rev: Head of horse left; palm tree to right. Jenkins, Punic, 167 (O50/R131); CNP 267; HGC 2, 284. Ex Bourgey Paris (24-25 February 1983), lot 36. The foundation of Entella is traced back to Acestes, son of the river god Krimisos and a Trojan woman or, according to other sources to Prince Elymus, son of Anchises and brother of Aeneas. The city stood on a summit overlooking the Belice valley. Records are scarce until the arrival of the Campanian mercenaries, recruited in 410 BC by the Carthaginians and discharged after the 405 BC treaty, then passed into the pay of Dionysius I of Syracuse. After liberating Dionysius on the island of Ortigia from the Punic siege, the were discharged with rich gifts and settled in various cities on the island. In 404 a group of these mercenaries seized Entella, exterminating the entire male population, and began to mint their own coinage. From then on they implemented a generally pro-Carthaginian policy and, in 398 B.C., were able to stop Syracusan siege attempts with the help of the Punic. The strategic location of the fortress of Entella was coveted for its control of the valley below, and this led to several siege attempts: in 345 it was attacked by the Carthaginians led by General Annon, then in 342 the city was taken by the Syracusans commanded by Timoleon, but in 338 it fell back under Punic influence. During the First Punic War the city was destroyed by the Carthaginians. The “Decrees of Entella,” which were requests for help engraved on bronze slabs, from the inhabitants to neighboring cities, date from this period. In 263 Entella was conquered by the Romans and enjoyed a new period of prosperity until the second century BC when it was abandoned. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 16.78 g. Diameter: 25 mm.

75 KINGS OF MACEDON. Alexander III 'the Great' (336-323 BC). GOLD Stater. Amphipolis. Possibly lifetime issue. Obv: Head of Athena right, wearing crested Corinthian helmet, decorated with serpent. Rev: ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ. Nike standing left, holding wreath and stylis Control: to left, trident head downward. Price 172. Already with Philip II the occupation of the Mount Pangaion region with its rich gold mines had made possible the abundant emission of gold coins, something that until then had been throughout Greece rather rare and linked to extraordinary circumstances or moments of crisis. Alexander, who imposed a single coinage throughout his vast empire, was able to issue States and their fractions in gold, using the Attic weight as the unit of measure. On the Staters the head of the goddess Athena with Corinthian helmet was depicted on the obverse, while a winged Nike was reproduced on the reverse. On silver tetradrachms, on the other hand, the head of Herakles with lion skin was depicted on the obverse and Zeus seated on a throne on the reverse (Phidian model). Toward the end of his reign there is an assimilation of the ruler with Herakles. The practice, derived from the Eastern world of reproducing the portrait of the ruler on the coin, represents a change with Alexander's coinage. But as if the human figure did not dare to suddenly replace that of the gods, the image is clothed with religious content, through its deification or identification with the deity. Even after his death for a long time Tetradrachms with the effigy of Alexander continued to be issued by his successors. The Macedonian king had the possibility to exploit for his coinage a large amount of precious metal from the vast empire he had conquered. The extremely rich mines scattered throughout this territory also made his successors self-sufficient.. The coin from that time became a symbol of the ruler's power and absolute authority; no longer protected by the image of deities, it became an instrument of propaganda and power. Condition: Near extremely fine. Weight: 8.61 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

119 ATTICA. Athens. Tetradrachm (117/6 BC). New Style Coinage. Themisto-, Theopompos and Apollopha-, magistrates. Obv: Head of Athena Parthenos right, wearing triple crested Attic helmet decorated with Pegasos and floral pattern. Rev: A - ΘEMI - ΣT / ΘEO / ΠOM / ΠOΣ / AΠOΛ / ΛOΦA. Owl, with head facing, standing right on overturned amphora; B on amphora; uncertain control below; to right, trophy on prow right; all within wreath. Cf. Thompson 601a-b; HGC 4, 1602. Among the Greek poleis, Athens is undoubtedly the city that denotes the greatest monetary development. The earliest coinage followed the reforms attributed to Solon on the introduction of Attic weights to replace the Eginetic ones. These early coins, called "Wappenmünzen," were replaced by the "owls" at the end of the 6th century: tetradrachms marked with the head of Athena and the owl, next to which is now the ethnic of the Athenians. These types will last, with variations in style, until the end of silver production (c. mid-1st century). The most noticeable change occurs with the so-called "new style," established from the beginning of the 2nd century BC. In these issues the owl is surrounded by an olive wreath, which is why the tetradrachms are referred to in the inscriptions as "stephanephoroi" (= wreath bearers). Coins of new style also bear inscriptions with the names of magistrates. Condition: Near extremely fine. Weight: 16.48 g. Diameter: 29 mm.

Serpent Glycon coiled right; Δ (mark of value) to upper left. Varbanov 296 corr. (obv. legend). Glycon was a snake with a human head worshipped in the city of Abonuteichus in Paphlagonia as the reincarnation of Asklepios. The cult was established during the reign of Antoninus Pius by a certain Alexander of Pella. He used a large tame snake to which he attached a human head made from a painted sheet and horsehair. From the movement of the monster's tongue, Alexander drew very expensive responses for the worshippers. This fraud made him rich and developed into a structured cult, with priests and many followers. Mysteries were even established with sacred representations of the birth of Asklepios, and Glycon even appeared on the gems and coins of Abonuteichus, Pautalia and Nicomedia. Athena standing right, holding spear, feeding from patera a serpent entwined in olive-tree; shield to inner left. RPC IV.1 online 11157 (1 specimen); Ruzicka, Pautalia -. Extremely rare The scene depicted on the reverse side may refer to the birth of Erichthonius, an Athenian hero with a monstrous appearance. According to the myth, the god Hephaestus was rejected by the virgin goddess Athena and spilled his semen onto the earth (Gaia), giving rise to Erichthonius, who was born with snakes in place of his feet or with an entire serpent’s body. Athena decided to raise him in secret, entrusting him to the daughters of Cecrops (king of Athens) and strictly ordering them never to open it. But the girls, driven by curiosity, disobeyed and were killed by the snakes. Left alone with the infant, Athena raised and nurtured him inside her temple on the Acropolis, the Erechtheum. From that moment on, the serpent became an inseparable sacred symbol of the goddess. Once he had grown up, Erichthonius succeeded Cecrops and became king of Athens; he is considered the inventor of the chariot race and the founder of the Panathenaic Games. 234 ASIA MINOR. Uncertain. Augustus (27 BC-14 AD). 'Sestertius'. Obv: AVGVSTVS. Bare head right. Rev: Large CA within wreath. RPC I 2233; RIC² 501. A large and enigmatic series of bronze and brass coins, bearing the portrait of Augustus, is known as the CA coinage. The meaning of “CA” is unclear. It was initially thought to refer to the mint (CesarAugusta in Spain or Caesarea in Judea). Others suggest “Commune Asiae,” “Caesar Augustus,” or “Caesaris autoritate” (the latter being the least likely). RPC has a slight preference for “Caesar Augustus” but does not rule out the other interpretations. These coins circulated in Asia, but also in Cyprus and northern Syria. It is likely that some groups could be attributed to Cyprus and Syria, based on their style, provenance and countermarks. The identification of the mint (or mints), however, is equally debated, primarily due to their widespread circulation and stylistic variety. One hypothesis points to the mint at Ephesus, due to stylistic affinities with contemporary cistophori attributed to Ephesus, but many specimens display a different style. Another stylistic similarity has been proposed with the denarii of Augustus with bull reverse. The question of the mint remains open and difficult to resolve. It is generally accepted that the group dates from between 29 and 19/18 B.C., but this is not based on definitive evidence, rather on stylistic similarities with the cistophori. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 26.23 g. Diameter: 36 mm.

Infant Zeus seated on throne facing, looking left, surrounded by three Corybantes striking shields with swords. RPC VI online 7040; SNG BN 1004; SNG Levante 1033. The Corybantes, initially linked to the Phrygian cult of Cybele, are part of the story of the early days of Zeus' life. Kronos wanted to kill all the children he fathered because an oracle had predicted that one of his newborns, once grown, would sooner or later dethrone him. To prevent this, being immortal themselves and unable to simply kill them, he swallowed them as soon as they were born. For this reason, his wife Rhea, on the advice of her parents, decided to give birth to Zeus in secret on the island of Crete. The Corybantes, described as armed warriors, were tasked with making a terrible noise by incessantly beating their swords on their shields, so that the cries of the newborn would not reach Cronos' ears and reveal Rhea's deception. 288 JUDAEA. Legionary Countermarks. Legio X Fretensis. Ae (Circa 81/2-132/5). Sebaste or Caesarea Maritima. Obv: Laureate head right; 2 c/ms: boar and dolphin surmounted by LXF within rectangular incuse and laureate head right within round incuse. Rev: Blank; c/m: galley within rectangular incuse. Howgego 117, 291 and 410. The Legio X “Fretensis” was created by Emperor Augustus around 40 B.C. to fight Sextus Pompey, son of Pompey the Great, who at that time controlled Sicily, seriously threating Rome’s grain supplies. He chose the number ten in honor of the valiant legion that had served under Caesar years earlier, hoping that this legion would repeat its achievements. During the conflict against Pompey, Legio X defended the Strait of Messina, taking part in the Battle of Mylae and the Battle of Naulochus in 36 B.C.; from the Latin name of the strait, Fretum Siculum, the legion derived its cognomen “Fretensis,” thus becoming a Sicilian legion, and its symbol was the boar. After being transferred to the East, the X Fretensis was involved in numerous campaigns: from its deployment in Syria to operations against the Parthians, and ultimately to its central role in the Jewish revolts. During the First Jewish War, it participated in the siege of Jerusalem, distinguishing itself in the use of siege engines and subsequently becoming the city’s permanent garrison. It was also involved in the conquest of Masada, an episode that remains emblematic of the brutality of the conflict. In the 2nd century, it took part in the Bar Kokhba revolt and, in the following decades, was involved in various skirmishes along the imperial borders. It was not until the late imperial period that it was relocated to Aila, on the Red Sea, where it is still attested at the beginning of the 5th century. The countermarks attributed to Legio X Fretensis appear on numerous bronze coins that circulated between 84/5 and the Bar Kokhba Revolt of 132–135, applied primarily in Sebaste and Jerusalem. Condition: Coin poor, c/ms very fine. Weight: 11.83 g. Diameter: 26 mm.

346 L. TITURIUS L.F. SABINUS. Denarius (89 BC). Rome. Obv: SABIN. Bareheaded and bearded head of King Tatius right; monogram to right. Rev: L TITVRI. Two soldiers, facing each other, each carrying off a Sabine woman in his arms. Crawford 344/1a; RBW -. The episode of the Rape of the Sabine Women is recounted by Livy and Plutarch. According to legend, among the many problems faced by the Romans was a shortage of women. Therefore, in order to ensure the future of the Roman race, various alliances were formed with the aim of finding a way to bring women from neighboring populations to Rome. One of the populations involved was that of the Sabines, who rejected the Roman proposal. Romulus and his companions then took advantage of the games in honor of the god Consus to invite the Sabines and kidnap the women, thus starting the war. But faced with the fact that their Sabine relatives and those who had meanwhile become their Roman husbands could be killed in battle, the women began to beg for an end to the massacre. As a result, what became known as the Rape of the Sabine Women led to a situation of peace and prosperity for the two peoples. Condition: Good fine. Weight: 3.67 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

Tarpeia facing, buried to her waist in shields, with raised hands she tries to thrust of two soldiers who are about to cast their shields at her; star in crescent above. Crawford 344/2b; RBW 1301. After the abduction of their women, the Sabines, led by King Titus Tatius (depicted on the obverse), managed to take possession of the Capitoline Hill thanks to the betrayal of Tarpeia, who opened the gates of the citadel to them. There are two versions of this myth, told by Propertius and Livy. The former presents the vestal virgin's betrayal as a consequence of her love for the king of the Sabines. According to Livy, however, Tarpeia was bribed by the enemy's gold: when she went outside the walls to draw water for the cult of Vesta, she was captured and punished for her behavior, ending up buried and crushed by the Sabine shields as illustrated on the reverse of the Denarius. Triumphator, being crowned by Victory flying left, driving quadriga right, holding reins and caduceus. Crawford 367/3; RBW -. Lucius Cornelius Sulla, after an important political career as quaestor during the war against Jugurtha and then as praetor in the Social War of 93 BC, led the conquest and destruction of Stabiae and the siege of Nola, achieving several successes. In 88 BC, at the age of fifty, he was elected consul together with Q. Pompeius Rufus and was entrusted with the command of operations against Mithridates VI, king of Pontus. Starting from Phrygia and Mysia, Mithridates also succeeded in subjugating Lycia, Pamphylia, and Ionia. These events had prompted part of the province of Achaea and Athens to rebel against Roman rule. After capturing and killing Manius Aquilius, the Roman general in charge of the legions in that area, the Roman Senate declared war on him. Sulla arrived in Greece and sacked rebellious Athens, then won two important victories against Mithridates at Chaeronea and Orchomenus. Meanwhile, in Rome, an alliance between the equites and the plebeians brought Marius to a position of command and started a civil war. Marius wanted to command the army against Mithridates and convinced the Senate to entrust him with the operation. Sulla then marched on Rome with six legions, violating the sacred boundary of the pomerium, and forced Marius and his followers to flee to Africa. Upon the death of Marius and Cinna, a second, even bloodier civil war broke out against the populares and the Italic peoples. Sulla eventually managed to enter Rome and severely punished his opponents and their families. He was elected dictator in 82, when this coin was struck, which shows the celebration of his triumph. Neptune, holding reins and brandishing trident, driving sea-chariot drawn by two hippocamps right; D above. Crawford 399/1a; RBW 1440. Amphitrite, one of the Nereids, was Posidon's official bride, with a role akin to that of Hera to Zeus. She, at first, was not available for marriage and took refuge on the Atlas mountain. But then she was persuaded by a delegation headed by a Dolphin, whose memory Poseidon immortalised in a constellation out of gratitude. Lady of the underwater caves, Amphitrite kept there jewels worthy of the queen of the sea, and generally left her sumptuous flats only to look after the countless and monstrous animals of the ocean depths, subjected to her. The deity depicted on this coin must more properly be identified as Salacia, Neptune's bride, who in Rome was essentially identified with Amphitrite. Condition: Near very fine. Weight: 3.12 g. Thalia standing left, holding comic mask and resting elbow upon column to right. Crawford 410/9b; RBW -. Thalia is one of the nine Muses, daughters of Zeus and Mnemosyne (goddess of memory). Her name means “she who flourishes” or “the flourishing one” and she is the Muse of comedy and idyllic poetry, which appeal to the simplest, most ironic and lively side of humanity. She is often depicted with a comic mask in her hand, symbolizing comic theater, and with an ivy crown, referring to the world of nature and wine. Sometimes she holds a shepherd's crook, representing bucolic poetry. Unlike other more solemn or dramatic Muses, Thalia calls for lightness and smiles. In classical times, those seeking inspiration to write satires or comedies invoked Thalia. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 3.94 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

396 L. MARCIUS PHILIPPUS. Denarius (57 BC). Rome. Obv: ANCVS. Diademed head of Ancus Marcius right; lituus to left. Rev: PHILIPPVS / AQVAM R. Equestrian statue on aqueduct right; flower below statue. Crawford 425/1; RBW 1524. This denarius was issued in 56 BC by L. Marcius Philippus in honor of his ancestor Q. Marcius Rex. On the obverse, the coin depicts the head of the fourth king of Rome, Ancus Marcius, identified by the legend, from whom the Marcia gens claimed to descend and who, according to a legend (reported by Pliny the Elder), was the first to provide an aqueduct to the city. The reverse depicts an equestrian statue (Marcius Rex) placed on an arched structure, clearly identified as an aqueduct by the legend. The aqueduct depicted here was built in 144 BC by Marcius Rex (to whom the statue refers), and supplied water to many areas of Rome. It was over 90 km long and mostly underground. As was common in the Republican period, the designs on both sides are purely propagandistic, aimed at celebrating the gens to which the monetary magistrate belonged, with references to mythical and historical ancestors, legitimizing his personal ambitions. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 4.00 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

RIC² 58 (Caligula). Marcus Vipsanius Agrippa, of modest origins, was one of Augustus' most trusted friends and collaborators. He met Octavian during Caesar's campaign in Macedonia and became his inseparable ally. He played a decisive role in the siege of Perugia (41 BC) against Lucius Antonius. After obtaining the praetorship, he was sent to Gaul, where he quelled revolts and consolidated the borders along the Rhine. Upon his return to Italy, he effectively opposed Sextus Pompey thanks to the creation of the Portus Iulius naval base and a new fleet, defeating him definitively at Naulochos (36 BC). He took part in the war against Antony and Cleopatra, achieving a great naval victory at Actium (31 BC), which marked the end of the civil wars. He remained loyal to Augustus, never claiming personal honors. After the death of the young Marcellus, Agrippa married Julia, daughter of Augustus, thus joining the imperial family. He obtained proconsular powers and tribunician authority, effectively becoming the emperor's colleague. He also handled important matters in the Roman East: he pacified Pontus, supported Herod in Judea, founded colonies, and strengthened Roman influence. As aedile (35 BC), he transformed Rome by building aqueducts, baths, the Pantheon, the Saepta Iulia, the Pons Agrippae, and the Porticus Vipsania, which housed a map of the empire. He died in 12 BC at the age of 51. Although ill, he served Rome until the end. He played a key role in consolidating the Roman Empire, combining military, administrative, and cultural skills. His loyalty to Augustus and his renunciation of personal power ensured the stability of the rising Empire. His appearance has been handed down to us mainly through idealized portraits on coins, as well as the colossal statue that adorned the entrance to the Pantheon, now preserved in Venice. 531 JULIA TITI (Augusta, 79-90/1). Denarius. Rome. Obv: IVLIA AVGVSTA TITI AVGVSTI F. Draped bust right. Rev: VENVS AVGVST. Venus standing right, back facing, leaning upon column to left, holding helmet and sceptre. RIC² 388 (Titus). Flavia Julia Augusta, known as Iulia Titi, was the only daughter of Emperor Titus and his second wife Marcia Furnilla. Very little is known about her, except that when she was still a child she was presented as the future successor of the Flavian dynasty, since her father, after his second divorce, had not taken another wife and the other women of the family (Domitilla Major and Domitilla Minor) had already died. When Titus came to power, Julia was given the title of Augusta, which was usually attributed to the emperor's wife. Titus proposed to his brother Domitian to marry Julia, but Domitian refused because he was in love with Domitia Longina. Julia therefore married her cousin, Titus Flavius Sabinus. Upon the death of his father (AD 81), Domitian became emperor and, after repudiating Domitia on suspicion of adultery, it seems that he began a relationship with Julia and had Sabinus killed. Julia died in abortion in 90, precluding her from providing an heir to the emperor. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 3.41 g. Diameter: 20 mm.

Dacian seated right on shield in attitude of mourning; curved Dacian sword below. Woytek 189b; RIC 218. The falx or rhomphaia was a one- or two-handed cutting weapon adopted by the Dacians in the 4th century. This type of sword forced the Romans to partially revise their equipment, especially during Trajan's campaigns in Dacia at the beginning of the 2nd century. The soldiers adopted segmented sleeves and reinforced helmet visors to defend themselves from the cutting blows inflicted by the falx. Examples of this weapon can be seen on coins and on Trajan's Column. Condition: Uncirculated. Weight: 3.34 g. Diameter: 18 mm.

The reverse side of this sestertius refers to Trajan's conquest of Dacia. Despite the lack of money in the imperial treasury, Trajan managed to arm and supply an army to avenge the defeats suffered by Domitian. The aim was to conquer a territory rich in gold and silver mines to meet Rome's financial needs and limit the growing power of Decebalus along the imperial borders. Trajan had 150,000 soldiers at his disposal, including legionaries and auxiliaries, and led them across the Danube in 101, winning a crushing victory at the Battle of Tapae and forcing Decebalus to accept a restrictive peace treaty in 102. The second war (105-106) was triggered when Decebalus violated the agreements, pushing Trajan to attempt total conquest. The Romans built the famous Apollodorus Bridge over the Danube, captured the capital Sarmizegetusa Regia, and Decebalus committed suicide to avoid capture. Dacia became a Roman province and Trajan celebrated his victory by erecting the famous Trajan's Column. The reverse side of this sestertius shows a depiction of subjugated Dacia and the trophy commemorating the victory and the enormous spoils conquered and brought to Rome. Trajan was remembered as “Optimus Princeps,” meaning the best emperor Rome had ever known. Condition: Near extremely fine. Weight: 26.53 g. Diameter: 35 mm.

Trajan's Column: column surmounted by statue of Trajan left, with patera and sceptre, and set upon podium decorated with eagles. Woytek 425b; RIC 293. Trajan's Column, designed by the architect Apollodorus of Damascus, was inaugurated in 113 AD in Trajan's Forum to commemorate his victories in Dacia. It is one of the finest examples of Roman art that can still be admired today. The magnificent frieze, which winds its way upward along the entire shaft of the column, consists of a sequence of reliefs 180 meters long, featuring approximately 2,000 figures. The emperor appears in about 60 scenes depicting Trajan’s two military campaigns against the Dacians, led between 101-102 and 105-106 AD. The monument, made of Parian marble, rises 42 meters high. Originally, a statue of an eagle stood atop the column, but after Trajan’s death, it was replaced with a six-meter-tall gilded bronze statue of the emperor himself. His ashes and those of his wife Plotina were placed in the burial chamber at the base of the column. Condition: Near extremely fine. Weight: 3.42 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

The falx or rhomphaia was a one- or two-handed cutting weapon adopted by the Dacians in the 4th century. This type of sword forced the Romans to partially revise their equipment, especially during Trajan's campaigns in Dacia at the beginning of the 2nd century. The soldiers adopted segmented sleeves and reinforced helmet visors to defend themselves from the cutting blows inflicted by the falx. Examples of this weapon can be seen on coins and on Trajan's Column. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 11.72 g. Diameter: 27 mm.

727 PESCENNIUS NIGER (193-194). Denarius. Antioch. Obv: IMP CAES C PESC NIGER IVST AV. Laureate head right. Rev: INVICTO IMPERAT. Trophy with arms at base. RIC 34a. Pescennius Niger came from a family of equestrian rank, probably from Aquinum. He joined the Senate in 180, was suffect consul, and in 183 fought against the barbarians in Dacia. In 188, Emperor Commodus sent him to Gaul against the bands of deserters commanded by Maternus, then entrusted him with the government of Syria. On hearing of the death of Commodus and then Pertinax, Pescennius had himself proclaimed emperor in Antioch (April 193). In fact, it seems that the Roman people had acclaimed him during the brief principality of Didius Julianus, considered by them to be the murderer of Pertinax, during the games in the Circus Maximus. He obtained recognition from the provinces of Asia Minor, the East, Egypt, and the king of the Parthians, while Armenia remained neutral. Meanwhile, in the West, power was seized by Septimius Severus, who was recognized by the Senate. Pescennius, with nine legions, undertook to defend Asia and went to Byzantium, which supported him. Here he was besieged by Septimius' troops, commanded by L. Marius Maximus Perpetuus. Septimius' army also obtained important victories at Cyzicus and Nicaea. This cost Pescennius the loss of Asia Minor and Egypt, also giving rise to rebellions in Arabia, Syria, and Palestine. The decisive battle took place at Issus, where Pescennius was severely defeated and forced to flee to Antioch, from where he tried to reach the king of the Parthians, but was killed in 194. The coins of Pescennius Niger have always been among the most desired by collectors, as evidenced by numerous accounts dating back to the 17th century, which considered his issues to be among the rarest and most prized. Quadriga right bearing stone of Emesa; four parasols around. RIC 195. Varus Avitus Bassianus, son of Julia Soemia, besides being emperor was a priest of the sun god El-Gabal of Emesa, current Homs in Syria. In 218, thanks to the clever machinations of his grandmother Julia Maesa and the large sums of money she paid to the soldiers, Bassianus was appointed emperor under the name Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, the same as Caracalla. This was not a random choice, for the late prince was very dear to the hearts of his soldiers and, more generally, the Antonine name was well liked by the Romans. Of course, Bassianus would have had no right to bear it if the wily Mesa had not spread the false rumor that he was Caracalla's son. According to the senatorial literature, ill-disposed toward authoritarian rulers, Bassianus was the worst emperor Rome had ever had. His biography, written by Aelius Lampridius, which describes him as the most vicious and perverse emperor ever, is certainly exaggerated. Bassianus, however, was unable to integrate himself into Rome and imposed his lifestyle and absolutist conception of power. As high priest of the god El-Gabal, he tried to impose his cult on Rome, claiming to put him in the place of Jupiter and going so far as to celebrate the divine wedding between the god and Minerva. El-Gabal was represented as a black cone, most likely a meteorite. Rome was forced to accommodate that cult and build for El-Gabal a sumptuous temple on the Palatine, the Elagabalium. It was because of this inconvenient cult that Bassianus was called "Elagabalus" by all. According to the historian Herodian, during the festival in honor of El-Gabal, the emperor as a priest had the statue of the god placed on a chariot of gold and precious stones and, with the help of white horses, led it forward on foot and holding the reins, as if the god himself were driving the chariot. The chariot was preceded by horsemen and soldiers during the procession, while the people threw garlands and flowers. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 2.53 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

Jupiter standing facing, head right, holding sceptre and thunderbolt. RIC 99; Calicó 3200. Born to a daughter of Gordian I, sister of Gordian II, because of the young age at which he came to occupy the throne (13), Gordian did not rule directly, but the Senate did so for him. Gordian had become prince because the Senate needed to placate an uprising of the traditionalist urban plebs, bound to the dynastic ideal, and in order to take advantage of his family's wealth. Moreover, the praetorians had acclaimed him emperor just to show the Senate that they were the ones who decided who to put on the throne. Among the first moves was the dismissal of the legion in Africa because it had supported Capellianus and led to the deaths of Gordian I and II, who were deified. During his relatively long tenure there were several problems to deal with. In 240 Sabinianus, elected caesar in Carthage, prepared to make war on him, but was stopped by the governor of Mauretania. In the north the barbarians were making constant raids and sacking villages and towns. Gordian was too young to face these problems, but fortunately for him he could count on the diplomatic and military skill of Timesitheus, who had become prefect of the praetorium and granted him his daughter, Tranquillina, in marriage in 241. Rome succeeded in repelling the Persians of Shapur I in 243 thanks to Timesitheus, but on his death he was replaced as prefect of the praetorium by Marcus Julius Philip known as 'the Arab'. The latter, however, was not satisfied with this title but aimed at the throne, and he convinced the army that they needed an adult prince and not a boy. Gordian showed maturity and offered to cede the throne to Philip and become his caesar, but he was killed in 244. The Senate was informed that he had died of wounds sustained in a battle against the Persians. His body was sent to Rome where he was deified. Condition: Extremely fine; some luster in field. Weight: 5.00 g. Diameter: 21 mm.

Felicitas standing left, holding caduceus and cornucopia. RIC 115a. The Double Sestertius, a large coin made of orichalcum, was first struck by Decius in response to the inflation of the time, which had devalued the purchasing power of the Sestertius. Decius was born in Pannonia near Sirmium, his mother descended from an ancient and noble Italic family. He had an excellent military career, becoming prefect of Rome and commander in Moesia and Pannonia, where he obtained an important victory against the Goths who threatened the Danube border. The soldiers acclaimed him emperor in 249, triggering the reaction of Philip I, who was defeated near Verona. The Senate welcomed him with great honors and gave him the name ‘Trajan’, perhaps in the hope that the emperor would be friendly and respectful towards Roman institutions. Decius did not betray the Senate's expectations and committed himself to safeguarding the traditions of the empire and strengthening it. He launched a heavy persecution of Christians, driven in part by the empire's difficult financial situation, with the aim of seizing their considerable assets. Decius' primary goal of reviving the ancient glories of Rome also led him to undertake important public works, such as repairing roads and defending the territories conquered by the first emperor Trajan. However, his plan to rebuild and restore the empire was stopped by a new attack from the Goths in 251, who had regrouped and were once again threatening the empire. The decisive battle took place near Abritus, close to the Black Sea, where Decius and his son Herennius, who had recently been named Caesar and Princeps Iuventutis, died. Despite the brevity of his reign, Trajan Decius minted a considerable amount of coins. Although he continued to strike the Sestertius in abundance and reintroduced the Semis, he continued the policy of significantly reducing the weight of all denominations. During his reign, the denarius was no longer minted, while the Antoninianus was now the most widely circulated coin but no longer had the characteristics of a silver coin of good quality. Roman coinage increasingly consolidated its fiduciary character, no longer linked to the value of the metal it contained. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 50.20 g. Diameter: 38 mm.

882 MARIUS (269). Antoninianus. Colonia Agrippinensis. Obv: IMP C M AVR MARIVS AVG. Radiate, draped and cuirassed bust right. Rev: VICTORIA AVG. Victory advancing right, holding wreath and palm frond. RIC² 490. Marius was emperor in Gaul for a short period in AD 269. He is listed among the Thirty Tyrants in the Historia Augusta. It seems that Marius was elected by the soldiers who had killed his predecessor Postumus, because he had not allowed them to sack the newly conquered city of Magontiacum (Mainz). Marius allowed the soldiers to loot in Moguntiacum, then moved the capital to Augusta Treverorum (Trier) as evidence of mints active there, such as the one in Moguntiacum which was probably moved to Colonia. After a few months of reign he was assassinated, the reason is not known. According to a late tradition, he was a blacksmith who made a rapid career in the Roman army, becoming an officer. After the death of Postumus, he held power for perhaps two or three days before being killed by a sword of his own making. But the story is unreliable because from the number of coins he minted, he must have reigned for at least twelve months. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 3.25 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

Victory advancing left, holding wreath and palm frond. RIC 5. There is little information on Marcus Aurelius Sabinus Julianus, known as Julian of Pannonia. It has been speculated that more than one usurper bore this name, but at least one is confirmed by coins. According to the most widely accepted version, upon the death of Emperor Numerian in 284, who was involved in defending the empire's eastern frontier, Julian revolted in Pannonia, having served as governor (corrector) in northern Italy. Coins minted in his name and bearing the mint-mark of Siscia refer to the Pannonian provinces, and are compatible with this version. Condition: Very fine; traces of silvering. Weight: 4.11 g. 993 FAUSTA (As nobilissima femina, 307-324). Follis. Thessalonica. Obv: FAVSTA N F. Draped bust right. Rev: Eight-rayed star within laurel wreath. RIC 51. Ex Emporium Hamburg (02/06/2000), lot 466. Fausta, born around 289-290, was the daughter of Emperor Maximianus Herculius and Eutropia, and thus a member of one of the most influential families of the Tetrarchic era. Her marriage to Constantine I in 307 was not a romantic union but a political arrangement: it served to consolidate the alliance between Constantine and the Tetrarchic system, and to further legitimize his position in the complex power dynamics of the time. Young and intelligent, Fausta soon found herself at the centre of family tensions and dynastic struggles. In 310, she revealed to Constantine the plot involving her father Maximian, saving her husband’s life and indirectly contributing to the downfall of her own father. Two years later, in 312, she witnessed the defeat of her brother Maxentius at the Battle of Milvian Bridge: his death definitively marked the triumph of the new Constantinian dynasty. As the emperor’s wife, Fausta received the prestigious title of 'nobilissima femina' (as attested by the obverse legend of this coin), reserved for women of imperial rank. After Constantine’s victory over Licinius (324-325), she obtained the title of Augusta. Her fertility further strengthened her position; she had three sons who were destined to become emperors (Constantine II, Constantius II, and Constans I) and two daughters. The year 326 marked Fausta’s downfall. Ancient sources, often contradictory, tell a story of suspicion, accusations and tragedy. According to one version, Fausta accused her stepson Crispus (son of Minervina, Constantine’s first wife) of attempting to seduce her or of plotting against his father. Constantine, believing her, had Crispus executed. Shortly afterward, perhaps overcome by remorse or convinced of his son’s innocence, Constantine had Fausta killed, according to tradition, in a cruel manner: suffocated or killed in the baths, in boiling water. The motives remain unclear. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 2.78 g. Diameter: 19 mm.

Legend in four lines within wreath with star in central medallion. RIC 16. Rare With the famous Battle of Mursa in 351 Constantius II inflicted a severe defeat on Magnentius, who two years later killed himself along with his brother Decentius, caesar of the West. This marked the beginning of a united kingdom for the winner, who at that point needed a caesar with a view to dynastic succession. Constantius appointed his cousin Constantius Gallus, who married Constantina, sister of the emperor and widow of Hannibalianus. Constantius Gallus was an able general who had brought down several Persian revolts. He had made himself hated not so much for his despotic ways as for his pro-poor monetary policy, in contrast to that initiated by Constantine and continued by Constantius II in favor of gold coinage and the wealthier classes. This led to his eventual assassination by a conspiracy of the Antioch aristocracy and his 'damnatio memoriae'. In his place in 355 Constantius II appointed Julian, who was destined to become emperor with the appellation “Apostate”. Condition: Near mint state. Weight: 2.89 g. Diameter: 22 mm.

1067 VALENS (364-378). GOLD Solidus. Antioch. Obv: D N VALENS PER F AVG. Pearl-diademed, draped and cuirassed bust right. Rev: RESTITVTOR REIPVBLICAE / •ANTϴ•. Emperor standing facing, head right, holding standard with cross and victoriola. RIC 2d.xxv(4). Flavius Julius Valens was the younger brother of Valentinian I. After serving as protector domesticus (personal guard) of Julian II and Jovian, he immediately became emperor of the East in 364 thanks to his brother who was already Augustus of the West, although the two differed in faith. Valens in fact was an Arian, while Valentinian was a Nicene Christian. The first problem was presented by the usurper Procopius, comes of Antioch, who proclaimed himself Augustus of the East in 365. Valens defeated him, sentenced him to death and struck with damnatio memoriae. He later faced the Visigoths and a second conspiracy, hatched by Theodore of Antioch. In 374 Valens celebrated the decennalia and became Maximus Augustus in 375 on the death of his brother, after which he organized an expedition against the Persians that proved unsuccessful, forcing him to sign an unfavorable peace. Another problem was the confluence of Ostrogoths and Visigoths into Roman territory across the Danube because of the advance of the Huns. The Romans were forced to accept them, but this integration was not easy; the Visigoths felt oppressed and exploited as a labor-power, resulting in an insurrection. Valens, considered a general of little ability by his contemporaries, was thus induced to recruit Goth mercenaries, with the risk that they would end up allied with his enemies. In fact, a large contingent of Visigoths, Ostrogoths, Huns, and Alamanni joined forces to fight the Romans and achieved a decisive victory at Hadrianopolis (Thrace) in 378. The tremendous defeat was caused by Gratian, who was meanwhile on the Western throne and did not arrive in time with his troops. Valens died in the battle but the Goths failed to conquer Constantinople. According to Ambrose, bishop of Mediolanum, the defeat at Hadrianopolis heralded the fall of the empire and the end of the world. Condition: Extremely fine; partially tooled. Weight: 4.40 g. Constantinopolis seated facing on throne, head right, with foot set upon prow and holding sceptre and shield inscribed VOT / X / MVLT / XV. RIC 71b.5; Depeyrot 47/1. Theodosius I, called "the Great" by Christian writers, was of Spanish origin. His father was a magister equitum who fell into disgrace under Valentinian I and was later executed by Gratian. However, Theodosius' military exploits in Britain against the Alamanni and Sarmati, and in Africa against the usurper Firmus, induced Gratian to elevate him to the rank of Augustus of the East in 379, to give him control of Thrace, Dacia and Macedonia. Theodosius managed to prevent another war against the Huns and Visigoths by signing an agreement in 382, allowing them to settle in Thrace on condition that they fight for him. The need to pay these mercenaries caused a considerable tax increase for the Romans, but it proved to be a successful move. Upon Gratian's death, the usurper of Britain, Magnus Maximus, marched into Italy and threatened the throne of Valentinian II. Theodosius married Valentinian II's sister, Galla, and succeeded in defeating Magnus Maximus in 388 with troops from the Visigoths and Huns. Another threat, however, was posed by Arbogaste, a Frankish general, who was able to put Eugenius on the Western throne instead of Valentinian II. Theodosius refused to recognize his position and appointed his son, Honorius, as Augustus of the West, inducing Eugenius to invade Italy and start a war. Eugenius and Arbogaste were defeated at the Frigidus River in 394, and Theodosius became sole Augustus of the entire empire, but he died shortly thereafter in Mediolanum. His funeral was celebrated by Bishop Ambrose, and the body was transported to Constantinople, where the consecratio took place. Theodosius is remembered as a fervent believer in the Nicene faith and for issuing the Edict of Thessalonica, by which he attempted to end theological disputes. He also made Christianity the sole state religion in 380, declaring Arians and devotees of other movements heretics. In 392 he banned the pagan religion. Condition: Extremely fine. Weight: 4.33 g. Roma seated facing on throne, head left, holding globus and spear. RIC 19b. Flavius Victor was the son of the Hispano-Roman general Magnus Maximus, who was proclaimed emperor by the troops stationed in Britain in 383, who were unhappy with Gratian. Maximus, an ambitious and capable figure, quickly succeeded in consolidating his power in Gaul, Britain and Hispania. He pursued Gratian as he fled to Italy, defeated and killed him, and even secured formal recognition from the Eastern Emperor Theodosius I, who temporarily accepted him as the legitimate ruler of the West. In 384, Magnus Maximus decided to place his son on the throne, proclaiming him Augustus. In the same year, Theodosius officially recognised both Maximus and the young Augustus, thereby establishing a truce between the two halves of the Empire. Although he was only a child, Victor formally held the role of co-emperor of the West, based in Treveri, the administrative capital of Gaul. There he remained under the guardianship of the generals Quintinus and Nanninus, whilst his father led military operations. In 387, Maximus decided to invade Italy to depose Valentinian II, provoking Theodosius's response. The Eastern Emperor marched westwards in 388, defeated Maximus in Pannonia and captured him at Aquileia, where he was executed on 28 August 388. His son's fate was also sealed: Theodosius sent the Frankish general Arbogast to Treveri, who had him killed shortly afterwards, thereby eliminating any potential dynastic rival. 1081 HONORIUS (393-423). GOLD Solidus. Ravenna. Obv: D N HONORIVS P F AVG. Pearl-diademed, draped and cuirassed bust right. Rev: VICTORIA AVGGG / R - V / COMOB. Honorius standing right, with foot upon captive, holding labarum and victoriola. RIC 1321; Ranieri 13; Depeyrot 7/1. Honorius became Augustus of the West at the age of ten at the behest of his father Theodosius I, who was intent on establishing the succession before his death. Given his young age, however, he was assisted by the valiant general Stilicho, who was half Vandal in origin and unlikely to have been aiming for the throne. The East, on the other hand, was entrusted to Honorius's brother Arcadius, and this was home to unrest because the two brothers did not like each other and were both assisted by cunning and manipulative advisers. By now there was no longer talk of a western and eastern part of the empire, but of two separate empires. Theodosius' project of a united empire in solidarity with the barbarian peoples, integrated into the Roman army, had failed. According to some historians Arcadius was the first Byzantine emperor. Stilicho faced great difficulties on the eastern front, mainly due to Alaric's Goths and other tribes crossing into Gaul. The situation precipitated and the Senate refused to pay a large sum of money to Alaric, further accusing Stilicho of conspiring with the enemy and condemning him to death in 408. It was the beginning of the end for the West, because the most valuable politician and general was lost. Honorius resided in Ravenna, where he treacherously attempted to murder Alaric, who was there to renew the 'foedus' with the emperor. This caused him to break off all negotiations and led to the famous 'sack of Rome' in 410, which marked the end of the city as capital. The news of Rome's fall represented a trauma for the empire and the collapse of the certainty of its invincibility. Honorius also did not recognize the marriage between his half-sister Galla Placidia and Ataulf, Alaric's successor. This marriage was strongly desired by the Goths and may have been a response to the crisis in the empire, as Ataulf intended to settle permanently in Roman territories by offering protection to the emperor instead of fighting him. In 413 General Flavius Constantius defeated four usurpers in the western provinces, succeeded in signing a peace treaty with Ataulf, and became associate emperor under the name Constantius III (421) but, unrecognized by the eastern empire, died shortly thereafter. In 423 Honorius also died, marking the final surrender, the birth of the Romano-Barbarian kingdoms and the first steps of medieval history. Condition: Very fine. Weight: 4.42 g. Diameter: 22 mm.

Rev: VICTORIA AVGGG B / CONOB. Victory standing left, holding jeweled cross; star to right. RIC 605 & 630; Depeyrot 93/1. Leo I, born in Thrace in 401, ascended the Eastern throne in 457 largely through the influence of the magister militum Aspar, who expected to dominate imperial policy and eventually secure the succession for one of his sons. Leo, however, soon distanced himself from Aspar’s control. He obstructed the promotion of Patricius, refused a dynastic marriage, and strengthened his position by recruiting Isaurian troops into his personal guard. Their leader, Tarasis, renamed Zeno, cemented this new alliance by marrying Leo’s daughter Ariadne in 466. Under Leo, the Eastern Empire resumed active involvement in Western affairs. Following the deaths of Majorian and Libius Severus, Leo appointed Anthemius as Western emperor and collaborated with him in a major expedition against the Vandal king Geiseric. The campaign collapsed in 468 due to Basiliscus’s mismanagement, resulting in the destruction of the imperial fleet and a severe financial crisis in Constantinople. The failure intensified anti-Germanic sentiment at court. In 471, Leo, supported by the Isaurians, eliminated Aspar and his son Ardabur. Patricius survived but, compromised by his Arian faith and his marriage to Leo’s daughter Leontia, was compelled by Zeno to renounce both his wife and any claim to the throne. Leo died in January 474. His grandson Leo II briefly succeeded him, but his early death left Zeno as sole emperor. Leo’s reign marked a significant institutional development: for the first time, an emperor was crowned by the Patriarch of Constantinople. This act underscored the Eastern Church’s assertion of parity with Rome and inaugurated the medieval practice of treating imperial accession as a religious investiture. Condition: Good very fine.
